The heat wave at the end of May was responsible for some picturesque hot-weather suits in the British House of Commons. The most startling, however, was the garb of Mr. Hugh Law, the Irish Nationalist, and son of a famous judge, who created no small sensation by appearing in a suit of cream silky alpaca, set off by a dark green tie and a sea-green silk handkerchief protruding from the outside breast pocket. The effect was heightened as he leaned back on the green benches by a display of slate-colored socks, not entirely concealed by white spats. No wonder other smart young men about the House glared enviously.

BREAK IN WATER MAIN

Trouble Was Occasioned Early Last Night

Last night at nine o'clock, the city went dry and did so on a comparatively large scale. It is supposed that an embankment gave away, causing a large sixteen inch main to drop and break at one of the joints. The break occurred between the old pumping station and the new one. Mayor Bradburn, Ald. Gillespie and Chief Howard were on the job all the time, and the Mayor felt the responsibility of his position very keenly. Every precaution was taken to safeguard the city against fire. Chief Howard kept his staff of men all night so as to be in readiness and on the jump to answer a call should one be sent in.

Mayor Bradburn and Ald. Gillespie were considering the advisability of sending to Toronto to borrow a chemical engine, but Mr. Mathews, chairman of the Water Commissioners, assured them that the necessary repairs would be completed in about ten hours, consequently it was thought best not to put the city to the expense of getting the engine.

Chief Howard sent a message to the C.P.R. and G.T.R. train despatchers and requested that they instruct their engineers not to take water at the local depot. The C. P. R. depot is very low, thus the little water that it is in the main runs in the main runs in that direction, and if a fire broke out, the only means of protection would be obtained by placing the steam engine at a hydrant and draining the main. If the engines took water in their usual way the main would soon be drained and nothing could be done in case of fire.

For some time the Board of Water Commissioners have had under consideration the question of adding to the main service, to the extent of about $20,000.

The full pressure will likely be turned on during the day.

YOUNG CHILD IS GIVEN TO THE GREY NUNS

Was Found by Police Matron Under Bush

Montreal, Aug. 1.—For the first time in her life Madame J. Albert, police matron, handled a male prisoner yesterday. Madame Albert has handled many "wild and woolly" female prisoners, and has made a name for being able to tame the most unapproachable tigresses, but the male prisoner was so mild that he won her heart completely. He was exactly eleven months' old, had adorable blue eyes, and a mouth that did nothing but coo when the matron was present.

The baby was found under a bush at the corner of St. Patrick and Brien streets yesterday by Constable Sproule of the Monk Boulevard station. He was taken to the police station and left in the hands of the matron. It was apparently the child of rich parents, and was in the best of condition. To its clothes a little note was attached.

Madame Albert kept the baby during the morning and afternoon. In the evening she gave it into the hands of the Grey Nuns.

"I almost wish I could have kept it," she said this morning. "It was the cutest little thing."

The police believe that they have a clue to the whereabouts of the owners of the child.

ADDRESS READ TO MRS. READ

The following is the address presented to Mrs. Read by the Y.W.C.A. house girls:

Dear Mrs. Read— Words fail to express the regret that we, the house girls of the Y.W.C.A., feel at your departure.

During the years that you have been with us, you have been a mother to every girl who came into the house, aiding her in a spiritual as well as a temporal way, and as you leave us you can surely have the feeling that you have been appreciated greatly, not only for the satisfactory manner in which you ministered to our comforts, but also for the warm interest you have taken in us. Many girls coming as strangers to the city have been given a cheery welcome to the "Y" by you, and will not soon forget it.

Now that you are leaving we wish to express our love and gratitude to you by a small token of appreciation and in doing so, wish you success, health and happiness in your new field of labor. May the Lord lift up the light of his countenance upon you. May the Lord bless and keep you and give you peace.

On behalf of the house girls of the Y.W.C.A., Simcoe street.

MET DEATH WHEN STRUCK BY TRAIN

The Late Jas Wilson Was Born in This Vicinity

James Wilson, of Brantford, who was born in this vicinity and lived here for some years, was fatally injured at Welland a Thursday when he was struck by a fast eastbound train and hurled fifty feet. His legs, arms and some ribs were broken and he died in the hospital two hours later.

The late Mr. Wilson, who was a carpenter, was 70 years of age. He leaves a widow, three daughters and five sons.

SUFFRAGETTES HAVE NO PLACE FOR BATHING

Plenty of Water but no Bathing House

With the canoeing, fishing and bathing season in full swing, it has no doubt struck more than one citizen of Peterboro that it is a blow to the fair name the city has acquired through "Peterboro Canoes" that this great municipality of ours has no suitable bathing place for the readers of the Ladies' Home Journal. Perhaps no inland city in the province has a better water front than this city, yet, for the past ten years, the fair sex have clamored in vain for a spot where, on a hot day or warm evening, they could "take a little duck."

Along the Otonabee River, where many citiezns spend the summer, or at least the week ends, the water is anything but suitable for bathing purposes because of the ever present sewer refuse, so no accommodations could be made down there. But there is a long stretch of water from the locks to Auburn so no excuse can be received on the grounds of no suitable place. Along the southwest portion of the Little Lake, are many ideal spots for the water is shallow, there is no current and it is very handy to the street cars.

On the northeast part of Little Lake cemetery, some of the more adventurous of the above named sex often doff their clothes and have a "good sprawl," but this is a little risky, for the kindergarten brigade at the south end would wish for no better fun than hiding the bathers clothes and causing them no small amount of anxiety. If a regular bathing place were built, which by the way, would only cost a trifle the lovers of kaleidoscopic rags could have a lot of amusement and be guarded against "chaw-beefing," which is a common expression for tieing knots in stockings, coat-sleeves, etc.

P.C. SILLS WAS WIDE AWAKE

He Discovered Fire in Rear of Charlotte Street

It was P. C. Sills who discovered the fire in the rear of Charlotte street, early Friday morning and while the night-watchman sent in the alarm, P. C. Sills was endeavoring to extinguish the blaze. In this he was only partly successful on account of the quantity of small pieces of light wood. As he ran to the street to send in the alarm, that act had been accomplished.

This is the report made by P. C. Sills to the Police Chief.

HOWARD ELLIOTT NAMED NEW-HAVEN HEAD.

HOWARD ELLIOTT.

Howard Elliott was elected president of the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad at a meeting of the sub-committee of directors.

This action, which has been foreshadowed, is preparatory to making him chairman of the directors, with power to select his own successor as president. He will be appointed to the new trust just as soon as the necessary changes in the bylaws have been made to create it.

This cannot be until the fourth week in October, when, under the laws of Connecticut, the stockholders will meet and select this official. No election of a chairman may occur before that time.

AMERICAN FLAG TORN FROM GIRLS HANDS IS TRAMPLED BY REGIMENT

Saskatoon, Sask., August 2.—The Saskatoon militia are in a ferment over a flag incident which occurred during the parade of the 105th Fusiliers last night. When the parade was passing down second avenue, the main thoroughfare of the city, a young girl in a passing automobile waved an American flag in front of one of the members of the bugle band of the regiment. The man broke ranks and snatching the flag broke the staff in two and trampled it under his feet, the majority of the rest of the regiment passing over it.

The bugler was instantly taken from the ranks and at the conclusion of the parade was court-martialed and discharged from the regiment. The rest of the members of the bugle-band were waiting outside the armories and as soon as they heard the decision informed one of the officers that they were handing in their uniforms and would resign permanently from the regiment if this decision was allowed to stand.

They stated that the flag was waved in the face of the bugler. The officers of the regiment held a consultation and the man was later reinstated.

Owing to the fact that the bugle band is to take a prominent part in the big parade in honor of the six hundred delegates of the real estate board to-day, the officers, it is said, decided that they were forced to re-instate the man. The second decision was the signal for a celebration, which lasted until late. Members of the regiment in uniform marched through the streets near the armories with a Union Jack at their head singing "God Save the King" and "Rule Britannia."

IN AID OF THE PUBLIC HEALTH

Mansions, not stables, should be provided for the cow—the artificial mother of the races; city architects waste their time planning elaborate and costly homes and apartment houses when they could do humanity a greater service by planning sanitary buildings for the city's milk supply—Public Health Journal.

The appalling rate at which flies multiply is almost beyond the comprehension of the ordinary mind. A female fly lays 120 eggs at a time, and produces four broods. In twenty days from the laying of the egg, the young fly may be ready itself to lay in turn. Thus the possible progeny of a single fly from April to September has been estimated to be ten trillions. Such figures give a startling realization of the magnitude of the efforts to annihilate the fly. But persistent, systematic effort can appreciably reduce the number of flies and the people of modern nations are commencing to realize that it pays in good health returns, and therefore in dollars and cents, to carry on a carefully conducted campaign against the pest of flies.—Public Health Journal

"JANEY CANUCK" IS HONORED

The Eminence of Mrs. Arthur Murphy, of Edmonton, as a Canadian Woman of Letters Is Recognized by Her Confreres—She Was Born In Cookstown, Ont., and Is a Lover of "Out-of-Doors."

After four years of most efficient and faithful service as president of the Canadian Women's Press Club, Miss Marjory MacMurchy, of Toronto, has been elected honorary president, and Mrs. Arthur Murphy, of Edmonton, has been elected as chief official. Mrs. Murphy is known as the writer of several books of "chronicle and comment," as "Janey Canuck," or by her maiden name of Emily Ferguson. She belongs to Cookstown, Ont., by birth, is Irish by descent, and is an "old girl" of Bishop Strachan School, Toronto. She is essentially a book-lover and is also a great devotee of open-air sports and pastimes. In fact, it would be hard to say whether she prefers the delights of a rare old poet to the joy of a canter along a western hillside. As a writer of book reviews for a Winnipeg journal she shows both literary culture and discrimination. Mrs. Murphy has a positive genius for "presiding" and is deservedly popular, not only for her executive ability, but for the eternal buoyancy of spirit, which makes her the best of good company. Mrs. Murphy is never so happy as when she is giving others the merriest time of their lives—and the Press Club is to be congratulated.—Canadian Courier.

Boy Scouts Light Town.

The town of Wymondham, in Norfolk, England, about which much was heard during the great flood of last year, is again achieving notoriety, this time on account of having been plunged in darkness at night since the middle of April. As the result of a bit of economy of the parish meeting, which controls the lighting of the town, the supply has been cut off much earlier than usual, and the curious spectacle is consequently seen of a troop of Boy Scouts parading the public streets with Chinese lanterns to light the footsteps of the inhabitants and travelers passing through the town from Norwich and elsewhere. The residents also try to make a brave show by illuminating their houses with candles stuck in glass jars. The parish meeting considered the present light estimate of sevenpence in the pound too much and, despite the advice of their lighting inspectors, decided not to spend more than a sixpenny rate.

PROPHETS AND PROFITS

The front page writer in Saturday Night has been dilating upon prophets, and upon Pastor Russell in particular. That there are a great many people in the world who are not only willing, but eager to be gulled is certain, from the success which attends all showmen whether of the Barnum type, or the Brigham Young or Dowie order.

Without any intention of libeling the old man, one is inclined to suspect the Pastor, whose spectacular excursions into prophesy and into Biblical and theological interpretation are run on such booming business lines.

That there is money in the business is pretty certain from the reports of the various ventures of the Pastor's, notably in the "Miracle Wheat" proposition.

A Southern farmer, who had succeeded in growing an excellent variety of wheat, which had a higher yield to the ear than the average. He bought a large quantity of it from him, and then proceeded to sell it to his followers at an enormous price per bushel claiming that through his influence with Providence he had arranged for a special blessing on the grain which would make it produce in a miraculous degree.

"He succeeded in disposing of a good deal of it to farmers at prices many times greater than are customarily paid for seed wheat. The purchasers found it good enough wheat but the only miracle involved was Nature's great miracle of growth which is in progress throughout the world from seedtime to harvest."

The Saturday Night goes on to say: "Perhaps if it were not for his whiskers, he would not be able to win so many gullible people. Religionists of strange sects demand a great deal of mattrass stuffing on the faces of their prophets.

IF THERE WERE NO FLIES

The Christian Giardian contains an article entitled, "If there were no birds," and the writer makes out a fairly good case for the feathered tribe.

The title reminds the present writer of a remark made by a little child of his acquaintance, who said on one occasion, "Wouldn't this be a funny world if there were no flies?" It is not the intention of this article to prove that flies are as necessary as birds, although if one were to consult some of the birds on this point, they would certainly vote for more flies.

That the world would be considerably different if all the winged insects were swatted will be admitted by the boldest and most ferocious enemy of the fly creation.

The house fly is the species that comes in for the greatest amount of malediction from house-wives. But a fly is the most indifferent of creatures, and even while this article is being written one of them is crawling over the hand that writes, and another is hovering in the region of the writer's nose.

If there is one species of fly which brings murder to the eye of some of us, it is that invention of the Evil One, the mosquito. There are some things in nature as in life which make us at times doubt the beneficence of the Creator. But doubtless even this ingenious, singing devil-fly plays some inscrutable useful part in the economy of the universe.

The hard-ware merchant might easily argue that flies are necessary for the window and door screen trade. But so far as this writer is concerned he regards all pests, winged and otherwise, as a test of his endurance and of his agility in swatting.

EDITORIAL NOTES

The Millenium is to commence in October of next year, according to Pastor Russell.

Saturday Night says that the reason why Pastor Russell can "gull" people, or rather the reason so many people believe in his theological nostrums, is because he wears whiskers. There's a lot of truth in that.

Flora Riley, the Woodstock girl who is in jail for setting fire to a barn could not give any reason for her foolish act. If she had been in England she might have indulged her incendarian proclivities and acquired fame as well. Even yet, she might shriek "Votes for Women" and receive canonization at the hands of the Women's Social and Political Union.

A POEM BY DR. BRIDGES.

A hint of the qualities as a writer of verse that have gained for Dr. Briges the appointment of British poet laureate may be gained from the following verses of one of his poems:

I have loved flowers that fade,
  Within whose tents
Rich hues have marriage made
  With sweet unmemoried scents.
A honeymoon delight—
A joy of love at sight,
That ages in an hour—
My song be like a flower!

I have loved airs, that die
  Before their charm is writ
Along a liquid sky
  Trembling to welcome it.
Notes, that with pulse of fire
Proclaim the spirit's desire,
Then die, and are nowhere;
My song be like an air!

Die song, die like a breath,
  And wither as a bloom;
Fear not a flowery death,
  Dread not an airy tomb!
Fly with delight, fly hence
'Twas thine love's tender sense
To feast; now on thy bier,
Beauty shall shed a tear.

EXCERPTS

THE END OF THE WORLD.

Some years ago a respectable middle aged man walked into the office of a daily newspaper, and asked the city editor to announce that the world would come to an end on March 17th, 1909. He said he thought it important that sinners should know this. The city editor thanked his visitor, but stated that before inserting news so momentous in character, it was necessary to know the source of his information. Accuracy was the motto of his paper, he said, and he would like to know just how his visitor had come by his knowledge. "I was told it in personal converse with the Almighty," said the prophet. Upwards of four years have passed and the world is still whirling on its axis. The same prophet walked into the church of a preacher whom he did not like, and publicly prophesied that the church would be burned by flames brought down from Heaven within the next few days, as a protest against the stupid discourses of the parson. The church is still standing.—Saturday Night.

WOMAN COULD NOT WALK

She Was So Ill—Restored to Health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Pentwater, Mich.—"A year ago I was very weak and the doctor said I had a serious displacement. I had backache and bearing down pains so bad that I could not sit in a chair or walk across the floor and I was in severe pain all the time. I felt discouraged as I had taken everything I could think of and was no better. I began taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and now I am strong and healthy."—Mrs. ALICE DARLING, R.F.D. No. 2, Box 77, Pentwater, Mich.

Read What Another Woman says:

Peoria, Ill.—"I had such backaches that I could hardly stand on my feet. I would feel like crying out lots of times, and had such a heavy feeling in my right side. I had such terrible dull headaches every day and they would make me feel so drowsy and sleepy all the time, yet I could not sleep at night.

"After I had taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a week I began to improve. My backache was less and that heavy feeling in my side went away. I continued to take the Compound and am cured.

"You may publish this if you wish."—Miss CLARA L. GAUWITZ, R.R. No. 4, Box 62, Peoria, Ill.

Such letters prove the value of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for woman's ills. Why don't you try it?

BROOKLYN TABERNACLE BIBLE STUDY ON

FIGHTING AGAINST GOD

—August 3.—Psalm 105:23-36; Exodus 7:11.—

"Whosoever shall exalt himself shall be humbled: whosoever shall humble himself shall be exalted."—Matthew 23:12. R.V.

THE practise of injustice injures the afflictor as well as the afflicted. If this principle were generally recognized, fewer would attempt to practise injustice—inequity—iniquity. No lesson seems so difficult for people to learn as that briefly comprehended in the Master's Golden Rule, "Do unto others as ye would that they should do unto you."

On various pretexts the Egyptians justified their treatment of the Hebrews. Hence at the time of to-day's Study, they were ready to hold the enslaved Hebrews at any cost. Injustice—inequity—iniquity—got such a hold upon them that the plagues necessary for the deliverance of Israel were doubtless a full compensation of justice, equivalent to the injustice practiced by the Egyptians.

From one point of view, the plagues were miraculous; not so from another. We are apt to style everything beyond our own experiences as miraculous, and everything within our range as natural. From God's standpoint, nothing is miraculous. As we become familiar with the laws of nature, and discern how the Almighty accomplishes what once we thought miraculous, our knowledge should not lessen our respect for the wonder itself or for our God.

"Who is the God of the Hebrews?"

The plagues of Egypt can be accounted for with reasonableness. Evidently they were part of a contest between the gods of Egypt and the God of Israel. The Pharaohs claimed to be representatives of the sun god, while the Hebrews worshiped the great unseen Jehovah. So when Moses told Pharaoh that the God of the Hebrews sent him word that the Israelites were to go out of Egypt to worship Him, Pharaoh derisively inquired, "Who is the God of the Hebrews?"

Moses was instructed to give certain signs by which his authority as God's representative would be recognized. One of these was to cast his staff upon the ground, and it would become a serpent. Pharaoh's magicians did likewise. Some have surmised that they performed a trick said to be common in India—hypnotizing a serpent and making it rigid in catalepsy, to appear like a staff. When released from the hypnosis, it would manifest itself as a serpent.

We are not sure, however; for other duplications of Moses' work cannot be accounted for on the basis of deception. According to Scripture, there are but two sources of occult power—Divine and satanic. Unquestionably God has for centuries permitted Satan and the fallen angels, called demons, to exercise great power. In no other way can psychic phenomena be accounted for. We are not charging spirit mediums with knowingly being servants of the evil spirits that personate the dead. Rather, we are excusing them as thoroughly deceived—blind leaders of the blind, bringing mankind under the power of these evil spirits, and rapidly increasing the number of the insane.

Waters Turned Into Blood.

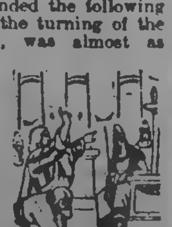
It is supposed that the plagues began in June and ended the following March. The first, the turning of the waters into blood, was almost as miraculous as our Lord's turning water into wine. Undoubtedly the process by which God exercised His Power is simple, if only we knew how. More and more our chemists are learning nature's secrets.



"Moses gave signs."

Travelers declare that in early spring the Nile is as red as blood, by reason of micro-organisms in the water. If this were God's method of turning the waters into blood, the miracle would consist in Moses' ability to effect the change suddenly, and to abate it.

The second plague was that of frogs. Pharaoh's magicians were able to duplicate the first two plagues, but merely added to the difficulty; for they could not take the frogs away. Pharaoh was obliged to appeal to Moses for relief; but when respite came, he still held on to the injustice of slavery.

The third plague was that of lice. Dr. Merrins says: "The word lice probably means dust ticks, so common in Egypt. At certain seasons, it seems as if the very dust were turned into lice. The decaying heaps of frogs would inevitably be the breeding place of innumerable insects."

The plague of flies was of various kinds—gnats, mosquitos, house and cattle flies. The poor Egyptians suffered a just retribution, in offset to their own injustice to the Hebrews. Pharaoh relented; but when God's mercy took away the plague, he again doubted that their experiences were from the Lord, and so refused to let Israel go.

The cattle plague followed—a disease much resembling the Russian epizootic, which some years ago spread death among cattle. Then came the plague of ulcers. The nation, from Pharaoh to his humblest servant, were afflicted with carbuncles.

No woman can manage a man if she lets him know how she is doing it.

Read the Following Letter Re SANOL From Prof. Auguste Dereume.

Altona, Man., July 7th, 1913
To The Sanol Manufacturing Co., Ltd., 975 Main St, Winnipeg:

Dear Sirs,—These few lines are to add to my testimony in regard to the benefits derived from your SANOL; although still ailing from lumbago through the lack of proper care of myself I find SANOL a panacea not to equal it for instant relief from excesses of uric acid in the blood. The trouble with many of our people we do not give the treatment long enough a trial to make a cure, and sometimes people quit taking the medicine when they should continue taking it until all the symptoms of pains in the loins rheumatic pains have left them.

I have recommended the SANOL to an old friend of mine who is about 70 years old, and who was troubled with his inability to pass water without experiencing excruciating pains. After having taken two bottles of SANOL he got relief; he then ordered a half dozen bottles from your company, and I told him if he would continue he would get better altogether which to my delight he does.

I have, certainly, no flattery to make, but it is my duty to report it to the sceptic public that do not believe in a scientific epoch-making panacea for kidney trouble.

May you live long to manufacture SANOL and help suffering humanity.

The Best Detective Story of the Last Ten Years

Dorothy countered with keen relish of the situation. If subtlety was his intention, she would show him what a woman—Dorothy was all of nineteen—a woman could do. "I never would have supposed," she added, allowing herself full measure of mischief, "that a famous detective could be a matinée man."

Britz winced. His ready good nature parried her shafts, however, and it was with the same slow smile that he replied:

"Does the author reconcile the manners of the two periods, or, is the piece one of those problem plays that leave everything to the audience? You see, Miss March," he went on, "Mulberry Street gets to Broadway occasionally."

"I don't know, Mr. Britz." She tried to recall the advance notice of the production. "This is the first time I've seen it. I dare say the playwright has bridged the gap somehow."

"It's a wide gap to bridge," observed the detective thoughtfully. "From reading nineteenth century novels, I should say it would be hard for the writer to hold interest with such a groundwork for his plot. Things were so different fifty years ago."

"Exactly what my grandfather says," Dorothy retorted, fun flashing in that mignon face. "But we'll know soon how the author has succeeded," she added. "The orchestra is nearing the end of this selection."

"Even their amusements were different," mused Britz. "Instead of golf, tennis, autoing, yachting, they had archery, croquet, sketching, and square dances—I don't suppose anybody in society sketches nowadays, Miss March?"

"I'd hardly say that," she replied. "There are a few talented men——"

"And many women——"

"Oh, almost all women are more or less artistic," said Dorothy with conviction. "But one must not be unjust to the men on that account."

"I'll venture to say—well, of course, you're in society, Miss March, and I'm not," Britz apologised, "but still I feel pretty certain you can't think——"

"Of course, if you don't think I can think, Mr. Britz," said Dorothy with mock indignation that accented her prettiness as a shadowy background emphasizes a jewel, "why, you can't expect—but I told you you'd find me a poor teacher."

"Now, Miss March, Miss March," Britz protested, hitching his chair around to gaze at her more directly. Over his shoulder he saw curious eyes, and he realized their tête-à-tête soon must end. Lobby flirtations were not approved by Forrest audiences.

"Well, Mr. Britz?" This challengingly.

"Well, Miss March," and his smile from a younger man would have called caressing, "we've started with discussion of the play, and we touched on authorship, the founder of the Four Hundred, the War with Spain and a dozen other subjects. Funny how chatter zigzags, isn't it? I was about to say that from all I understand the society men of to-day are not as accomplished, even if they are as talented, as the beaux of good Queen Victoria's girlhood. Come now, I'd be willing to bet a box of bonbons you don't know half a dozen men who can draw anything except checks."

"Oh, yes, I do!" she cried gayly. Then, meditatively, "Half a dozen, you say? Do you know, Mr. Britz, I think you win."

"You don't know as many as six?" Britz inquired, as if the fate of empires hung on his winning the wager that as yet was only a hypothesis.

"It's humiliating, isn't it?" she said naively. "But I don't. There are two or three, though—Teddy Lorimer and Mr. Griswold, and that queer little Frenchman, Anatole — Anatole — oh, you know whom I mean?"

"Anatole Daubigny?"

"Yes—he draws the funniest, dearest little dogs."

"And his monkeys, Miss March. Don't forget his monkeys."

"Aren't they simply—simply ravishing?" the girl returned. "And have you seen his newest satire on the Newport set—a lot of apes and baboons and chimpanzees in evening dress sitting at the table with several men and women? 'A Family Reunion,' he calls it."

"Delightful!" said Britz with enthusiasm equaling hers. "I perceive we enjoy a good many things in common, Miss March."

She smiled. It was not every matinée girl who could interest a man who solved world-famous mysteries.

"Isn't it strange!" she said. Then the training of years recalled her to a sense of what she was doing. "I fear we've been very unconventional, Mr. Britz," she said as primly as her prettiness permitted. "But I've enjoyed our little chat very much."

"Which means I must be going," said Britz promptly, "if I'm not to spoil your enjoyment of the mid Victorian scene. The orchestra has finished speaking its little piece."

"Yes, there goes the curtain," agreed Dorothy, rising hastily. "So glad to have met you, Mr. Britz. I hope I've been of some assistance about dear Mrs. Missioner's jewels Good-afternoon."

"Good-afternoon, Miss March, a very good afternoon." And he was stepping quickly toward the door when her sweet voice arrested him.

"But, Mr. Britz," she cried, "there was something you wished to ask me—something that was to help you find the diamonds?"

"Some other time, Miss March, thank you," said Britz, smiling. "I won't detain you now. Perhaps we'll meet at another matinee soon, with a longer intermission between the acts. Delighted to have made your acquaintance, Miss March. I know you're in a hurry to get back to your seat. Forrest audiences don't like to be disturbed, yo uknow. Good afternoon, Miss March, and—thank you so much!"

"Good afternoon, then, Mr. Britz," and she flitted down the aisle.

"Yes, thank you so much, Miss March!" murmured Britz as he left the theatre and merged himself with the afternoon tide in Broadway.

He had cause to thank her, he believed. For, in her girlish talk, she had given him the first Missioner clew of the week—or, rather, she had extended for him a thread in the mystery that had occupied much of his thoughts from the moment when he received Logan's cable saying the paste jewels were made from sketches. For days he had sought to learn who among Mrs. Missioner's intimates was artist enough to make such delicate draughts of the diamonds as would be required by an artificer for the manufacture of imitations. With that object, he had ascertained Dorothy's intention to go to the matinee in the Forrest and had gone to the theatre to meet her under conditions not likely to interfere with such gentle questioning of her as he meant to do. His veiled interrogation of the society girl had brought forth the fact that Curtis Griswold could sketch—that the clubman was sufficiently master of his pencil to have his skill pretty generally known among his acquaintances. Lorimer and Daubigny, the other society artists she had mentioned, were not, he knew, in Mrs. Missioner's circle.

It was fortunate for Lieutenant Britz, as well as for Elinor Holcomb and Dr. Fitch, and everybody whose hopes hinged on the detective's success in solving the great Missioner diamond mystery, that long custom made him thread the traffic of the city's throbbing artery automatically for so deeply did the sleuth ponder the possibilities of his newest information that he had several close escapes from taxicabs, private automobiles and trolley cars as he crossed Broadway and bent his steps toward Fifth Avenue. The case had cleared a little but his course was not much plainer than it had been when he dropped into the theatre in quest of further knowledge.

"It won't do to call Miss March as a witness," he mused, walking north in the carriage-crowded avenue, with that briskness characteristic of him when his brain was most active. "She can't absolutely prove anything." It was necessary to obtain tangible evidence of Griswold's ability as a draughtsman. How to do so without alarming the clubman was the present problem.

Britz was by no means prepared to suspect Griswold of the robbery. He realized thoroughly that Dorothy's information was all he had to indicate Griswold any more than Sands, or two or three others. He did not even know whether Miss Holcomb could draw, and it was no part of his purpose to distress the imprisoned girl with questions betraying the smallest belief in the accusation against her. No; Britz, always honest with himself, could not say he suspected Griswold. His method was the opposite of Donnelly's and Carson's. Instead of suspecting everybody, as they invariably did in cases at all mysterious, he would not attach suspicion to anyone without satisfactory proof. That was the secret of his success. He was more than a detective; he was a prosecutor, judge, jury, and counsel to the defense. It accounted for the fact that he rarely made a mistaken arrest, and that when he caused man or women to be placed in the prisoner's dock, a conviction almost always followed.

"Griswold, Sands, Ali, Blodgett——"

The names presented themselves to the sleuth's mind in that order as he hastened along with no particular place as an objective—merely walking to stimulate his mental process. It always brightened Britz to pass the panorama of fashion in Fifth Avenue. It was with an almost fatherly feeling he ganced at the rich, the debonair, the gay sauntering along the sidewalks or rolling in automobiles and carriages up and down the asphalt. The safety of their wealth, sometimes of their very lives, depended on the vigilance, courage, and efficiency of himself and of the few men like him on the police force of New York. So far as the rank and file of the Department were concerned, those carefree sons and daughters of opportunity might be at the mercy of the ablest birds of prey in the human flock. It was because Britz and his compeer worked and watched and waited so patiently, so devotedly, so ceaselessly that fashion and finance, coquetry and commerce, could bask in the sunshine of metropolitan prosperity.

A dark-blue limousine standing at the corner of Forty-fourth Street caught his attention. For a moment he studied it as he slackened his pace Then he stopped short, retraced his steps, crossed to the east side of the avenue, and, through the windows of a waiting cab, trained his gaze on Sherry's fashionable restaurant in front of which the costly automobile stood. Dimly, through the filmy lace curtains, he saw the figures of those lingering over afternoon tea, with a few early diners. He could not distinguish their faces, but something in the bearing of a woman at the first window held his glance. Then a waiter, moving silently about the table, chanced to part the curtains with his elbow, and in the momentary gap between the folds of film Britz saw clearly the blonde beauty of Mrs Missioner, and the clear-cut features of Curtis Griswold.

Britz settled himself to wait. The cabman, whose vehicle he was using as a redoubt, looked at him inquiringly, but the detective fished out of his pocket a fat cigar with a scarlet-and-gold band, and in a moment he and the cabby were chatting amiably The Headquarters man had not long to wait. Before the cabman had gone far into discussion of the current political crisis, the door of the restaurant across the street was swung open by a boy in many buttons, and Mrs. Missioner appeared on the threshold. She was followed closely by Griswold and, after a moment's pause to gladden the heart of the much-buttoned youth, by a man the watching detective was somewhat surprised to see—Bruxton Sands.

"Home," said Mrs. Missioner to her chauffeur. Britz could not hear the word, but he read it from her lips. He saw the widow step into her limousine, saw Sands and Griswold follow, saw the chauffeur throw his clutch, saw the big car glide swiftly south to wheel for a northward trip along the avenue. Before the automobile reached a turning point, the detective sprang into the cab, whispered an address to the driver, and added in a low tone:

"Double your fare for speed."

The cabman lashed his horse, and, knowing his craft, threaded his way through the traffic so quickly that in a short time he was several blocks ahead of the limousine. All the way up the avenue the race continued, Britz well in the lead. At the Fifty-ninth Street entrance, the automobile swung into the park, but the cabman urged his horse straight up Fifth Avenue, and so great was the gain made by the short cut that a few blocks further north he dropped his fare in front of a mansion of imposing ugliness, touched his hat in acknowledgment of a generous fee, and was bowling eastward, halfway to Madison Avenue, when the Missioner car reappeared from the Park's Seventy-second Street gate.

"You at least can stop for a minute of gossip," said Mrs. Missioner over her shoulder as she preceded Sands and Griswold into her library. "Finance and club affairs can wait a little while, and—oh!"

She stopped in the act of throwing off her furs, and stood gazing at the middle of the room. There, absorbed in his task, at ease in a big chair before the crackling grate, sat Detective Lieutenant Britz. Pad in one hand pencil in the other, he was sketching busily.

Mrs. Missioner extended a hand behind her to silence her companions. She turned her head with a smile almost as mischievous as Dorothy could flash.

"Hush!" she whispered. She and the others watched Britz quietly as his pencil moved slowly, awkwardly over the paper. From his frequent glances at the end of the room that held the big safe, it was evident he was making a drawing of it. The laborious dragging of his pencil point proved he was not accustomed to such work—at least, so it seemed to one of the three who watched him. But the sleuth stuck to the task doggedly, and at last he bore so heavily on a corner of his sketch that the point of his pencil broke.

He laid down the pad, took out a pocket-knife, and began to sharpen the pencil. When the point was fashioned to his liking, he looked up Then and then only did he seem to see the widow and her friends. He arose instantly and bowed to Mrs. Missioner following that with a short nod to the men behind her.

"I told your man to let me come in madam, because I had no time to spare," said the sleuth.

Mrs. Missioner inclined her head in assent.

"You wish to see me?" she inquired "There is something more you wish to know?"

GOOD BLOOD THE SECRET OF HEALTH

To be Healthy You Must Keep the Blood Rich, Red and Pure

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are useful in any disease caused by thin or impure blood, and the list of such diseases is astonishingly large. Anaemia literally means a condition in which the blood is thin and watery. In rheumatism the blood becomes thin more rapidly than in any other disease. After an attack of la grippe or acute fevers the blood is always thin and impure, and Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are the tonic to use during convalescence. When the blood is poor and thin the stomach suffers. The food ferments, gas and certain acids form and the trouble is pronounced indigestion or dyspepsia. The nerves receive from the blood all of their nourishment to keep up their energy and repair waste or damage. Some form of paralysis are caused by thin blood. The progress of locomotor taxia is stopped in many cases when the blood is made pure, rich and red. This is only a partial list of the troubles having their origin in impure, watery blood, and all can be cured by supplying the blood with its missing constituents.

This is exactly what Dr. Williams' Pink Pills do. Their chief mission is to make rich, red blood, and this good blood reaches every organ and every nerve in the human body, thus driving out disease and bringing renewed health and strength to thousands of weak, despondent people.

Ask your neighbors. There is not an inhabited corner in Canada where Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have not restored some sufferer, and all over this country there are grateful people who do not hesitate to say they owe health—in some cases like itself—to this great medicine. If you are ailing begin to cure yourself to-day by using Dr. Williams' Pink Pills.

Sold by all dealers in medicine or by mail at 50 cents a box, or six boxes for $ 2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co. Brockville, On.

In packing cream in a mold which is to be served entire, first put in strip of cloth or waxed paper, letting the ends extend beyond the mold. This will be a help in removing the mold intact

SILENCE AND MYSTERY.

Life at North. Death at South Pole, Where Nothing Thrives.

"There is no living thing on the Antarctic continent," declares Sir Ray Lankester, "excepting the seals and the penguins and a few other birds found on and near the coast line and a minute insect like the so-called glacier flea, together with a few animalcules living in pools formed by the melting of ice in the brief summer, and species of algae, mosses, lichens and fungi.

"Flowers would grow at the South Pole in summer if it were not for the mountains there, which make the South Pole so cold. The south polar area is an elevated mountainous land reaching 12,000 feet in parts and covered with perpetual ice in consequence of the elevation. Moreover, the Antarctic continent is surrounded by the sea and is lifeless.

"There is a vast area of land around the north polar sea, which is green with vegetation and dotted with brilliantly colored flowers in summer, and yet is only 500 miles distant from the North Pole. In the arctic region there are seals, white bear, walrus, fox, wolves, musk ox and many small mammals and birds which stray from the neighboring continental lands. There is abundant vegetation, including flowering plants, which find a growing place wherever land is exposed. So far as temperature is concerned, these flowers and plants would grow at the North Pole itself were there any islands in that part of the frozen polar sea. In contrast to the low-lying land around the North Pole, the mountainous interior of Greenland is of high elevation and covered with perpetual ice and devoid of life.

"The North Pole is, in fact, a fair weather zone, while, on the other hand, the antarctic land is swept at all times of the year by blizzards of exceptional force and duration.

"From the very beginning of life on the earth, the South Pole has been an uninhabited region. No animals ever lived there; the deepest digging will disclose no bones of extinct creatures. The antarctic continent is literally the only place on the whole earth where silence and mystery have existed from the first."

Lady Taxi-Drivers.

Lady chauffeurs are becoming quite a familiar sight in the West End of London, not only on private cars, but on the taxi-cabs that ply for public hire. As a rule the women who have taken to the wheel are young, and in not a few cases quite prepossessing into the bargain, with the result that their services are eagerly sought by the young bloods about the town.

Thoroughly trained, these lady chauffeurs are expert drivers, and pilot their cars through the densest traffic without the slightest hesitation or the least sign of nervousness. In addition, many have a sound knowledge of the mechanism of their cars, and can successfully undertake slight repairs. Several firms who hire out motors cars now provide lady chauffeurs if desired.

Elastic Corset Laces.

If corsets are laced with elastic instead of with the ordinary corset strings they will be found much more comfortable, as the elastic gives much more freedom to the body. Any woman knows that corsets cannot be dispensed with, masculine dress reformers to the contrary notwithstanding. It is not only a matter of beauty of form, but the corsets are an actual support, and without them a woman has an "all gone feeling." With the substitution of elastic for the usual corset laces all objectionable features to the corset are removed. It is no longer an "instrument of torture."

LIFE INSURANCE

THE pessimist and the prophet of woe have no rightful place in any consideration of the expediency of insuring life. But certain hard facts should be squarely faced by every man of moderate means who has anyone dependent on him. Hundreds of men are yearly rejected for life insurance who would have been accepted had they not delayed their applications until ill health had come upon them. Why do men in good condition take such a long chance of remaining well? It is an impressive fact that out of 8549 holders of policies in a leading life insurance company who died in the past year, only 64 died of old age. The remainder were carried away by disease or accident. Hence the wisdom of insuring early in life. The best years for saving are from 20 to 40, and no man should let that period pass without taking out an insurance policy. For that part of his career an endowment policy, which is likely to mature while he is still living and can secure the proceeds of it himself, is to be preferred.

There will probably always be poor old men. their ranks will be recruited from the successful men of an earlier date, and fortunate is he who has made certain provision by means of endowment insurance in the Sun Life Assurance Company of Canada.

A SUMMER FEATURE.

The Two Color Frock Is Snappy.

OF WHITE COTTON CRAPE.

Colored ratine jacket bodices over skirts of plain or flowered fabric produce an effect that is particularly smart this season. The frock of white cotton crape pictured has a coat of lavender ratine trimmed with collar and cuffs of white and lavender matelasse.

The Old Time Calico Gown.

Is there anything sweeter than a wholesome looking girl in a fresh calico dress?

All the silks and satins and chiffons and laces and charmeuse gowns and folderols in the world can't make the girl one whit sweeter or more desirable or better to look at. And yet somehow we ignore that fact and go on depleting our pocketbooks by buying the things that cost a lot of money and which we fondly believe enhance our charm.

A pink and white calico and a pink and white girl, or something with blue sprigs in it that match the blue of her eyes, or a red checked affair that carries out the scarlet in her lips—not a drug store scarlet either, but the real thing in lips and color—can you imagine anything better, though it costs more?

Maybe the girl made the dress herself, thus adding to its charm, for there'll be little individual touches in the homemade gown that no factory can give.

Homemade gowns dowdy? Not much! Some of the best fashioned gowns parading our streets today were made at home, though the fact is carefully concealed.

We're such snobs and so afraid of other snobs that we'll lie like troopers to hide the fact that we honestly toil to save a few dollars.

Don't you remember how nice and fresh the women folk looked, and how pleasantly clean they smelled, and how the starched skirts rustled, and how perfectly bee-autiful you thought mother was in the light blue calico with the pink rosebuds?

Somehow they were rosier and brighter eyed than the women of today, who think nothing of wearing a silk gown while doing up the supper dishes. They didn't wear the impatient frown that we see so often now.

And father didn't have that harassed look nor the prematurely graying hair, and he took time to play with the kiddies and to talk something besides expenses with mother instead of using all his energy trying to make ends meet.

English Peeress Becomes Editor.

The first peeress to become an editor is the Marchioness Townshend, who has been selected in that capacity by the new magazine Our Dumb Friends.

The first number was recently issued for private circulation. It is understood that to make the magazine pay there will be other features than those pertaining to animals, such as a social department and a sporting page "featuring" particularly dog and horse exhibitions, all of which will be under the direct supervision of Lady Townshend.

WOMEN'S PARLIAMENT PROPOSAL IN BRITAIN HAS MET WITH APPROVAL

Although Many Agitators for the Suffrage Think It Is a "Red Herring" Device Some Are Disposed to Favor the Creation of a Supplementary House of Commons of an Advisory Nature.

A women's Parliament for Great Britain has been proposed, and the proposal is being discussed in the London press. It finds some support, but, so far as the press discloses, this support does not come from those most directly interested, namely, the women themselves. And it will be difficult to organize a Women's Parliament without women.

Those doubtful of the value of the suggestion, or positively hostile to it, are wondering what was the prompting motive. What is claimed for the scheme is that such a Parliament would train women for public life and bring to the front women of real ability, but who are now thrust aside and silenced by the pushful, noisy babblers, who have neither ability nor knowledge.

Some women see in the scheme an attempt to draw the herring across the trail, and so divert attention from the real question of the day, which is the franchise. These critics of the scheme look upon it as a sort of lightning rod men wish to put up in order to divert the electric current from their own Parliament. While women were playing with a Parliament that possessed no real power, men's Parliament would be enacting laws that men and women must obey. "It is too thin," say the women, or words to that effect.

However, the proposal has stirred up an interesting discussion which throws, as it were, a new sidelight on this question of women who wish to share in government, and what to do with them.

The proposal was put forward in The Daily Mail of London, in these words:

"It would be possible with the enthusiasm and wealth which the suffragettes command to organize a woman's Parliament or Senate, elected on representative lines by the women of the whole country. Such a body could discuss proposals and draft measures.

"Even though it possessed no executive authority, if it acted with sanity, judgment, and moderation it would speedily acquire immense influence. Its recommendations would not be lightly disregarded by the House of Commons when they had public opinion behind them. In this perfectly orderly and legal manner women could obtain distinction, sway the Legislature, and demonstrate alike their capacity and the justice of their claims."

"It is pointed out that to bring such a Parliament into being women need no authority; they can set to work at once. The success of such a Parliament would be a triumphant vindication of the suffragist claims."

One English writer in commenting on the scheme makes some statements that the noisy but ill-informed wing of the woman-suffrage party will take exception to. The writer says:

"Those who are agitating for the extension of the suffrage to women are apt to overlook the fact that in the view of the majority of people women are still to a large extent an unknown force in political affairs.

"Enthusiastic advocates of the cause point to the activities of women in various realms, and can single out individual women of brilliant intellect and remarkable achievements, but the fact remains that so far the country has been without any real or arresting demonstration of the capacity of women to apply themselves to political problems apart from the one cause of the vote."

Another well-known writer of London, Mr. H. Hamilton Fyfe, supports the proposal. He points out that the antics of the suffragettes have well nigh ruined the cause of votes for women. "At this moment," he writes, "it would be impossible for either party to alter the constitution in the sense in which the women desire. The country would not have it."

Women, he says, must win back the ground they have lost, and such a Parliament as has been proposed would help to do it.

"Suppose," he asks, "the Young Hot Bloods" were to blow up St. Paul's (which they probably had no intention of doing the other day), what would happened? Would the vote be brought any nearer? Not by a day, not by an hour.

The sole result would be, I imagine, the rapid passing of a law to enforce the electrocution of everyone concerned in such crimes. Also a few of the criminals might be torn to pieces by angry mobs. But as for "terrorizing" the nation, that is a childish thought. The nation would only be made more furiously hostile to the idea of giving any women votes.

Condemnation of the scheme comes from high quarters. Mrs. Fawcett, the president of the National Union of Women's Suffrage Societies, has put upon it the stamp of her disapproval.

"There would be no reality about such a Parliament," said Mrs. Fawcett. "You would never get responsible women to devote their time to it."

Mrs. Humphry Ward, who is an out and out anti-suffragist, thinks no more of the proposal than does Mrs. Fawcett. "I think," says Mrs. Ward, "the suggestion of a women's Parliament quite impracticable. I have always advocated large developments of the local government powers of women, leading ultimately to some form of provincial devolution, as likely to solve the whole question by giving women an equitable share of public responsibility without interference with men."

DR. RODDICK SEES HIS DREAM REALIZED

Widely-Known Doctor, Who Has Labored for Years to Place Medical Professions of the Various Provinces on an Equal Footing, Has Completed His Work—Old Provincial Troubles at an End.

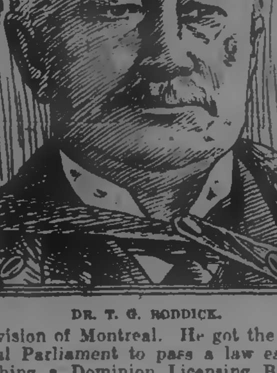
The delegates who attended the first Dominion Medical Council at Ottawa recently were enthusiastic in their praise of Dr. T. G. Roddick, of Montreal, and the success of the first annual session of the new body.

Dr. Roddick is the man who bore the burden of the big fight to bring about general medical registration for the Dominion. The subject has been for him one of steady and persistent work for years and his efforts have at last been brilliantly crowned with success. Now he has succeeded in obtaining a universal standard of medical examination for the Dominion of Canada, and, what is more important, he has induced the various provincial medical boards to co-operate and work in harmony with the Dominion board.

He took up this fight several years ago, when he was member in the House of Commons for the St. Antoine division of Montreal. He got the federal Parliament to pass a law establishing a Dominion Licensing Board with the consent of the various provinces. These licenses are to hold good in any part of Canada. This bill passed the Parliament in 1912. Since then Dr. Roddick has energetically devoted himself to winning over the medical bodies in the provinces and now registration lists for medical men will be opened, qualifying them for the whole Dominion. Examinations for the purpose will be held at Montreal Oct. 7.



DR. T. G. RODDICK.

All Canadian physicians in any province of ten years' standing will be registered on payment of a fee of $100 without examination. New doctors by passing the examinations of the new Dominion board will be qualified to practice anywhere in the Dominion. The change marks an epoch in the medical history of the Dominion and is considered a great stride forward as far as medical education is concerned. Formerly medical men were subjected to much inconvenience and annoyance on account of the petty provincial spirit displayed in regard to medical practice in Canada. Thanks to Dr. Roddick and his co-laborers, this grievance will disappear.

In recognition of his invaluable service in this cause the medical men of the Dominion have made Dr. Roddick president of the new medical council of Canada.

Paid Short Visit While en Route to Ottawa Valley

Rev. A. H. Brace and Mrs. Brace, of Caledonia, Ont., were in the city for a short time to-day on their way to the Ottawa Valley for a vacation. Their Peterborough friends will be pleased to learn they are enjoying good health.

They had the pleasure of meeting two of their sons, Lincoln and William, at Toronto, the former having come from the Y.M.C.A. training school at Orillia to meet his parents, while William who has a medical practice at Melville Sask., is taking a supplementary course at Toronto, after which he will receive his license and continue a large practice in the western town.

Lincoln is now assistant to G. H. Williamson, General Secretary of the Y.M.C.A. at Fort William. Their second son, Albert is at Chentu, China, as a missionary.

George St. Church

Mr. A. A. Hainsworth, Secretary of the Y.M.C.A., will occupy the pulpit at George street Methodist church at both services to-morrow. His subject for the morning will be "Is Life Worth Living?" and in the evening "An Honest Doubter."

Both these sermons will be of especial interest to young men.

Celebrates 900th Anniversary.

Greenstead Church, near Olgar, has just celebrated its nine hundredth anniversary, the Bishop of St. Alban's, the vicar and the folk of the countryside taking part in the proceedings, while the bishop stood beside the original oak walls of the sanctuary which, upon a night, according to tradition, protected the remains of King Edmund the Martyr, who was too youthful and saintly to be a match for hirsute Danish pirates.

Not All Answered.

About 12,000 letters are received at the British House of Commons every day during the session, or eighteen for every legislator. But of these eighteen only five, it is calculated, get answered there, for the House only posts in its letter-box about 3,700 a day.

To Aid Poor Students.

The English Government is planning to provide scholarships and other aids which will make possible a university education for every boy or girl who makes a certain standard.

Densely Packed.

Liverpool, with ninety-nine people to the acre, is the most thickly populated city in England.

AT MURRAY ST.

Rev. A. Haddow, B.A. of Avoca, Que., will preach morning and evening at Murray street church on Sunday. Rev. J. R. Webb left to-day with his family for their island, "Bon Repo," Stoney Lake.

Post Office Box

A government post-office box has been placed in Chemong Park, for the convenience of the cottagers and guests.

ANOTHER BRACE OF TWIRLERS HIT HARD

Rowanites Captured the Second Game With Red Sox by Hard Batting.

The cellar champions fell again before the heavy artillery of the Petes yesterday afternoon, and the Rowanites should clean up the series today. It was an afternoon of swats, here, there and everywhere, by the homesters, and Chubby Coose, the catcher, pitcher, etc., lasted but three rounds. Lill returned to the battle grounds, and although he had great speed, he was wild.

Belting retired at the end of the third and left the park, suffering from a severe headache. Sterling filled the gap and was effective.

GUARD THEIR HEALTH!

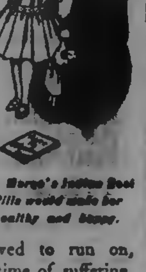
Children Who Grow Very Fast Need Careful Watching.



Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills would make her healthy and happy.

Next to infancy, the years between ten or twelve and eighteen are the most critical in life, especially for the boys and girls who grow too fast. Rapid growth and the physical changes that are taking place render them particularly liable to weakness and disorders of the digestive system, kidneys or lungs that very frequently, when allowed to run on, condemn them to a lifetime of suffering.

It is most important that at this period of life those organs which carry off the body's waste and impurities—the bowels, the kidneys and the skin—should be kept active and vigorous.

Nothing will do this more effectively than that good old-fashioned remedy, Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills. It acts directly on each of these organs, enabling them to do their work properly, and thus keeps the whole system pure and healthy.

Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills are still made from precisely the same formula as when our grandparents used them, for nothing better has ever been devised.

How to Know the School.

A German writer has discovered signs by which to detect the school to which a painter belongs: If he paints the sky gray and the grass black, he belongs to the good old classical school. If he paints the sky blue and the grass green, he is a realist. If he paints the sky green and the grass blue, he is an impressionist. If he paints the sky yellow and the grass purple, he is a colorist. If he paints the sky black and the grass red, he shows the possession of great decorative talent. If you can't tell the sky from the grass, he's a cubist.—Christian Register.

Eject Thinly-Clad Woman.

The scanty garb of an ultra-fashionably dressed woman led to her being asked to leave Lord's Cricket Grounds, where the Oxford-Cambridge cricket match was being played, recently. The stands were filled with England's smartest society people, and all the women present were beautifully gowned, but the person in question was easily noticeable because of her startling and daring costume. She wore a big flapping straw hat and a lace dress which had evidently no lining and whose skirt was so flimsy that black knickerbockers and jewelled garter buckles were as easily seen as if in a shop window.

All eyes were gradually magnetised by the woman, until suddenly a policeman walked over and whispered something in her ear. She arose and left the grounds. However, she was perfectly complacent and evidently well satisfied with the sensation she made.

New Book For B[illegible].

An important series of apocrypha in Coptic text probably of the tenth or eleventh century, and other works written in the dialect of upper Egypt, edited and translated by Dr. Wallis Budge, are published by the British Museum.

This apocryphon professes to be in the actual Divine words in the language in which our Lord and Virgon Mary spoke. Dr. Budge asserts that this is the Book of Resurrection attributed to Bartholemew the Apostle.

It describes the descent of Our Lord into hell, His conquest of death and His Son's defeat of the devil, the destruction of the gates, bolts and bars of hell, the liberation of Adam and Eve and all the children of men.

STARTED WITH BUTTER

BUT LIPTON HAS ENLARGED HIS INTERESTS SINCE THEN.

Celebrated Irish Knight, Merchant and Yachtsman Tried to Emigrate But It Wasn't Much of a Success—Started Buying Butter In Ireland—Was One of the Earliest to Advertise.

If anybody ever writes a biography of Sir Thomas Lipton, he will have to give considerable space to butter, because that very useful household article is responsible for the famous yachtsman's first business success. During the great Irish famine of 1846, Lipton's parents fled to Scotland, where for the next several years they were unable to make more than a scant living.

Thomas at that time was ambitious to make a career, and finding times hard at home, he sought his fortune in the United States. But he failed to find any encouragement on this side of the Atlantic. After his money was exhausted and he had spent a few nights on park benches, he returned to Scotland and set up a small shop in Glasgow.

A little later he went to a fair in Ireland and bought all the butter on exhibition, having to pawn his watch to make up the sum necessary for the transaction. He disposed of the butter at a good profit and then he opened shops in other cities.

In those days most business men in the United Kingdom regarded advertising as a vulgarity, but Lipton had imagination enough to see its possibilities, and he boldly covered the walls of London with pictures of gigantic pigs which he was importing from Ireland. The story is told by T. P. O'Connor, in T. P.'s Weekly, from which we quote:

And so the business grew until in less than twenty years from the time he started as a penniless trader he had become a household word in all parts of the world. This period of Lipton's life was absolutely concentrated on his business; he had no other interest in life; he knew nobody outside business circles.

Every day was the same; a modest house in the suburbs of London; some trotting horses—this was before the era of the motor-car—a quick journey to his place of business between eight and nine o'clock in the morning; and then the whole day there until eight o'clock in the evening, when he returned to his home in the country, and after a modest meal, went to bed and prepared himself for the labors of the next day.

He told me once during these years that he had not been to a theatre for years; that he never dined out; and that outside a few friends, he knew nobody in London, and never visited anybody. At the public dinner, at the theatrical party, at the ceremonials, at the receptions, at the big restaurants, at all the places where you meet what is called All London, the figure of Lipton was always conspicuous by its absence.

Then London woke up to the idea that there was a remarkable and powerful personality which it ought to capture. London is always on the lookout for captures, especially of the rich, the powerful, and the brilliant—though its love for brilliancy, especially literary brilliancy, is less ardent and wide-spread, than its adoration of wealth and power.

Modest, unambitious, except in the development of his business, shy, Sir Thomas for a long time resisted all these blandishments, and continued to come every morning to his office at eight and to leave it at eight in the evening; and neither the theatre nor society knew him or saw him.

But at last he was approached on what is his soft side; and that is his love of the poor — those poor with whose wants his own early experiences gave him all the sympathy that comes from common experiences. And charity came in a very beautiful and irresistible embodiment in the person of Queen Alexandra — that fascinating figure which has held the whole-hearted admiration of England for two generations, and is as fresh to-day after half a century as on the first day just fifty years ago when her divine beauty of youth first captured every London heart.

There were all kinds of festivities—especially for the children of the poor—to celebrate the jubilee of Queen Victoria; and Sir Thomas took a magnificent hand in them by a princely gift of $500,000 to one of the charities which Queen Alexandra was particularly interested in establishing.

Sir Thomas had at last taken the plunge into the tempestuous seas of London social life; and he was not allowed to turn back. It was one of the advantages, in contrast with the disadvantages, of the length of time he had to traverse before he reached the throne, that Kign Edward learned to know every section of society in his kingdom; that he was thus trained in affability, in social knowledge, in experience of life; and that he was able to recognize a real man in all classes.

His predecessors had been brought up in the narrowness of the eighteenth century, in its limitation of acquaintance, in its straight-jacket of antique etiquette; he was a modern man born into a democratic epoch; and he had the nimble intelligence to realize his epoch and to move with it. And thus there were around him and close to him the great trader as well as the great nobleman; and Sir Thomas Lipton entered the charmed circle.

When, finally, Sir Thomas resolved to unburden himself of a little of the cares of a great and gigantic business, and when he went to the public for additions to his business, there was one of the most curious booms that have ever been seen. People of every class tumbled over one another in their eagerness to get an allotment.

After relieving himself of some of his responsibilities, Lipton became a great yachtsman. Every summer, his boats were seen at the regattas in Germany and France as well as in Britain.

A Veil and a Small Hat.

When putting on the veil arrange the gathers in position; then place the thumbs just below the ears, allowing the veil to rest in the spaces between them and the first fingers. Raise the hands slowly, gathering the veil into tidy folds until the center of the back of the hat is reached; then tie the veil once, tuck away the ends neatly and pin them inside the brim of the hat.

Take a flat veil brooch and secure the folds with this just above the neck. This helps to keep both the hair and veil tidy and does away with that very unsightly "screw" which one sees under the chins of so many women of this country, but never in the toilet of an immaculate Frenchwoman.

The Housekeeper's Hands.

Mutton tallow with a little sulphur added is healing and whitening. When the hard work of the day is done rub well into the skin. Keep a supply of Indian meal near your soap dish. Every time you wash your hands rub the meal thickly on them after soaping.

Wooden Spoon.

It is wisest to use a wooden spoon for all stirring purposes in the kitchen, as acids do not form compounds which are dangerous to digestion with wood.

Fly Paper Stains.

Alcohol will remove all stains caused by fly paper sticking to fabrics.

TENDERS FOR DREDGING

SEALED TENDERS, addressed to the undersigned, and endorsed "Tender for Dredging, Little Current," will be received until 4.00 P.M., on Tuesday, August 12, 1913, for dredging required at Little Current, Ontario.

Tenders will not be considered unless made on the forms supplied, and signed with the actual signatures of the tenderers.

Combined specification and form of tender can be obtained on application to the Secretary, Department of Public Works, Ottawa. Tenders must include the towing of the plant to and from the work. Dredges and tugs not owned and registered in Canada shall not be employed in the performance of the work contracted for. Contractors must be ready to begin work within thirty days after the date they have been notified of the acceptance of their tender.

Each tender must be accompanied by an accepted cheque on a chartered bank, payable to the order of the Honourable the Minister of Public Works, for five per cent (5 per cent) of the contract price, which will be forfeited if the person tendering decline to enter into a contract when called upon to do so, or fail to complete the work contracted for. If the tender be not accepted the cheque will be returned.

The Department does not bind itself to accept the lowest or any tender.

By order,
R. C. DESROCHERS,
Secretary.

After using three packages, I felt relieved and continued until I had used five packages when a complete cure was the result after years of doctoring failed. ### How To Rest.

Sir James Crichton-Browne, the eminent physician, has been telling us how we ought to rest. "There ought to be before sleep," he says, "a period of subsidence, a settling down, and no strain or stress on the nerves, not merely in the case of children, but also in that of grown-up people. There should be no work done after seven or eight o'clock in the evening, but a little recreation or amusement, a little novel-reading, or a soothing cigar."

WEDDINGS—PERSONAL

The Toronto Star of Friday reports the wedding of a former Peterborough young lady, as follows:

VON BUSECK—FOORD.

The marriage was solemnized of Elizabeth May, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William H. Foord, 1643 Yonge street, to Mr. Albert Edwin Von Buseck of Kansack, Sask. The bride entered the prettily decorated drawing room on her father's arm as Mendelssohn's wedding march was played by Mr. Adams. Her gown was of white satin trimmed with shadow lace and pearls, and she wore the traditional veil and orange blossoms and carried a bouquet of orchids and lilies of the valley. She was unattended, except for little Miss Emily Adams, who carried a flower basket in which lay the wedding ring. The officiating clergyman was the Rev. Robert M. Campbell of the Presbyterian church, Davisville. Supper was served in a marquee on the lawn. Mrs. Foord, wearing mulberry crepe de chene and corsage bouquet of sweet peas, received her guests, who were present, from Orillia Peterborough, Berlin and Buffalo. Among the many bridal gifts were pieces of silver from the Strollers Club and also Rebecca Lodge, with both of which the bride was connected. When Mr. and Mrs. Von Buseck left to take the train for Peterborough, the latter was wearing a delft blue suit of Bedford cord and hat to match. They will be at home to their friends at 1643 Yonge street on August 5, before leaving for Kansack, Sask., where Mr. Von Buseck holds a responsible position with the C. N. R.

Mr. H. F. Cole of New York is in the city.

Mrs. J. J. Hickie and daughter, Dorothy, of Boston, are spending the summer at Kawartha Lakes.

Mr. J. H. Ruck of Lakewood, Ohio, passed through the city to-day, en route to Kawartha Lakes.

Miss Addie A. Dickson, 321 Rogers street, East City, has returned home from Toronto, where she has been spending the past three weeks with her uncle, Mr. G. W. Hunter and aunt, Mrs. Taylor.

Rev. C. J. Phelan left yesterday for Toronto to attend the meeting of the Ontario Executive of the Catholic Order of Foresters, and leaves there to-day for Louisville, Ky. to attend the International Convention to be held in that city. He is one of the delegates from Ontario.

AT STONEY LAKE

Every up-boat is crowded with passengers, which shows that Stony Lake is losing none of its popularity.

Mr. Clarence Reil, of Toronto, is constructing a cottage on a small island adjoining that of Professor Louis Stewart.

Contractor Ayott is making good progress on Mr. H. W. Stock's new cottage at Kawartha Park.

Rev. A. W. Mackenzie of the Grove School, Lakefield, is building an addition to his cottage.

A study of the movements of wharves in Stony Lake is a very interesting subject. Last year there was a general migration among the floating variety; many of them having been found long distances from their homes. This year the permanent wharves tried to show what they could do. Most of them became afflicted with the common ailment known as the "Heaves." Mr. Harry Fitzgerald's prize package wharf, new last year, was heaved up fully a foot at one end. The piers under the launch house at Mr. Richard Hall's island are tilted over at an angle of forty-five degrees. McCracken's Landing structure had one end elevated about a foot, exposing a row of stones, while the Kawartha Park landing place has been thrown so high in the air that one needs to carry an extension ladder to reach its dizzy height.

Mr. Richard Lees, of Peterborough, has opened his cottage, "Waterleebrae," fo rthe season.

Music AND Drama

Direct from London with all English company comes Mr. Lawrence Brough who will be seen in the city early in the approaching season, during his all Canadian tour. 'The Lady from Ostend," in which this celebrated London actor will be seen here is the vehicle which carried Mr. Brough to popular success in London. Miss Olga Esme, another London favorite, has been selected by Mr. Brough as his leading lady. The Brough family has long been noted in England as representative of what is most talented on the London stage, and Mr. Lawrence Brough should be heartily welcomed here by all who are in sympathy with the movement to introduce more English companies into Canada, and by all who enjoy a hearty laughing entertainment.

The tour is under the direction of the Oswald Brooks agency, who are also bringing over this season Mr. Matheson Lang, another celebrated London actor who is also famous in South Africa and Australia, and the Quinlan Opera Company of two hundred people.

WESTERN CANADA'S BUMPER WHEAT CROP

Thousands of Men Required—This Year's Harvest Promises to be the Largest in the History of Canada

According to present indications the wheat crop of 1913 will be the greatest ever harvested in Manitoba, Saskatchewan or Alberta, thus requiring the farm laborers of the East to assist in harvesting the world's bread basket.

The Governments of the respective Provinces state that many thousand men will be required for this year's harvest. These will have to be principally recruited from Ontario, and the prosperity of Canada depends on securing labor promptly. The Canadian Pacific, on which Company will fall practically the entire task of transporting the men to the West, is already making special arrangements for this year. Excursions from points in Ontario to Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta will be run and special trains operated, making the trip in about thirty-six hours and avoiding any change of cars or transfers. This will be a day shorter than any other route. Dates, rates and conditions will be announced in a few days. eod

MR. AND MRS. JAS. RICHARDSON RETURN FROM ENGLAND

Mr. and Mrs. Jas. Richardson, and son, Stanley, returned this morning to their home at 144 Rubidge street after a three months' trip to England. They visited in Liverpool, London, Tunbridge Wells, Brighton, Hastings, Windsor and other points.

While in London they witnessed the big demonstration in Hyde Park in protests to the disestablishment of the Welsh church and they were also in London on the visit of the President of France. They also saw suffragette demonstrations and viewed some of the damage wrought by the militants at Tunbridge Wells and Hurst Park where pavilions were burned.

On the return, the Empress of Britain made one of her record trips, although the big liner ran into a fog for twelve hours. Nearly two hundred ice bergs were reported.

Mrs. G. H. Keenan, of Liverpool came to Peterborough with them to join her husband.

TWENTY-TWO COAL MINERS PERISH

One Widow Lost Three Sons---Some of the Rescuers Were Rendered Unconscious---All Bodies Are Recovered.

Canadian Press Despatch.

GLASGOW, SCOTLAND, Aug. 4.—Twenty-two coal miners perished in a fire which broke out yesterday in the Mavis Valley pit of the Cadder Colliery here. The bodies were recovered to-day. Only one man escaped alive from those in the pit when the fire started. One widow lost three sons.

Rescuing parties passed through a severe ordeal owing to the intense heat and poisonous gas, most of them being brought to the surface unconscious.

DOUBLE EXPLOSION TAKES TOLL OF LIVES AT TOWER CITY, Pa.

Thirteen Miners Are Killed in First Blast and Five Others Who Go Heroically to Rescue of Their Comrades Are Killed in a Second Explosion.

TOWER CITY, Pa., Aug. 3.—(Can. Press) Nineteen men were killed and two seriously injured yesterday in a double explosion in the East Brookside Mine of the Philadelphia and Reading Coal and Iron Co., near here. Thirteen men died in the first explosion and five went to their death in the second blast after an heroic attempt to rescue the first victims. One of the rescuers escaped alive, but died a few hours later. The dead:

JOHN LORENZE, 60, mine superintendent.

DANIEL McGINLEY, 48, fire boss, Tower City; leaves wife and seven children.

HENRY MURPHY, 50, fire boss, Tower City, leaves wife and three children.

JOHN FARRELL, 48, foreman, Tower City; leaves wife and ten children.

HOWARD HAND, 21, Muir, single.

HARRY HAND, 24, miner, Muir; leaves wife and three children.

JACOB KOPENHAVER, 26, shaftman, Reinerton; leaves wife and two children.

THOMAS BEHNY, 30, miner, Reinerton; leaves wife and two children.

DANIEL FARLEY, 42, fire boss, Tower City; leaves wife and six children.

JOHN FESSLEY, 46, miner, Tower City; leaves wife and two children.

Nine Italian workmen.

Two Explosions.

It is not known exactly what caused the explosions, but the miners at the colliery are inclined to the belief that the first explosion was that of dynamite and the second was caused by gas which had been liberated by the dynamite explosion. The dead were scattered about for a distance of about a quarter of a mile. Only three men were taken out of the mine alive, and one of these died on the way to the hospital.

Supt. John Lorenz, 60 years of age, was in the mine when the first explosion occurred. He was rescued several hours later. Harry Schoffstall was another taken out alive. Both were burned and bruised and Lorenz died later.

It is possible that the real story of the explosion may never be known as all who were in a position to know were killed.

While the impression seems to be that the first explosion was that of dynamite, it is also possible that it might have been due to gas. The men were killed in three different ways. Some of them were violently hurled against the side of the tunnel in which they were working, and crushed. Some were burned to death by the explosion of gas, and others were suffocated by the after damp, which always follows an explosion in the mines.

All but five of the men killed were readily identified, and it is believed that the other five might easily be identified also, if any of their relatives had lived in the vicinity. With a few exceptions all of the foreign workmen were brought here from a distance.

Gave Up Search.

Superintendent Lorenz and Foreman Farrell were together when the explosions occurred, and Farrell was killed instantly, dropping dead at the side of Lorenz.

At 9 o'clock rescuing parties came out after a futile search and gave it as their opinion that both Farley and Fessler were dead.

Hillary Zimmerman, who was the only man in the affected mine at the time who escaped with practically no injury, was standing near the slope when the first explosion occurred, and he was hurled a distance of ten feet by its force, but was not rendered unconscious.

One theory of the explosion is that when the muckers were cleaning up the debris their shovels struck a piece of unexploded dynamite and set off the 175 pounds which the men had taken in with them.

Millionaire Shoots Himself.

SELKIRK, Aug. 2.—(Special.)—Arthur Stewart, aged 49, one of the most prominent financiers in Western Canada, founder of the National Trust Co., Ltd., Winnipeg, and formerly director and manager of that institution, was found by his wife at 6.30 this morning lying on a couch with a bullet hole thru the temple and a 32-calibre revolver lying on his breast.

Mr. Stewart had been complaining recently of heart trouble and worrying considerably over financial troubles, which is the only cause that can be assigned for taking his own life. At the time of death Mr. Stewart was rated at $1,000,000.

George L. Stewart, only son of deceased, is a student at McGill University and is at present in Montreal. Funeral arrangements are pending until word is received from him.

BLACKMAIL THE CAUSE

EL PASO, Texas, August 2.—An American who arrived from Chihuahua today states that the cause of the arrest of Charles Bissell, manager of the Mines Company of America, and Bernard J. MacDonald, manager of the San Patriotic Mining Company, which was made several days ago by soldiers of General Pascual Orozco at Santa Rosalia, was because they declined to accede to the demand of Orozco for a commission of five per cent. on the value of the bullion they intended to move from the Parral district.

Orozco is said to have offered the miners safe conduct to the border for a consideration. Bissell and MacDonald have, it is said, made affidavits to President Huerta, setting forth Orozco's demand. General Mercado, Governor of Chihuahua, who is said to look on Orozco with suspicion, has collected the facts regarding the arrest and is merely detaining the mining men until he receives definite orders in the case from Huerta.

Bissell and MacDonald are said to be comfortably situated in jail and allowed everything except their freedom.

PRECIOUS BABYLONIAN RELICS NOW IN AMERICA

Further Light is Thrown on Creation Stories by Discovery of a Relic of Babylonia—World Created by a Dark-Haird Woman, it Says.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 3.—(Special.)—A newly discovered tablet now at the museum of the University of Pennsylvania, brought to this city from Babylonia, gives what is now believed to be the first story of the creation of the world, as well as one of the most wonderful accounts of civilization as it existed in 2500 B.C.

According to this story the world was created by a woman goddess. She was a brunette, because the account says that her hair was black. It is stated that when the world became so wicked that it had to be destroyed the male gods, angry at the goddesses, opened the flood gates of heaven and drowned but one man and his family.

There are many parallelisms between this story and that of the Book of Genesis. Dr. Arno Poebel of Johns Hopkins university, who has deciphered this tablet, has declared that, in his estimation, it is the most remarkable story of the creation which the world ever has known.

Women Had Equal Rights.

The tablet tells of the peculiarities of the women of those days. It says that they had equal rights with men, thus providing the suffragists with an additional weapon for argument. The history in 2500 B.C. says nothing of militant methods.

It contains beautiful epic poems, such as characterize the Psalms, and it is now thought that the Hebrew language, which came into use centuries after this Sumerian tablet was written, copied its style. In this way the archaeologists account for the writings of the Scripture in its present form.

The tablet relates all the essentials of the story in Genesis. It tells of the creation of mankind first, then the animals, and then the ground.

Flood of Seven Days.

It tells of a flood that lasted only seven days, instead of 40, or a year, as some historians have insisted took place. It tells of the rewards to Noah, after he had been saved: of how the ark was constructed and way Noah was selected for salvation.

It declares that one prehistoric king ruled 64,000 years, which makes Methuselah look like an infant. It declares that the number of years which elapsed from the creation to the flood were 460,000.

Parts of the tablet are missing, and the university authorities have sent again to Constantinople, in the hope that the fragments may be located in the tombs at Nippur or at the college at the Turkish capital, where many relics from the excavation have been taken.

The late J. P. Morgan is said to have paid $27,000 for a small portion of one of these fragments, which he bought in Constantinople.

One of the World's Show Places

Emperor Falls
Mount Robson Park Canadian Rockies
Jasper Park Canadian Rockies
One of the Mammoth Glaciers Mount Robson Park

A pictorial paradise is just now being opened by the construction of the Grand Trunk Pacific through central British Columbia. From the moment the train leaves Edmonton you feel that you are penetrating a new territory. At Edson, the first divisional point west of Edmonton, you get a glimpse of the glorious Rockies. Presently, you know that you are entering the last wonderland of the West. You are not "climbing," to be sure, you simply thread your way through the valleys and canyons among the snow-capped peaks that pierce the British Columbian blue. They rise abruptly in places; they leave the land lying level, or nearly level, beside the lakes and rivers and sunny vales. Down the Fraser River the road remains near the water level, but the mountains keep rising higher and higher, culminating in that King of the Rockies—Mount Robson, which reaches 13,700 feet above the sea. Near Prince George, the Fraser swings sharply to the south; the railway bearing steadily westward, passes down the famous, fertile Bulkley Valley. Here cattle range out in the open the year round. Wild fruit abounds. Near Hazleton the Bulkley empties into the Skeena, the mighty river of the north, down which the Grand Trunk Pacific trains are now travelling to Prince Rupert, which is 483 miles nearer to Yokahama than any other Pacific port, and which has finest natural harbor on the coast, if not in the world. The chief industry of Prince Rupert will probably be the fishing industry. An immense cold storage plant and expensive canneries have already been established at this new port, and it is expected that with the opening of the line through to Halifax that a trainload of fish will be forwarded over this new trail every day in the year.

Foley, Welch & Stewart are building a line from Prince George to Vancouver. This will be the southern outlet for the Grand Trunk Pacific and will give that company a splendid route between Vancouver and the East.

Mount Robson has already attracted the attention of mountain climbers, scientists and tourists. The Smithsonian Institute of Washington, D.C., has a party in the Yellowhead Range at this writing, and the Canadian Alpine Club are holding their annual camp in this territory during 1913. It is conceded by all who have visited this new and magnificent district that it is bound to rival other mountain fastnesses and will in the near future become one of the show places of the world.

SERIOUS SITUATION IS REPORTED FROM HONG KONG

Hundreds of Missionaries Arriving from Disaffected Districts.

MUTINY FEARED

International Fleet Has Been Reinforced by Men-of-War.

Canadian Press Despatch.

HONG KONG, Aug. 4.—The situation here is serious and all trains and vessels leaving this port are packed with refugees. Missionaries recalled from the disaffected districts are arriving here by hundreds. Lights were cut off at midnight and the people fear mutiny.

At Canton, soldiers are patrolling streets, and men from British and French warships are guarding the foreign section, where valuables worth millions are stored. The International fleet lying off the city has been reinforced by the arrival of American, German, French and Japanese men of war.

Seventy traitorous soldiers were shot last Friday.

LIQUOR THE CHIEF CAUSE

Four-Fifths of Kansas Convicts in Prison Because "Booze."

LANSING, Kan., Aug. 3.—(Special.) At least four-fifths of the prisoners in the Kansas State penitentiary owe the loss of their liberty to liquor, in the opinion of the Rev. J. D. (Jerry) Botkin, newly appointed warden of the institution. The new warden will keep two things uppermost in his mind during his supervision of the inmates—to break up the drink habit and to teach the men to like work.

Warden Botkin declares there are but two answers to the question, "What's he in for?" These are, he says, "He got drunk," or "He did not work."

"These prisoners may or may not have been habitual drinkers," Botkin said. "Quite often it is the man who drinks only occasionally that liquor gets into trouble. Its influence over him is greater.

"Few busy men are criminals. They have neither the time nor inclination. I believe that work is a habit, and we are going to drill work into the men here so that they will go out and continue to work. We will teach every prisoner some definite line of work."

The new warden has been a minister 40 years. He is a Democrat, and was defeated for governor of the state by W. R. Stubbs.

Bulgaria's Demands.

BUCHAREST, Aug. 3.—Bulgaria's counter-proposal, presented at the Balkan peace conference here, is regarded as constituting her maximum demands, and, consequently their abatement to some extent is considered pretty certain.

Peace will be signed, according to the opinion expressed in diplomatic circles, on the basis that points regarding which an agreement cannot be attained, shall be reserved for decision by the great powers.

Will Help England.

VANCOUVER, B.C., Aug. 2.—Over thirty thousand people visited the battleship New Zealand yesterday. In the forenoon the officers were entertained by the council of North Vancouver to luncheon at the famous Capilano canon.

Replying to the toast to the royal navy, Captain Halsey took exception to the statement that Canada should be ashamed of itself in that it had allowed a small dominion like New Zealand to get ahead of it in the manner of contribution to the imperial navy.

Canada, he was convinced, intended to do something, and in whatever way it assisted the motherland he was certain it would be right. The choice was one of the Canadian people and he was sure they would do the right thing.

Aquatic sports for men were held in the afternoon and were attended by twenty thousand persons. At night the city council tendered a banquet to the officers, which was attended by many prominent citizens.

In Brother's Clothes.

MONTREAL, August 2.—Cutting off her curly brown hair and changing from her own dress to a suit belonging to her younger brother, fifteen-year-old Miss Benedictine Welsman disappeared from her parents' home early Tuesday evening. Although police and detectives have been searching the city no trace of her had been found today.

Always of a romping nature and ever ready for tomboyish larks, she became known to her friends as "Benny," and strongly objected to being called by her feminine name.

WILL MEET IN REGINA

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld., Aug. 2.—(Can. Press)—The closing session of the sovereign grand lodge of Orangemen was held this morning. Regina was selected as next year's meeting place by a small majority, Ottawa and Niagara Falls putting up a determined effort to land the honor. Last year's officers were re-elected, with the exception of Thompson of Toronto, who becomes treasurer in place of Parkhill, deceased. Harper takes Thompson's place, and Eaton of Winnipeg becomes deputy secretary.

In the closing hours of the session the grand master voiced the sentiments of the delegates in expressing in highly complimentary terms his appreciation of the reception accorded them during their stay in Newfoundland. Many of the clerical delegates remained over to occupy local pulpits tomorrow.

In the afternoon four more were selected for the exclusive distinction of being received into the ranks of the Caughnawaga Indians as chiefs of the tribe.

Those honored with the doctor of laws degrees were: Dr. Helge Backstrom, professor of mineralogy and petrography in the University of Stockholm; Dr. Jas. Furman Kemp, professor of geology in Columbia University; Prof. Alfred Lacroix, of the Natural History Museum of Paris; Prof. Alfred Bergeat of the University of Konigsberg, and Prof. Alfred Harker, lecturer on petrology at the University of Cambridge.

A. P. Brace, W. E. Wilson. Mr. Wilson will be the Conservative temperance candidate in the local legislature to oppose Hon. R. R. Gamey. # REDUCTION IN EXPRESS RATES OCTOBER 15

Canadian Press Despatch.

WASHINGTON, D.C. Aug. 4.—A reduction in express rates, which will cost the companies full twenty-six million dollars annually approximately, sixteen per cent. of their gross revenue, was ordered by the Interstate Commerce Commission to-day to become effective on or before October fifteen this year. Notable reforms in practices are also ordered.

FARMER SMOTHERED

Thomas Fowler Meets Death While Working in Gravel Pit.

ST. THOMAS, Aug. 3.—Thos. Fowler, aged twenty-six, son of Jas. Fowler, a farmer near Glanworth, in Westminster Township, was smothered to death in a cave-in of gravel in a pit from which he was drawing gravel yesterday. He had gone to the pit at 6.30 a.m., and when he failed to return either for dinner or supper his two sisters became alarmed, and his father on returning from St. Thomas, where he had spent the day, went to the pit. He found his son's body buried under several feet of gravel, and the horses and partly-loaded wagon standing nearby. Several feet of gravel had fallen around the wagon, preventing the horses from leaving the scene. The young man had drawn no gravel from the pit that day, and it is supposed the accident occurred early in the morning. Deceased's mother is at present in Washington State on a visit. The coroner has decided that an inquest is unnecessary.

MADE SQUAWS WORK

Piute Braves Soon Surrender Their Jobs to Women.

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 3.—Piute Indians as substitutes for Mexican section hands are being tried in the Nevada desert. The Mexicans were deemed unsatisfactory because they would drop their tools and rest the instant the "boss" got far enough away so that he could not hit them with a shovel handle.

With the Indians on the job however the work went along just the same boss or no boss.

Nevertheless the Mexicans are again on the payroll and the Indians are taking their traditional ease.

After glowingly watching five days of splendid work by his Piute bucks the section boss left them the other day. Returning twenty-four hours later he found the suffragette members of the Piute tribe doing the work on the railway, while the bucks were gathered in a poker game at one side of the track.

Noted Australian Dead.

LONDON, Aug. 3.—The death of Sir William Lyne at the advanced age of seventy, which was reported from Sydney today, has removed one of the most notable figures in Australian politics. For thirty-three years he had sat continuously in Parliament, and met his first defeat in the recent federal elections. A protectionist to the core, he was responsible for the present Australian tariff, which extends a handsome preference to British goods. Since the Deakin-Cook fusion he had allied himself with the Labor party.

TORONTO EXHIBITION RECEIVES SEVERE BLOW FROM THE FIRE FIEND

Sheep Building is Origin of Conflagration Which Spreads to Poultry House, Causing Damage of a Hundred Thousand Dollars.

TORONTO, Aug. 4.—With the exhibition three weeks away, two buildings disappeared by fire Sunday afternoon.

Starting in the sheep building near last year's eastern entrance the flames galloped thru the long wooden aisles, jumped ten feet to the poultry building, lingered at the door and window sills a moment, and then raged thru that brick and stone shell. In fifteen minutes the fire was at its height, and the department, delayed by a belated alarm, was [illegible]. A hundred thousand dollars' damage was done.

Temporary sheds will be put up for the poultry show, [illegible] erected in the open space north of the grand stand where the horse sheds used to be, for the sheep.

Of the sheep building nothing remains but charcoal and twisted tin. Naked brick and stone foundation walls, bulged in places and ragged at the edges with torn metal coping and enclosing an unroofed pool in which charred wood floats, tell of the futility of semi-fireproofing, as tried in the once handsome poultry structure. This building has been used two years and cost about $70,000. Its walls held, except for some few bricks that fell before the heat, but they may have to be razed. The floor and roof of wood enclosing many layers of chicken coops, besides sawdust, lumber and other materials used in buildings under construction were choice fuel for the flames, and the unprotected steel work of the interior, whitened with heat, [illegible] and bent into fantastic shapes.

No one who would tell could say how the fire began. Sparks from a passing locomotive on the depressed Grand Trunk tracks run alongside the buildings set things going is the theory of some. But firemen and police held to the opinion that incendiary work was responsible. In the last two weeks the city has been spotted with fires, some of them costly, that have started from no traceable cause. On the face of these, so fire experts believe, there have been characteristics of deliberate fire setting. Deputy Chief Noble thinks it is the work of boys, not men.

With the wind sweeping from the northeast it is not likely that the firemen could have done more than isolate the Exhibition blaze to the two buildings, even tho they had been warned sooner. A good 15 minutes [illegible] around before they were at the [illegible] and four minutes of that they used [illegible]. The [illegible] of the time was wasted after a park visitor saw the smoke [illegible]. He chased from one fire alarm box to another. There were no keys in any of them. They were locked to keep the boys from [illegible] alarms or [illegible].

Running frantically among the maze of many sided buildings he was seen by Special Constable Wright, the lone daytime patrolman of the Exhibition grounds.

Wright hastened on his bicycle closer to the scene of the fire. He was at the waterfront and rang in the fire warning from a Dominion signal box at the back of the art building, which is next west the poultry building. That was at 2.20. The private protection system, which is a G. N. W. operated company, phoned headquarters and they, at 2.21, sent three halls out, Cowan, Dundas and Portland. Four minutes later a call went in from the corner of Strachan avenue and Wellington street. Somebody from there had seen the fire, now flaming high, and that emptied six more fire houses.

There are four or five fire alarm signal boxes scattered around the Exhibition, but the keys that turn them were removed a long while ago, as boys used to turn in false alarms. The public cannot use these boxes, but they can ring in an alarm in the usual way from the Dominion signal boxes—if they can find them. They are the regular red signals, but they are enclosed in a plain wooden box that hasn't even a remote appearance to a fire alarm box.

As a result of a fire which broke out in the Robert Crean hat factory, 12 to 18 Balmuto street, on Saturday afternoon, and which could not be put out thru want of water pressure, about 200 hat operators were put out of employment and property amounting to $250,000 destroyed.

The fire broke out in the felt building, which was of frame, and spread to a three storey brick factory built five years ago, where it burnt itself out while the firemen looked on and helped pull down the walls.

The employes all left the factory at 1 o'clock. Fire escapes, if there were any, could not be seen from the street at 3 o'clock.

TRAPPIST HEAD DIES

Rev. Father Oger, of Oka, Was a Famous Catholic Monk.

MONTREAL, Aug. 2.—(Special.) The Rev. Father Dom Antoine Oger, the first mitred abbot of the Trappist Order at Oka, Que., died last night. He has been at death's door for two weeks. He was the most famous Trappist of the Dominion and one of the most brilliant students in the order. He made his monastery a most powerful institution.

His name in the world was Pierre Oger. He was born at La Jumellière, in France, on June 17, 1852. His course in the famous seminary at Mongazon was a brilliant one. He was ordained a priest on Dec. 22, 1877, and for several years continued his ministry in France, then was appointed head of the Trappist Order here, in 1892. He was the first mitred abbot here.

REASONS ARE PURELY BUSINESS

LONDON, Aug. 2.—The only London paper to comment on England's refusal to be represented at the San Francisco exposition is The Daily News, which says:

"The American press has jumped to the conclusion that the refusal of the British government to take part in the Panama exposition is meant as a protest against the American omission to arbitrate the Panama tolls difference. This is preposterous. The true reasons are purely business ones, and have no political flavor at all. It would be very unfortunate if the American people were to persuade themselves, either that we had given up all hope of arbitration on the tolls question, or that we have any thought of retaliating with a sort of boycott."

Erin Fire-swept.

GUELPH, Ont., Aug. 2.—A disastrous fire swept over Erin Village at five o'clock this morning, completely destroying the following establishments:

Steele and Foster, dry goods and groceries; J. Stevens boots and shoes; John Horner, butcher; C. J. Blackwood, implements; the Queen's Hotel, proprietor, S. Ridler.

The origin of the fire is a mystery.

The loss is about thirty-five thousand, insurance not over twenty thousand.

Women's Catholic League.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Aug. 2.—(Can. Press.)—During the twelfth national convention of the American Federation of Catholic Societies in Milwaukee, Aug. 10 to 14, a National Catholic League for women will be organized and steps will be taken for the organization of an International Catholic Federation, in which the federations of Ireland, England, Germany, France, Italy, Austria, Belgium, Canada and South America will be represented, it was announced tonight by Secretary Matre.

Conjuror Killed.

ST. CATHARINES, Aug. 3.—(Special.) Albert Robinson, aged 63, unmarried, a retired professor of legerdemain, was thrown out of a buggy by a horse which became frightened at a concrete mixer, and fractured his skull. He died at the hospital a few hours later.

FREIGHTER CRASHES INTO CANAL

Smashed the Gates and Dropped Fourteen Feet.

ST. CATHARINES, Aug. 3.—(Special.) The steel freighter Lehigh, bound for Montreal with coal, crashed into the foot gates of lock 23, Welland Canal, at Thorold, Saturday afternoon, smashing the upper portion of both gates and bending them over sufficiently to allow the force of water from the upper level to wash the big boat over the remaining eight feet of the gates into the level below. In making this dive the steamer dropped 14 feet, bow first, shipping a quantity of water.

Righting herself the Lehigh was swept the full length of the short level below lock 22, which the steamer Fairmount was just leaving. To avoid hitting the Fairmount, the captain of the Lehigh steered his boat into the stone abutment, knocking a hole in her hull below the water line. The steamer is leaking badly but is being kept from sinking by the pumps. The Lehigh is loaded too deeply to go into the Port Dalhousie dock, and it is a question whether she can be taken to the dock at Kingston, altho the captain will try to make Montreal. She is owned by the Anchor Line of Buffalo, and has been thru the canal three times before this season.

Navigation was resumed at 8.30 this morning.

2,000 Asked to Strike.

WHEELING, W. Va., Aug. 2.—Officers of the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers stated early today that many organizers and workers would be sent at once to Weirton, W. Va., in an effort to persuade the two thousand men employed in the plant of the Phillips Sheet and Tin Plate Company there to strike in sympathy with the striking employes of the same company at the Clarksburg, W. Va., and Steubenville, Ohio, mills. Yesterday was the time set for the strike, but it was stated that less than fifty men left their places. Amalgamated men said this was due to a desire to have them finish out the week.

The works are closely guarded and Sheriff Mercer today added twenty deputies to his force. Scouts from the union side, it was said, were prevented from entering, but there were so many of them that they expected to get into the works before nightfall.

Two Crossing Victims.

GUELPH, Ont., Aug. 2.—(Special.)—"We find that John Henry Donaven was accidentally killed at Moffatt station by a Canadian Pacific railway train on July 25th, and that his wife, Pearl Donaven, was injured at the same time and died, as the result of such injury about nine hours afterwards. We also recommend that the crossing be protected by an electric bell at once."

Shot by Employe.

BIGGAR, Aug. 2.—Glen Judge, a homesteader, living near Springwater, was shot and instantly killed, yesterday eighteen miles southwest of here with a 22 rifle in the hands of a Bohemian who was working for him.

Nothing much can be learned of the accident as the Bohemian speaks very little English. The shooting is believed to be accidental, and caused thru scuffling when on their way to work, resulting in a gun exploding and the death of Judge.

CAN CANADA STAND ALONE?

Ontario is spending $5,000,000 in developing New Ontario, and it will find in a few years that it has made a good investment.

To a certain type of patriotic Canadian this way of spending money is the only way that appeals to their imagination and generosity.

Only the other day one of our journals, the Grain Grower's Guide, argued that the $35,000,000 which the Naval Aid Bill proposed to invest in the British Navy would be better employed in developing some of our prairies.

Without desiring to underestimate the importance of territorial development, it might be justly affirmed that Canada at this juncture in its rapid progress needs a season of circumspection.

There is such a thing as over-growing, or, more correctly, too much growth in one direction. Those who are eager to class Canada among the great nations of the world, even though they desire to be nominally within the Empire, do not fully realize the claim they are making.

Admitting the great possibilities of our vast acres and the capacity of our people, these are for the most part only possibilities and capacities, not full-grown realities and firmly established achievements.

In other words, Canada as a world power, even in the commercial sense, has no existence apart from the British Empire.

Realizing this, Sir Wilfrid Laurier, with the far-sight of a statesman, sought to establish a separate and self sustained Canadian navy. Whatever may have been the cause this navy proved an abortion and became a joke, even to Canadians themselves. The experiment failed. It matters not whether it failed through lack of support from Conservatives, the thing failed as a practical proposition satisfactory to all Canadians.

Now to return to our first point. If Canada is to develope along the lines laid down by the Grain Growers' Guide, she must be backed by capital and British capital has been and it is the only available capital. British capital is only lent on good securities, and with the British Empire, plus the British navy behind Canada money has been freely lent for the development of its resources.

If the foregoing reasoning is logical the only hope of Canada is to remain an integral part of the British Empire. This is not merely a hope, it is a privilege and a heritage in which every Canadian ought to be proud to share.

Here we have a navy which has since the days of Drake and Raleigh been the envy and admiration of the civilized world, and has done more to keep the planet in order than all the peace socieities that were ever thought of. The British navy has patrolled the seas for the last three hundred years, and has been the means of opening up new worlds for human enterprize; it has made America a white man's country, and has guarded the Sons of Briton in the remotest places of the earth; it is to-day a guarantee for the free and unmolested commerce of all nations.

Let us, by all means, enlarge our boundaries and look to our undeveloped resources, but let us not forget, in our hours of prosperity, the hand that shielded and fed us in the hard days behind, and that we need that protection and assistance as much to-day if we are to grow to our full stature.

THE TITANIC'S GRAVE

Some days ago, on a Sunday afternoon, the Cunard Liner, Franconia, lay with its engines stilled, over the grave of the ill-starred Titanic which went down with its human freight into the unfanthomed depths of the Atlantic, early last year. Fifteen hundred men and women stood with bowed heads while wreaths fashioned by members of the family of William T. Stead, the London editor, were cast into the sea from the deck of the vessel, the ship's band playing the immortal hymn "Nearer My God to Thee."

After the consternation and shock of the disaster, and after all the criticism and condemnation has subsided, there comes the calm contemplation of retrospection and reflection. Looking back upon that awful calamity in the light of this beautiful ceremony the uppermost thought in the mind is not merely of sorrow for the loss of so many lives, but of the inscrutable mystery of life and death.

It is doubtful if the deaths of most of those who went down on that terrible night were any more painful or as painful as many who have died in comfortable beds. Death is as enthraling a mystery under normal conditions as it is in such such sudden gigantic forms as shipwreck or earthquake.

If this calamity and the unmarked grave of the Titanic serves any purpose one will be to impress the passing traffickers of the deep with the uncertainty of life and a humble reverence for the great laws of nature which they are too apt to feel they have conquered and can ignore with impunity.

IS IT RETALIATION?

Great Britain is not the only nation that has declined to participate in the Panama Canal Exposition at San Francisco in 1915. Germany has now decided to stand out. Russia and Austria-Hungary are said to be inclined to follow suit. Japan also, owing to her strained relations with the United States, feels that she cannot urge her people to take part in the exposition.

Such a movement, which seems like a general boycott, may well upset the whole "show." But who is to blame if it does?

If a man opens a store and ignores the law or usages of the village in which he is situated, he must not expect special favors at the hands of the inhabitants. The Globe seems to think that Great Britain should be above such petty retaliations. But such counsels of perfection are all very well if the counsellor is an example of them, and the Globe is not.

EXCERPTS

A SOCIALISTIC PANIC

The Socialists are spreading their doctrines in Russia, with the result that many peasants are flocking to the cities in the belief that when there the state will supply them with food, clothing and shelter if work is not forthcoming. So great is the exodus from the rural centres that there is said to be a labor famine in some districts. The movers are in line for a lesson from experience that will make them glad to get back to the farms. To be unemployed or unemployable in a city is a hundred times worse than to be employed in the country. And state aid where it exists is poverty when compared with living by earning wages no matter how small.—Montreal Gazette.

"The Broken Melody."

Memories of "The Broken Melody," which the late Auguste Van Biene, the well-known actor-musician, played nearly 7,000 times, were revived by the recent sale in London of his famous 'cello, used throughout the long run of the piece. The 'cello, which was once the property of Piatti, was sold for $425, and is certainly one of the most interesting musical relics in the country.

His Luck.

"The birthstone is supposed to control our destinies. Now, what is your birthstone?"

"Judging from my life experience I am inclined to believe it is a brickbat."

Unlucky?

Damages of $60 were awarded at Westminster County Court, England, recently, to a man who was injured through a gate falling on him on Jan. 13th, and was off work till Feb. 13th.

A Costly Suit.

The cost of a British Cabinet Minister's full-dress uniform is $600.

An ocean of human influence surrounds us, and whenever we speak a word or perform an act, a wave is started which will travel through our lifetime, and never stop until it reaches the shores of eternity.

BOX CAR IN THE WAY

Jury Says G.T.R.'s Negligence Contributed to Death.

Inquest Into the Death of Mrs. Martha Perrin at Cobourg, When Auto Dashed Into a Train Results in a Finding That Both Chauffeur and Train Crew Tried to Avoid the Accident.

COBOURG, Aug. 1—"We find that the deceased, Mrs. Martha Perrin, came to her death on the University avenue crossing on Sunday, July 27, by being thrown from an automobile struck by a Grand Trunk train. We believe both the driver of the motor car and the train crew did all in their power to avoid the accident.

"We believe the accident would not have occurred had not a box car been placed so close to the street on the siding as to obstruct the view of the driver and train crew and we think the Grand Trunk Railway negligent in so placing their car. We recommend that the G.T.R. be compelled to use necessary precautions for the safety of the public by placing a gate or flagman on this particular crossing or stop all trains going south."

The above verdict was returned by Coroner Ferris' jury tonight on the death of Mrs. Martha Perrin, who was killed on University avenue crossing here on Sunday last.

A rider recommended that the town demand from the Dominion Railway Commission a joint subway under the new C.P.R. tracks and the present G.T.R. tracks.

Box Car Blocked View.

That he was a distance of only 8 yards from the backing train when he first saw it, was the statement of Ira Dawson, the driver of the motor car. He said his view of the track from University avenue was blocked by a box car standing on a siding near the street. Only a second before his wife had remarked on the danger of this particular crossing.

Dawson explained to the jury that in the front seat with him were his wife and four-year-old son, while in the back were Mrs. Brown, Mrs. Kerr, and on the left hand side, Mrs. Perrin who met death.

"Exactly what did you do when you saw the train?" questioned Crown Attorney Kerr. "Well, I was horrified, I jammed my foot on the brake, but it slipped off, I know I got it on again and used the brake. I really don't remember, I was so scared, at the time."

He declared he was going no faster than 10 miles an hour at the time, and altho everybody in the car was watching and listening for a train, no signal bell or warning of any kind was given.

The car, he said, was struck broadside on and carried down the track about fifty or sixty feet. Nobody excepting Mrs. Perrin was thrown out.

Asked by Coroner Ferris if she had not jumped, witness said he did not think so. He pulled her out from under the car, and he believed she was killed instantly.

Cross-examined by T. F. Hall, solicitor for the family of Mrs. Perrin, witness said he had driven a car since last spring. He was quite competent, he thought, to drive.

George Chaplin, who witnessed the accident from his veranda on Spring street, thought the box car on the corner prevented Dawson from seeing the backing train. He heard no warning signal given. He did not see the collision, but saw the train shoving the car down the track after the crash.

Mrs. Cockburn, a resident of Cobourg, testified to administering first aid to the first woman. According to witness, Mrs. Perrin was not instantly killed, but drank a little water, then lay down and expired shortly after. Witness heard no warning given.

She saw the box car on the siding and believed it would block the view of the track. Next morning she said it was shoved down the track.

That the clutch on the motor car was never released before the accident was the evidence of E. McGuire, motor expert. His examination of the car after the accident showed the clutch to be still in, and about three notches of gas and about seven of spark. If the engine was stalled at all, he said it must have been done by the foot brake.

McGuire, who went over the ground for the crown afterwards, stated that a man had to pass the box car before he could see a train 20 feet upon the track. This, he said, would not leave space sufficient in which to stop a motor car.

Gave Warning, Says Conductor.

Conductor Wagner of the freight train contradicted former witnesses, declaring that there was a warning whistle and bell given about twenty car lengths from the crossing. He also had he said, a brakeman on the leading car who, however, jumped into the coal car because he didn't want to see the people get hurt. Wagner disagreed with former witnesses who said that after passing the standing freight car they had but 24 feet in which to stop for a train. Twenty-four yards would be more accurate.

Brakeman Barr of the freight train stated that he was fulfilling his duties on the leading car. The box car, he said, was 15 feet from the corner, and he had to almost clear the corner before he could see the corner. He signalled to stop as soon as he saw the auto couldn't stop in time. The collision, he said, was almost at the moment he saw the motor car. Proper signals had been given, he said.

Engineer Hill swore he whistled for the crossing and kept his bell ringing continuously. His train was traveling about five miles per hour.

Vienna Men Will Visit Fair.

Vienna, Aug. 1.—It was announced today that the decision as to the Panama Pacific exposition will rest with a commission which is about to visit North America, composed of representatives of the government and Vienna chamber of commerce, is about to go to Toronto to visit an exposition there and from Canada will go to San Francisco. ### Hours Are Reduced.

MONTREAL, Aug. 1.—(Can. Press) —Commencing today the working hours at the Angus Shops of the C. P. R. were reduced from 51 to 40 per week.

This is in accordance with an agreement with the Federated Trades, that in the event of the state of work not requiring as large a staff of men the company shall reduce the hours, instead of curtailing the staff.

LIFE INSURANCE

THE pessimist and the prophet of woe have no rightful place in any consideration of the expediency of insuring life. But certain hard facts should be squarely faced by every man of moderate means who has anyone dependent on him. Hundreds of men are yearly rejected for life insurance who would have been accepted had they not delayed their applications until ill health had come upon them. Why do men in good condition take such a long chance of remaining well? It is an impressive fact that out of 8549 holders of policies in a leading life insurance company who died in the past year, only 64 died of old age. The remainder were carried away by disease or accident. Hence the wisdom of insuring early in life. The best years for saving are from 20 to 40, and no man should let that period pass without taking out an insurance policy. For that part of his career an endowment policy, which is likely to mature while he is still living and can secure the proceeds of it himself, is to be preferred.

There will probably always be poor old men. their ranks will be recruited from the successful men of an earlier date, and fortunate is he who has made certain provision by means of endowment insurance in the Sun Life Assurance Company of Canada.

The Best Detective Story of the Last Ten Years

She was not in the mood for discussion of the detective's quest this evening. The afternoon tea in Sherry's, the short ride home, including the turn in the park, with her two most persistent admirers, this cozy home-coming in the dusk of a winter day, however unreasonable the weather, had made her meditative. Even as she spoke to the detective and sank dreamily into a conversation chair beside the fire, her eyes strayed from Sands to Griswold, from Griswold to Sands, with the vague look of a woman trying to decide a momentous question. Griswold, ever ready to seize the smallest advantage, promptly occupied the other end of the chair. Facing the beautiful widow, he ignored both Britz and Sands, and he threw into the glances he showered upon the woman all the caress at his command.

Britz eyed Sands sharply before replying. He gripped his chin with thumb and finger, and seemed studying the big millionaire. As a matter of fact, he was watching Griswold. His gaze, even as it appeared focused most strongly on Sands, in reality was concentrated on the clubman who shared the serpentine chair with the wealthy widow.

"I want a plan of the room," said Britz at length. "A sketch of the safe, too. One of my men was to have made draughts for me, but I had to send him out of town at short notice on another end of the case. So," and he smiled slowly at his poor workmanship, "I'm doing the best I can."

"May I see what you have drawn?" asked Mrs. Missioner pleasantly. "Oh, Mr. Britz," she laughed, holding the paper at arm's length, "I'm afraid you'll never make an artist. I hope," she added hastily, "you have no professional pride on that point?"

"None whatever," returned the detective. He liked a woman with a sense of humor, and there was something about Mrs. Missioner that appealed to him anyway. "I told you I was merely a substitute."

Sands, towering above the widow on the hearthrug, shot a single, indifferent look at the drawing. Griswold's interest in it was echoed by him in so far that be took the diagram from her and examined it for a few seconds. Then, with a short, harsh laugh, he half turned to Britz, alternately bending and straightening the paper in his fingers.

"Ever hear of such a thing as perspective, detective?" he asked condescendinggly. Britz overlooked the air of superiority. He shook his head thoughtfully. There was inquiry in his eyes as he waited for Griswold's next words. "You'd starve to death in a studio," the clubman continued scornfully.

A crisp little laugh from Britz was the only reply. He crossed the floor and made a microscopic examination of the safe. Then he circled the room, tapping the walls again, moving pieces of furniture to look behind them, turning up corners of the rug, and gazing reflectively at the ceiling. All, the Indian servant appeared noiselessly at the door, started slightly at sight of the detective, and vanished as silently. Britz pretended not to see the Hindoo, but, in his movements about the room, he paused at the threshold, and glanced quickly down the passage. There was no one in sight.

All that time, Curtis Griswold, having ripped off the sheet on which Britz had drawn the rude diagram, was sketching idly as he talked in an undertone to the widow. His words held her attention. She took no note of the detective's wandering, the heavy silence of Sands, the soundless appearance and disappearance of the Hindoo. Ripples of laughter revealed that she, at least, was amused by what Griswold was saying. It was when Britz, having finished his detailed examination of the room, stopped close beside him that they looked up.

"I see you are an artist, Mr. Griswold," remarked the sleuth, his eyes on the paper under the clubman's pencil.

Griswold was genuinely surprised. For the first time, he seemed to become aware of the shape his idle tracing on the pad had taken. In the course of his brief chat with Mrs. Missioner, he had sketched clearly, accurately, artistically, not only the room, but the great safe at its farther end—sketched them far better in those few minutes than Britz could have done in as many hours. His drawing, almost automatic, showed the subconscious skill of—to say the least—an excellent amateur.

"Why, that's so," he said, holding up the drawing indifferently. His prowess with the pencil was an old story to the widow and his rival. Griswold tossed the pad and pencil on the table, and resumed his talk with Mrs. Missioner, turning the coldest of cold shoulders toward the sleuth.

But Britz was not to be shouldered aside so easily. He addressed himself to the widow, winning her instant attention with his first query:

"Has Miss Holcomb ever told you much about her last year in Smith?" he asked.

Mrs. Missioner's eyebrows arched.

"Nothing important enough to remember, Mr. Britz," she said, staring incredulously. The detective had already assured her warmly of his belief in Elinor's innocence. Could it be he was not going to clear the girl after all?

"You know nothing of her engagement to a Harvard undergraduate, then?" he persited.

The widow shook her head.

"Before her father lost his fortune, I mean," said the sleuth.

"Neither before nor after, Mr. Britz," replied Mrs. Missioner, rising impatiently. "Miss Holcomb, being a beauty, naturally received a great deal of attnetion, but I never heard of a betrothal."

Lieutenant Britz, still standing before the hearth, moved to let Mrs. Missioner pass. The widow pushed aside the heavy hangings of a window and peered into the twilight backed by the trees in the park. Britz, having moved, took another step. Those gray eyes of his shifted so rapidly they were upon the three others almost simultaneously. So gradually, so slowly did he approach the table that no one noticed his hand upon it. Resting that hand upon the edge, he went on.

"I am sorry you are not more minutely informed concerning Miss Holcomb's university days." Slowly his fingers extended until the tips rested on the tiny pad. "In a case like this, the smallest knowledge may be of value." Slowly, ever so slowly, the fingers contracted, drawing the pad with them. "Perhaps if you make an effort, you can recall something about the prisoner's past, Mrs. Missioner?" The pad was in his hand. Deftly, he tore off the top sheet and inclosed it in his fingers. As the widow started to speak, and entirely unobserved by Griswold or Sands, the detective slipped that agile hand into his pocket. When the hand came out, it was empty.

"No," said the rich woman with more emphasis than would be expected of her large good-nature, "I can recall nothing. I am sure there is nothing to recall. You must look elsewhere if you seek to forge links in a chain of evidence against Miss Holcomb. I have told you all I know—all I could possibly know."

"That being the case," said Britz briskly, "there is nothing more to say. With your permission, I will send a draughtsman to make plans of the room and diagrams of the safe." He hesitated. "I suppose these little art gems of mine," he resumed with a dry smile, "may as well meet the fate they deserve." With a quick movement, he threw all the sheets of paper on the table and the pad as well into the heart of the fire.

"Guess I'll say 'Good-afternoon,'" and with a bow to Mrs. Missioner and the coolest of nods to the men, he left the room, the widow's detached "Good-afternon, Mr. Britz" floating after him.

Was he mistaken, Britz asked himself as he walked quickly along the passage, or did he see a pair of eyes beneath a towering turban peer at him from the corner of a cross-corridor? He made a mental note to have the Hindoo servant watched more closely as, treating Blodgett's loftiness with exasperating indifference, he tripped down the steps of the Missioner mansion, and hurried along a path in the dark. Once in the shelter of the shadows, the detective quickened his pace, heading south.

His hands clasped behind him, and his thoughts kept time with his steps as he swung along under the scraping January boughs. On the whole, he was very well satified with his day's work. Not that he had any idea of calling a halt for the night. He allowed himself plenty of sleep, but he wasted little time on recreation. Work was his relaxation. He had an infallible specific against fatigue. When his duties became wearying, he crowded on more steam or switched to another phase of the case. A change of points was as restful to Britz as a change of air.

Grudging as he was to himself in the matter of praise, he had to admit, however, he had spent his afternoon profitably. From little Miss. March he had learned that Griswold was a draughtsman, and from Griswold himself he had tangible proof of that fact in the shape of the tiny sheet of paper from the scratch pad. He took the paper out of his pocket and paused in the light zone of a roadside lamp. Yes, it was beyond question that the hand which in idleness had traced that plan of the Missioner library was able, with care, to make a precise drawing of the Missioner diamonds—even of the great Maharanee. On that count, Griswold was convicted by his own hand.

But Britz, as he resumed his swinging stride, did not delude himself with the idea he had a clear case against the clubman. All he had was evidence that Griswold could have made the sketches by means of which the Missioner jewels were duplicated without the necklace itself as a model. He was not even prepared to suspect the widow's admirer. He gave full weight to the lack of a motive as the case then stood, to the impossibility that a man who sought to marry Mrs. Missioner would risk his chances by stealing gems worth even half a million, when by wedding her he might gain practical control of all her millions. Moreover, it was by no means certain that Griswold had found opportunity to substitute the paste necklace for the original. He was satisfied with his mental picture of the moment when Griswold fastened the necklace about the widow's neck It seemed hardly possible that the clubman, with Sands and Miss Holcomb in the room, could achieve the substitution undetected.

But the truth remained that Griswold's skill with a pencil sufficed for the sketches, and it was a clew Britz recognized as important. It was part of his policy to neglect nothing that so much as had room for the germ of revelation. All the time his upper mind was weighing and sifting the case as a whole, his under consciousness was busy with the facts pertaining specifically to Griswold's possible part in the mystery. It was an exceptional dual process, but Britz had that kind of a mind. It enabled him to proceed smoothly and steadily with the main facts of a case and, simultaneously, to weed out the unimportant points of his information.

Of Elinor's innocence, Lieutenant Britz still had no tiniest doubt. The more insistently new disclosures tended to connect her with the disappearance of the Maharanee diamond, and the other stones of Mrs. Missioner's necklace, the more resolutely he clung to his deduction that her course from the first to last had been that of one guiltless of crime. He maintained the judicial attitude of his mind toward the successive discoveries he made, but he did not see how the sternest jurist could listen with patience to the strongest of briefs against such an open nature as Elinor Holcomb's. Donnelly's finding the genuine diamond in her room meant nothing, save that the real thief had left the jewel there by accident or design. To his mind, the exact whereabouts of the stone argued a deliberate attempt had been made to destroy the girl. It remained to be ascertained whether that attempt was born of enmity, or was due simply to a desire to throw off suspicion. He realized perfectly the possibility that it sprang from a combination of the two motives.

Who, then, was most likely to have placed the diamond in the secretary's room? Who could have most to gain by causing her arrest and conviction? Was it the purpose of the criminal to have the girl suspected only long enough for him to cover his trail permanently, or did he desire that she be found guilty and condemned to penal servitude? If the latter plan was formed, would the thief content himself with the almost overpowering circumstantial evidence already accumulated against Elinor, or would he venture to throw further suspicion upon her? And if the criminal contemplated pursuing the prisoner beyond the threshold of the Tombs, would he operate through the stupidity of Donnelly and Carson, or would he bend his energies on the District Attorney? Britz considered briefly on the chance that the thief would be bold enough to appear as a witness for the prosecution, but dismissed it as too improbable to affect the present development of the case.

The detective flung himself on a bench and pondered the day's developments until the first ting of his Jurgensen, the gift of a grateful captain of industry, told him it was long past his dinner hour. Then he arose, lighted a cigar, broke the match meditatively into a dozen bits, and once more took up his southward stride. On two points he had made up his mind. The first was that, since Griswold's delicately manipulated crayon had drawn him far enough into the case to be a possible factor, he would have the clubman trailed more thoroughly than had been done thus far—he would set Merritt, tireless tracker, at Griswold's heels. The lieutenant's second decision came from the real or fancied glimpse of the turbaned head flicking around the corner of the passage. He would make a little visit to the home of the mysterious Oriental who had called Mrs. Missioner's attention to the falsity of the supposed Maharanee diamond she wore in the opera box, and he would not go as Britz, of Headquarters.

He stopped under the low-hanging bough of a great oak tree to get a better light. As he was about to strike a match, his use for that particular cigar suddenly ceased, for gripping, clinging, strangling, something soft and silky was drawn tightly about his neck, his elbows were jammed against his sides, his knees were squeezed together so closely he could not take a step, and in another minute, he found himself bound, gagged, helpless, with three men sitting on him, bowling rapidly in a cab along the park drive in a direction which, owing to the swirling excitement of the last sixty seconds, he could not ascertain. All he knew was that he was a captive; that he had been seized in a way unusual to city highwaymen, and that for the present, a struggle for release would be simply a useless—perhaps worse than useless—expenditure of his strength.

CHAPTER XI
A Wild Ride.

Once he realized the futility of resistance, Britz busied himself with efforts to get a line on his direction. He was in an ordinary brougham, drawn by a pair of high-stepping horses. That much he could tell from the dimensions of the vehicle, and the peculiar ping of the hoofs on the hard-rolled park drive. He knew, too, the animals were traveling at a brisk pace. Despite its delicately adjusted springs, the carriage lurched violently at times, the weight of the three men who held him being thrown on the rear seat so suddenly as to threaten disruption of the superstructure. He was lying on the floor, but on a pile of rugs. The silk scarf with which he had been fastened had been loosed from his neck only to be drawn tightly about his mouth. A smaller strip of silk, rolled into a ball, had been thrust between his teeth, gagging him beyond his power to utter a cry. His wrists and ankles were bound with similar scarves. He was as helpless as if in the electric chair. His life, it might be, depended on his self-control and resourcefulness.

The carriage sped on, its swaying increasing as the driver evidently urged his horses to a faster pace Britz speculated on the possibility of an arrest by a park policeman for violation of the speed law. A moment's reflection told him it was improbable. Unless the horses were running away, or the coachman was lashing them vindictively, no ordinary bluecoat was likely to stop them Automobiles had educated the police to a new speed standard. What a dozen years before would have caught the instant attention of a mounted policeman, now, by contrast would seem an ordinary gait. If Britz could smash a pane in a door of the brougham with a timely kick, he would attract notice from a policeman—provided there chanced to be one in sight. What would happen if he broke the glass uselessly the detective was confident would be disagreeable, if not disastrous. Besides, his feet were tied pretty tightly. He was not at all sure he could work them out of their bonds.

In the faint light that flashed from time to time through the windows of the brougham as it whirled past park lamps, Britz saw that all three of his captors were dark of feature and lithe of form. He strained his gaze to fix their faces in his memory, but he knew as he did it the outlines he visualized were too hazy to make future recognition certain. One moment he was convinced there was something foreign in the appearance of the men. The next, he was less certain they were not American. A hawkish sharpness of profile, however, inclined him more strongly to the former belief. He had seen recently, he thought, a face that in such a light would resemble those bending above him. As he was striving to recall it, and the circumstance surrounding it, a fourth scarf was passed about his eyes and knotted behind his head. The silken strip was light in texture, but folded so many times that he could not see the dimmest glimmer of light.

Booty of Jewel Robbers Thought to Have Been Traced.

Wholesale Thefts of Gems May Be Solved by Detectives Discovery of a "Fence" Where Valuables Worth a Quarter of a Million Have Been Disposed Of — Suspects Gave Servants Motor Rides.

NARRAGANSETT PIER, R.I., Aug. 1. — Private detectives are tonight watching a residence in a suburb of Providence. This home is the long-sought "fence" for the gang of thieves who obtained more than a quarter of a million dollars worth of jewelry here during the 24 hours ending at last Saturday midnight, according to the theory of one of the four detective agencies engaged on the robberies.

The occupant of the house cannot escape surveillance, but the police have no positive evidence upon which to proceed against him.

Another detective agency is watching a house in South Boston, believing it to be either the headquarters of the jewelry stealing band or the home of their agents.

Mrs. J. H. Hanan, who lost $150,000 worth of jewels, has placed her case in the hands of a firm of detectives at Providence. New York detectives are entrusted with the mission of recovering the jewelry of Mrs. Charles C. Rumsey, estimated to be worth $125,000.

The detectives watching the house near Providence are said to have a speculative commission from both the Hanans and Rumseys. According to their manager, the suspect made a specialty of taking servants on automobile rides, during which he seized the opportunity to obtain information of the habits of the families in which his guests were employed.

ADVERTISING

A STORE'S importance is rightly judged by its advertising. Not altogether by the size of the advertisement, but by size and tone, and quality of announcement.

What the store has to say is one thing. Quite as important is how it says it.

Given that the clerical force is competent and up-to-date, it will say, over the counter, the very best to be said in reference to the goods enquired for. It may, and should, suggest other goods, not in the customers view.

This implies that the customer is in the store. But what brings him or her there? The wish to buy and the belief it is a good place to buy at.

How is this learned of?

By advertising. The advertisement is a message, an intelligent middleman, doing service between seller and buyer. The space talks to thousands, even while the store is closed for the night.

Bachelor pleaded not guilty. Mr. Corkery appeared for the defendant and G. N. Gordon acted for Mrs. Rowe.

Judgment was reserved until tomorrow.

Detective Newhall in the box testified that on searching Bachelor's premises, he found the missing goods. Mrs. Rowe said that defendant left her premises last week taking with him a quantity of goods.

CLUB CARS FOR CONNOISSEURS

The popularity of the Grand Trunk service between Montreal and Toronto caused principally by the splendid service of daily express trains over the heavy steel of the only double-track railway between these two points, has caused the management to bring the equipment up to the highest state of efficiency and includes parlor buffet cars, library cars and dining cars on the day trains and electric lighted Pullman sleeping cars on the day trains and electric lighted Pullman sleeping cars with electric fans and all the latest improvements on their night trains.

Early this week the service is still to be augmented by two limited night trains, leaving Montreal 10.30 p.m., arriving Toronto 7.30 a.m. daily and leaving Toronto 10.15 p.m. arriving Montreal 7.30 daily, wide vestibuled club compartment cars built for the comfort and convenience of patrons.

These club cars are DE LUXE in every respect, are named "The Royal City" and "The Queen City" and will be a boon to the travelling public, and appreciated by sleeping car patrons.

The interior of the cars are arranged with one drawing-room, five compartments, and a club or lounging room, the latter having sixteen chairs. The cars are lighted by electricity and each room is provided with an electric fan and separate toilet facilities. A patent ventilating device has been installed in the clubroom. The interior finish is strikingly beautiful, the color scheme having been worked out in a harmony of shades giving an effect both pleasant to the senses and restful to the eye. Simplicity and richness of design are everywhere apparent.

A buffet will be operated serving light summer beverages, cigars, etc. Illustrated current magazines found in handsome leather covers have also been placed in the cars for the free use of patrons.

Woman Talked With Burglar.

The reclamation of criminals has long been a special feature of the work of the Salvation Army, and "Captain" Mary Booth, daughter of the "General" of the Army, recently gave a lesson in the gentle art of dealing with burglars. One morning at two o'clock she discovered a burglar in the bedroom of her house at Clapham. She did not call in the police, but had a quiet, serious talk with him about his wickedness, and, upon learning that he was driven to crime by hunger, took him to the kitchen and gave him a good meal. Ultimately she saw him off the premises, and promised to be his friend if he would live a better life. It is impossible yet to speak of the success of the experiment, but it is doubtful if it commends itself to the police.

PRESIDENT'S DAUGHTER HEROINE OF FIRE

MISS MARGARET WOODROW WILSON

Miss Margaret Wilson, daughter of the president, is the heroine of Eaglesmere, Pa., and the local fire department intends to make her an honorary member of the organization. At a fire in a cottage adjoining the hotel at which she was stopping she acted the part of a fireman and braved flames and a rainstorm to help save the goods of the tenants. Miss Wilson was assisted by a half dozen other girls, who, inspired by her fearlessness, worked with no apparent thought of their own safety.

The burned cottage belonged to Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Dodge, of Washington, who are well acquainted with the Wilson family. Mrs. Murphy, their married daughter, was living with them, and her baby, two months old, was carried out of the burning house by a fireman.

STONEY LAKE CARRIED JOLLY CROWD FOR PRINTERS' PICNIC

List of Prize Winners in Events Held at Victoria Park.

On Saturday afternoon the Printers held their excursion and it was a big success. The weather was ideal, warm though not sultry, cool and not chilly. The crowd on a Printers' picnic never varies, for once a person makes the trip he or she gets the habit, and though the number may increase yet there is always the same good, jolly time to be had.

Victoria Park was selected as the stopping point and some [illegible] agreed that a more [illegible] spot could not be found. Mr. and Mrs. R. A. Cardwell of Park House did all in their power to make the picnickers [illegible] and [illegible] for those who [illegible]. To those who [illegible] the place [illegible] on the [illegible] about two hundred [illegible] of the first bridge which is about ten miles from the city. When the good steamer "Stoney Lake" [illegible] the crowd instantly repaired to the baseball field where the Quakers and Typos were to wage war for a box of cigars.

The first few [illegible] of the [illegible] combat were [illegible], but then the Quakers fell on Moore for [illegible] successive home runs, and M[illegible] vanished. Milloy went in and was little or no improvement, [illegible] runs being obtained off his delivery before M[illegible] [illegible]. Cook, who pitched the last innings, retired the men in 1, 2, 3 order, [illegible] runs had been obtained by the Quakers. Ben Taylor did the receiving for the Typos. Hagerman was on the mound for the Quakers and the Typos only got four runs off him. [illegible] was behind the bat.

After the ball game, or as one familiar figure on a Printers' picnic called it, a pitchers' battle, the sports were run off and great interest was taken. The fat men's race and pie eating contest afforded a lot of amusement.

WESTERN CANADA'S BUMPER WHEAT CROP

Thousands of Men Required—This Year's Harvest Promises to be the Largest in the History of Canada

According to present indications the wheat crop of 1913 will be the greatest ever harvested in Manitoba, Saskatchewan or Alberta, thus requiring the farm laborers of the East to assist in harvesting the world's bread basket.

The Governments of the respective Provinces state that many thousand men will be required for this year's harvest. These will have to be principally recruited from Ontario, and the prosperity of Canada depends on securing labor promptly. The Canadian Pacific, on which Company will fall practically the entire task of transporting the men to the West, is already making special arrangements for this year. Excursions from points in Ontario to Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta will be run and special trains operated, making the trip in about thirty-six hours and avoiding any change of cars or transfers. This will be a day shorter than any other route. Dates, rates and conditions will be announced in a few days.

Ontario is spending $5,000,000 in developing New Ontario.

LITTLE FOR HER PAINS.

Bulgaria Will Have Little After Peace Is Made.

LONDON, Aug. 1—(Can. Press.)—The allies in their demands presented to the Bucharest peace conference today proposed the establishment of a frontier standing east from the Struma river, running midway thru Roumelia and reaching the Aegean Sea fifteen miles west of Dedeagatch. This would leave Bulgaria a coast line on the Aegean Sea of less than thirty miles. If these drastic terms are accepted Bulgaria will issue from two wars a little larger than when she entered into them, but she will have to abandon a large amount of territory to Roumania. In addition the allies maintain their demand for an indemnity.

It is probable that the negotiations will be protracted and that the armistice of five days will be renewed. No objection is likely to be raised to its renewal, for it seems evident that both the Servians and the Greeks have fought themselves to a standstill.

A despatch to the Daily Telegraph from Belgrade asserts that the casualties of the Servian army in the past month of fighting aggregate nearly 35,000.

Demanded $150,000.

LONDON, Aug. 1. Henrich Krenerskathen, a youth of twenty, will appear in Bow street police court today charged with sending threatening letters to Lord Rothschild demanding $150,000. For some weeks the financier has been receiving letters demanding money. Scotland Yard was communicated with and as a result of advertisements in newspapers Krenenskathen was arrested in a west end restaurant last night after a struggle.

Rammed in a Fog

The coastwise passenger steamer Lady of Gaspe, from Montreal for Gulf ports, was rammed and so seriously damaged by the freighter Crown of Cordova, below Three Rivers, that it was necessary to beach her at Cap Magdalen. The hundred odd passengers were panic stricken, but all were landed safely. The accident occurred during a heavy fog.

EXPLORERS FAIL

Prospectors Return Without Striking Placer in North.

COBALT, Aug. 3—(Special)—Sam Ottisse, Ernie Holland, David Moore and "Dad" Taverner, well-known northern prospectors, have just returned from a trip 800 miles north of Cochrane. They started out on May 4 for Ungava in search of placer gold and diamonds. As they just reached Hurricanaw at the time the ice was going out of the rivers and lakes they encountered almost unprecedented high water and currents. They went in by the Natagon River and reached the Nitchiquon, on the coast of the Hudson. They blazed trails and canoed hundreds of miles where white men had never before set foot. The trip so far as striking placer gold and diamonds was concerned was not successful, it is said, but the men were, however, greatly impressed with the country, and one of them stated that he thought the far north was rich with other minerals. They found a formation of rock extending nearly all the route they traversed going north, which is said to be similar to that in other mining districts of the great north.

SWARTZ HAD BIG DAY AT THE BAT AND IN FIELD

Petes Left Fielder Hit Safely Four Out of Five, One of Which Was for Circuit

The Petes made a pretty clean-up of the series with Brantford by taking the third game on Saturday by 8—5. It was a day of hard clouting, in which Peggy Swartz startled the fans with nothing short of a homer and three singles. Peggy also nailed a difficult chance with one hand, and altogether behaved with real class.

Incidentally the Petes were going strong in each of the three games as the following record shows:

| | R. | H. | E. |

| Thursday | 16 | 15 | 2 |
| Friday | 13 | 11 | 2 |
| Saturday | 8 | 5 | 2 |
| | 37 | 31 | 6 |

Belting had to retire from the game on account of a severe headache, and Sterling, who finished, held the Brants to one hit. Belting has been suspended till he returns to condition. The Senators have relinquished their hold on Fox, and he is now the property of the Peterborough.

The Petes are in Berlin to-day for morning and afternoon games.

KUNTZ BREWERY

HURRY up with a bottle of Kuntz's Old German," said the man from New York. "It's worth a trip to Canada to get a drink of this corking brew. There's nothing like the "Old German" flavor in the United States, you know. Perhaps because the "Old German" process of brewing is so very costly. Anyway, you Canadians ought to feel proud of Kuntz's for brewing such a superb beverage. And I guess you are from the number I see drinking Kuntz's Old German.

MRS. WHELHAM PLEADED WITH WALTERS NOT TO SHOOT HER HUSBAND

Further Particulars of the Shooting in Which H. E. Whelham Was Fatally Injured.

Further particulars of the tragic death at Veregin, Sask., of Harry E. Whelham, who as stated before was a brother of Mrs. Ed. Wicker, James Street, East City, are as follows:-

It is alleged that Whelham and Walters had been on anything but friendly terms for some time past, although there had been nothing that could have been considered as very serious in their relations, the subjects on which they had quarrelled being town politics and local matters generally. It is stated that as a result of some recent dispute Walters had been heard to threaten Whelham and that Tuesday night he lay in wait for him coming home with the rifle, with which the tragedy was afterward committed, ready loaded for him. Mrs. Whelman, wife of the deceased, had become conscious of Walters' intention, having overheard some of his threats.

Pleads for Husband's Life

Mr. Whelham was away from home, but was expected at any moment, when Mrs. Whelman observed Walters with the rifle in his possession, and fearing for her husband's safety, she approached Walters, and was asking him to desist from his intention to shoot her husband, when the latter appeared on the scene. Mr. Whelman asked his wife why she was speaking to Walters. "Stand aside," Walters is alleged to have said to Mrs. Whelham, and at the same time he raised the rifle, and, pointing it at Whelham, fired. The bullet entered the abdomen three or four inches below the heart, and taking a downward course, perforated the stomach and passed through the bowels.

Immediately after the shot had been fired, Whelham grabbed Walters by the body, but the latter cleared away from him and he fell. As Whelham lay on the ground Walters grabbed the rifle by the barrel and struck him three blows on the head, cutting through his scalp.

The officers of the North West Mounted Police were at once notified and Walters was arrested shortly afterward by Corporal Fieldhouse and Constable Mills of Kamsack.

Formerly Station Agent

Mr. Whelham was at one time station agent at Letellier, and was afterward promoted to Veregin. At that town he left the railway service to accept an appointment as agent of the Massey Harris Company, and later gave this up for the private enterprise in which he was engaged at the time of the tragedy. In addition to his wife, he leaves a young family. Walters is also a married man, and has a family.

At one time Walters was looked upon as one of the leading business men of the locality, and had been appointed justice of the peace for the district. He met with financial disaster recently, and not only lost his commission, but also became insolvent. Both men were sober, and had the reputation of being temperate in their habits.

The men were neighbors, and lived almost opposite each other. Walters is of German descent and has been a resident of Veregin for several years. Whelham was of English descent.

WAS THE FIRST SERIOUS BREAK IN TWELVE YEARS

New Valve Placed in Water Main and Citizens Had Water for Sunday—Meeting of the Water Commissioners To-day.

Peterborough people certainly did miss the water on Saturday, and fervent were the thanks when repairs were made that night and the water turned on again.

Probably very few people stopped to think, that water services, like human beings, are subject to breakdowns. But they are, and it was one of those unexpected happenings that brought about the water famine. A valve in the sixteen inch water main gave way, and it was a case of dig down and add a new valve. Superintendent Fawcett had a gang of men, who, after starting operations on Friday night, stayed with the job till repairs were made last Saturday night. They did their best and now all is well again.

MEETING TO-DAY.

To-day the Water Commissioners will meet their Engineer, Mr. Kennedy, of Montreal, who some time ago was communicated with in regard to the distribution system of the local plant. It is quite likely that the Board will take some definite step and add to the present system.

But the people of Peterborough have very little to complain about, all things considered. The break on Friday night was the first serious trouble in the twelve years the waterworks system has been owned by the city.

Progress has been made as far as the finances would permit. It cost the city $237,000 to take over the assets of the old company and while the revenue has increased, the interest and sinking funds have had to receive attention, and this has made quite a large item. New debentures have also been issued for.

One item worthy of mention is that those city officials closely in touch with the water system did their utmost in the interests of the city. Both Mayor Bradburn and Mr. T. F. Matthews, chairman of the Water Commissioners, were alert and gave up their time almost wholly to the task presented. Likewise, Ald. Gillespie, chairman of the Fire, Water and Light Committee, and Ald. Gordon and Ald. [illegible] were on the job.

Fresh in their memory no doubt was the big fire a few days ago at Three Rivers, Que., where similar trouble was experienced. Fire broke out and caught the city without water service. The loss was $200,000.

THIS FELINE WAS AN EXCEPTION

Missed Its Footing and Fell With Fatal Results

In the tales written by Seton Thompson we read of cats and all members of that family having the surest footing of any animal in existence, yet there are always exceptions to every rule and [illegible] the above mentioned [illegible] with more emphasis than [illegible].

About nine o'clock a black feline was trying to explore the roof of Yeotes' tobacco store and came a little too close to the edge. The result was that it fell, striking the sign in front of the store and bouncing from there to the pavement. It filled the air with a pitiful cry and then dragged itself into a doorway. Several bystanders crowded around and many wanted to know why it wasn't put out of misery but all appeared to lack nerve. P. C. Sills came along and by the use of his baton put the holder of "nine lives" into the happy hunting ground.

AMBASSADOR WILSON'S RESIGNATION ACCEPTED AND COMMISSIONER NAMED

Ex-Governor of Minnesota, to Try to Arrange Mediation Between Huerta and the Rebels.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 5.—There were these two important developments in the Mexican situation today.

President Wilson accepted the resignation of Henry Lane Wilson, ambassador to Mexico, to become effective Oct. 14. In the meantime Mr. Wilson will be on leave of absence.

John Lind, former member of congress and ex-governor of Minnesota was sent post haste to Mexico as a [illegible] mediation of the present dispute between the Huerta regime and the revolutionists.

In announcing the acceptance of the resignation of Ambassador Wilson Secretary Bryan said:

"Ambassador Wilson's resignation has been accepted to take effect Oct. 14. The part which he felt it his duty to take in the earlier stages of the recent revolution in Mexico would make it difficult for him to represent the views of the present administration in view of the situation which now exists."

Ambassador Wilson on leaving the state department after his resignation had been accepted made the following statement.

"I believe that the president and secretary of state in their consideration of the question are actuated by the highest patriotism and with the best intentions to both countries. I have no pride of opinion with reference to my own recommendations, claiming only for them that they were conscientious and represent those of 98 per cent. of the Americans and foreigners in Mexico."

President Wilson said this morning that he would announce this afternoon the first step in his efforts to straighten out the tangle in Mexico. At five o'clock Secretary of State Bryan made public the following, being the president's intentions:

"Ex-Gov. John Lind of Minnesota has been sent to Mexico as the personal representative of the president, to act as adviser to the embassy in the present situation. When the president is ready to communicate with the Mexican authorities as to the restoration of peace he will make public his views. Gov. and Mrs. Lind departed for Mexico from Washington this afternoon at 4.35 o'clock by way of New Orleans and Galveston."

Mr. Lind will go direct to Mexico City, where he will confer with Nelson O'Shaughnessy, secretary of the embassy and charge d'affaires. Gov. Lind goes as commissioner to try and end the dispute in Mexico by mediation. He will not work directly with President Huerta, but thru Mr. O'Shaughnessy. The roundabout method of reaching Huerta is necessary to avoid recognizing him officially. President Wilson is determined not to recognize the Huerta administration or give him moral support in any way. Commissioner Lind is expected to arrive in Mexico City in about ten days.

President Wilson seeks the resignation of Huerta as the first step in bringing about peace, because he believes that he is the stumbling block. He is convinced that if Huerta can be persuaded to resign the revolutionists will gladly cease fighting and agree to vote for a president.

Mr. Lind carried with him a full plan of operation. On his arrival in Mexico City this plan will be submitted to President Huerta by Mr. O'Shaughnessy. At the same time President Wilson made public the full contents of his offer to President Huerta.

President Wilson is firmly convinced that mediation is the proper means by which to end the dispute and he is almost certain that President Huerta will see his view point.

Mr. Lind is well known here. By both Republicans and Democrats he is regarded as one of the ablest men in the United States, and it is the belief that he will make good. His friends assert that what he does not know about Latin America and the Mexican question will be offset by his general knowledge of government.

The events which led the administration to accept the resignation of Ambassador Wilson, who has been in the diplomatic service seventeen years, are regarded as having been inscribed on the dark pages of American diplomacy. He stands charged with being morally responsible for the assassination of President Madero. Another charge is that he meddled in local Mexican politics and in this manner diminished his usefulness as the representative in Mexico of the United States.

Mr. Wilson has been ambassador to Mexico since December 1909, and prior to that date had been minister to Chili and Belgium. He was offered the post in Venezuela and Greece but declined both.

Ambassador Wilson has tendered his resignation to President Wilson three times, the first being on March 4, when the present administration assumed control. [illegible]

[illegible] Ambassador Wilson received instructions to report to the secretary of state. He reported at Washington this morning. [illegible]

[illegible] The ambassador had expected that the president would commend him for his activity at his post and approve his record.

Ambassador Wilson said he would not return to Mexico City. He said he had no plans as yet as to his future.

It was learned that President Wilson hastened his acceptance of the resignation of Ambassador Wilson because of the latter's utterances since returning to the United States and because of the proposals the ambassador made regarding [illegible] the Mexican problem. President Wilson does not believe Ambassador Wilson has been as reticent as a member of the diplomatic corps should be.

HENRY LANE WILSON

Ambassador Wilson has resigned and his successor will hasten to Mexico and endeavor to bring about a settlement of the present trouble.

AUSTRALIA TO BE THERE

Will Not Join Britain's Boycott of Panama Exhibition.

LONDON, Aug. 4.—Altho the mother country has refused to participate in the Panama Canal Exposition, considerable satisfaction will doubtless be afforded the United States by the fact that the Australian Government intends to be represented at the exhibition. The correspondent of The Morning Post at Sydney says that the commonwealth government has guaranteed £20,000, and New South Wales, Queensland and Victoria have agreed to co-operate in a joint exhibit.

The traders here are convinced that the growing market in the United States for primary Australian products will be assisted by the opening of the canal and the reduction of the United States duties foreshadowed in the tariff bill. The Hon. W. Glynn, minister for external affairs, has sketched out an extensive scheme for advertising Australia in the United States, and for the appointment of a number of commercial agents there.

Among the interesting associations of the two countries may be noticed the announcements that American ranchmen are coming to the northern territory, and American irrigationists to the irrigation settlements in Victoria and New South Wales.

Woodstock Man is Seriously Hurt in Accident.

WOODSTOCK, Aug. 4.—(Special.)—Mr. D. Miller, the prominent stone cutter of this city, together with his wife and son Lorne, were brought to their home here last night suffering from injuries sustained in a collision between their motor car and that belonging to a young man said to be a resident of [illegible]. The Millers were returning to Woodstock when they met the other car going in the opposite direction near Beachville. The second car struck the Woodstock machine head-on. Mrs. Miller was thrown fifteen feet from her seat and [illegible] unconscious but [illegible] injured. Mr. Miller [illegible] forearm, while his son has a dislocated shoulder. It is alleged that the young man who was driving the other car was proceeding in a decidedly reckless manner, and the matter has been reported to the police department here.

Although both cars were severely damaged, after some attention they were able to be driven on their way, and upon arrival Mr. Miller and family immediately received medical attention here.

DRASTIC CUTS ARE MADE

Interstate Commerce Commission Orders Modification of the Present Rates Amounting to Sixteen Per Cent. of the Companies Earnings—Cost to Big Concerns $26,000,000.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 4.—(Can. Press.)—Reductions in express rates which will cost the companies fully $26,000,000 a year approximately sixteen per cent. of their gross revenue were ordered by the Interstate Commerce Commission today to become effective on or before October 1, 1913. Notable reforms in practices also were ordered.

The most important change prescribed by the order is by way of modification of the present graduated scale of parcel rates. One hundred pound rates for short distances either have been left unchanged or slightly reduced. For packages more than four pounds going more than 200 miles and less than 2,000 the new express rates are generally lower than the parcel post rates; for more than 3,000 miles the rates are practically the same.

The general impression is that the express companies will attempt by legal means to obstruct the commission's order. The express had filed statements saying that the losses of revenues under the proposed rates would be intolerable, and argued strenuously that the establishment of the parcels post had deprived them of a large percentage of the revenue they formerly received from parcels of 11 pounds or less. They contended that the express business could not survive the losses from both sources.

The new system of rates is not only a simplification of existing rate structures and methods, but in the opinion of rate experts lays the foundation for future practice in all rate revisions.

The commission's order is for two years only. The period will give abundant opportunity for a test of these rates under varying conditions amounting to normal average. In no other way can the absolutely proper rate basis for respondents be finally determined. Respondents are also at liberty at any time to bring forward new facts as a basis for a petition for modification of this or any other order.

More Money for Militants.

LONDON, Aug. 4.—(Can. Press.)—It has been estimated that the accounts of the Women's Social and Political Union for the first six months of 1913 show that more than $75,000 has been received during that period toward the principal fund of the union known as the "Quarter Million Pound Fund." At the close of 1912 this stood at $150,000. On June 30, 1913 the total was more than $250,000. For the first quarter of the year the receipts varied from $1500 to $1750 a week, but since April they have been steadily rising. The total receipts for June were close upon $17,500, a record amount. During July $4000 was collected at the Pavilion Music Hall meetings.

EVIDENCE IS ALL IN

Krupp Scandal in Germany Will Not End Seriously

BERLIN, August 4.—(Can. Press.)—The taking of testimony was completed today before the court martial which is trying four lieutenants of the ordnance department, a chief clerk, and two non-commissioned officers of the ordnance corps of the German army on a charge of betraying military secrets, the acceptance of bribes and insubordination.

The accused, Lieuts. Tillan, Hinst, Hoge and Schleuder, together with Chief Clerk Pfeiffer and the two non-commissioned officers, are accused of accepting bribes from a representative of the Krupp armament concern for disclosing details of the tenders for contracts sent in by competitors.

The affair caused a great sensation when the disclosures of corruption were made in the Imperial Parliament recently by Dr. Karl Liebknecht, the Socialist deputy. The prosecuting attorney today in speaking for the condemnation of the accused, demanded that they should be sentenced to terms ranging from three months to a year, thus confirming the earlier impression that their offenses were not regarded as particularly serious. He proposed that the most severe sentence should be passed on Pfeiffer, whose opportunities to betray information had been greatest. He suggested nine months imprisonment for Lieuts. Tillan, Schleuder and Hinst, while Lieut. Hoge, who had not accepted any bribe, should he thought be condemned to three months' confinement in a fortress but should retain his commission in the army, which the others would lose. The two non-commissioned officers deserved, he said, three and six months imprisonment respectively.

The prosecutor mentioned during his speech that Max Brandt, Krupp's agent in Berlin, had had relations with foreign military attaches. It had [illegible] stated that there was no question of treachery in the [illegible] but rather of unfair business practices on the part of Krupps in order to learn the prices of their competitors when they found themselves losing business. The exact nature of Brandt's relation with the foreign military attaches, however, was not disclosed.

The prosecutor sharply censured Krupps for their practices, declaring that when they let Brandt loose with an unlimited secret service fund of $87 on his former comrades in the noncommission ranks there could not have been the slightest doubt as to what the result would be.

WILL OPPOSE SUFFRAGE

BUFFALO, Aug. 4.—(Can. Press.)—The organization of a Catholic Women's League that proposes to counteract the radical tendency of the women's movement, including their demand for the use of the ballot, marked today's session of the German Roman Catholic Central Verein, which is holding its convention here. Branches of the league will be formed in all parts of the country, it was stated today by Mrs. Joseph Grey, the honorary president.

"The feminist movement," said Mrs. Grey, "is being promoted by women whose views are decidedly pagan. If their demands were to be realized the Christian family would cease to exist and women's condition would lapse into paganism.

"While the Catholic Church has made no pronouncement on the question of woman suffrage, the Catholic philosophy of life is opposed to it. However we are not centring our activities in opposition to woman suffrage, but rather in a well informed plan for the future. The present unrest has resulted in the enfranchisement of women in several states. These women would exert an evil influence by means of the ballot if a conservative body of women was not in the field to counteract their influence."

At the morning session Rev. Dr. Joseph Kneer, a Chinese missionary, whose life was in danger several times during the recent revolution, made an address. He predicted that within a few years the Chinese would abandon Confucius and embrace the Catholic faith.

SELKIRK, Aug. 4.—(Can. The victim was Edward Sinclair, a treaty Indian, who lived with his wife and three children. He was last seen alive on the afternoon of July 18, when, according to his wife, he left on a moose hunt. On July 22 the thorax and arms of the body were found on the shore of the Winnipeg River about a quarter of a mile from the Sinclair home. Dragging in the river was then started and the right leg was found tied up in a sack with elm bark and weighted down by a large stone. Later other parts of the body were found in midstream also tied up in a sack and weighted down with stones. At the inquest the wife of the dead man showed no emotion whatever when shown the mutilated body of her husband. She was an unwilling witness and what evidence she gave was of a contradictory nature. She was held and will appear before the police magistrate on Saturday.

MILITARISM

The Presbyterian is worrying over the movement towards militarism in Canadian life and politics. It does not agree with the dictum, "In times of peace prepare for war"; it says rather, "In times of peace prepare for more peace." What the Presbyterian may mean by this letter is not so easy to discover as it might appear to the casual reader, and it is doubtful if the Presbyterian thought what it was saying.

The strange thing about most of the advocates of "peace" is that while they condemn all preparation and vigilance of a military kind in national life, they are the first to preach and practice a most hostile spirit to all the powers of darkness and spiritual wickedness in high places.

When St. Paul said, "We wrestle with flesh and blood," he was not speaking as the Roman Emperor, but as a preacher of the gospel. Politics and states-craft is different from religion and church-craft only in its sphere. The statesman does wrestle with flesh and blood, and to deny him the means of wrestling is to incapacitate him as a power in the world.

Rev. J. A. MacDonald could give a fiery sermon on the "Sword of the Spirit," and rouse the fighting qualities of his fellow-Scotsmen thereby. He would have no weaklings in his flock,

"Hosts of wily fiends oppose."
"Put on the whole armor of God"!

We are yet with the church-militant and have not yet attained to the church triumphant.

Likewise the State is the State Militant, the millinium has not yet arrived, and the lamb absolutely refuses to lie down with the lion.

The lamb-like qualities which the Presbyterian desires to see developed in Canadian statesmen it would despise as insipid and unworthy in a soldier of the cross.

The gospel warning, "Be ye also ready," applies to nations as well as to individuals, and to the natural as well as the spiritual.

THE DARK HAIRED WOMAN

From Philadelphia comes a story of the discovery of a tablet in Babylonia which gives what is believed to be the first story of the Creation of the world. Its only claim to originality seems to be in that it says the world was created by a woman with dark hair.

There is more in the "dark-hair" part of the story than one might suppose. A fair-haired goddess could never have created the world. There is mystery, intensity, tragedy, romance, love, hate, all lurking under those sombre tresses.

The circumstance is certainly suggestive for there is much in nature that one might attribute to the invention of a dark woman.

If the suffragettes, as has been suggested, attempt to make any capital out of the story they will find very little support for their cause in it. For the lady in question was a Creator, and the followers of Mrs. Pankhurst are destroyers, all of them.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Rev. George Jackson's troubles are not yet over. The Methodist Conference has let him off with a caution, but the British Weekly is now putting a few questions to him.

The Acton Free Press says that since the recent repeal of the local option by-law, "liquor is being delivered by the dray load almost daily, and drunken men are to be seen on the streets every day." The Actonites are quenching their long thirst, they have the excuse that they were very dry."

A CUBIST ROMANCE.

The cubist married the Matisse maid,
  A post futurist marriage,
And honeymooning went, 'tis said,
  In a wheelless, horseless carriage.
A lovely picture was the bride.
  She carried pea green tulips.
Her neck was in a bowknot tied,
  And brilliant were her blue lips.

He gazed with wonder on her grace.
  "Ah, how my being tingles!"
He cried, "Some day I'll paint that face
  And bring out all the shingles!"
She gave him, oh, so sweet a smile—
  'Twas like a mauve tomato—
And on her cheek there came the while
  The tint of the potato.

"I love you, Cubey dear," she said,
  "As fishhooks love the rushes."
Then shyly hung a biased head
  To hide her yellow blushes.
"I love you as the horseflies love
  The eagle, only more so,"
And shed some sepia tears above
  His terra cotta torso.

He clasped her in his slatted arms,
  And, heedless of reproofing,
He sang her highly colored charms
  In terms suggesting roofing.
He painted them in dull dun brown
  In accents far from stolid,
And when he'd got the last one down
  Not one but was a solid.

* * * * * * *

A year passed by, and then there came
  The harvest! Quien sabe!
The parents catalogued the same
  As just "a cubist baby."
It had red ears, green lips, blue hair
  Upon its little shock head,
With slats and shingles everywhere—
  A perfect little blockhead.
    —John Kendrick Bangs in Life.

"Fruit-a-tives" Cured Her And Brought Her The Joy Of Living.

ENTERPRISE, ONT., OCT. 1st.

"For seven years, I suffered with what physicians called a "Water Tumor". Hypodermics of Morphine had to be given me to ease the pain.

During one of these bad spells, a family friend brought a box of "Fruit-a-tives" to the house. I was so bad that it was only when I had taken nearly two boxes that I began to experience relief.

I kept up the treatment, however, and after taking five boxes, I was cured, and when I appeared on the streets, my friends said "The dead has come to life" and this seemed literally true because I certainly was at death's door"

CATTLE MARKETS

MONTREAL LIVE STOCK.

MONTREAL, Aug. 4.—At the Montreal Stock Yards west end market the receipts of live stock for the week ending Aug. 2 were 1200 cattle, 2950 sheep and lambs, 2100 hogs and 1000 calves. The supply on the market this morning for sale amounted to 950 cattle, 2250 sheep and lambs, 1200 hogs and 600 calves. Altho the offerings of cattle were smaller than a week ago by fully 200 head, a weaker feeling prevailed in the market, which was attributed to the lower prices which ruled in the Toronto market, and prices scored a decline of 25c per 100 pounds. A few picked lots of choice steers sold at $6.90, but the bulk of the trade in this class was done at $6.50 to $6.70, good at $6 to $6.25, and heavy bulls at $3.50 to $3.60 per 100 pounds.

Sheep and lambs were weak, prices for sheep declining 25c and lambs 25c to 50c per 100 pounds, sheep selling at $4 to $4.50, and lambs at $7 to $7.25. The trade in calves was fairly active, and prices ruled steady.

The tone of the market for hogs was firm, and prices showed no change as compared with a week ago. The supply was larger and demand was good, so an active trade was done, with sales of selected lots at $10.75 to $11, and sows at $8.75 to $9, and stags at $4 to $5 per 100 pounds, weighed off cars.

SMOKING AUTHORS.

Pipe, Cigarette and Cigar Have All Their Devotees.

Sir A. Conan Doyle is a great lover of the pure cigarette; so, too, is the famous Sir Gilbert Parker, whose fine romantic stories enjoy such widespread popularity made aromatic with the smell of it while he is at work.

Another brilliant writer of fiction, whose genius is closely bound together with the mild cigarette, is Mr. R. Hichens, one of the best and most popular of authors.

The late Robert Barr was immensely fond of the cigarette, and but rarely settled himself down to any task without first making sure that his cigarette-case was at his elbow.

Mr. E. F. Benson, the famous author of "Dodo," also enjoys a cigarette, and is fond of declaring that he finds it a great help, as well as a most pleasing companion, when he is hard at work with his pen.

Very few of our popular writers of fiction favor a cigar, probably finding the mouth end of it much too thick to hold between the lips with any degree of comfort when at work. Mr. Arthur Morrison, however, seeks comfort and inspiration in a good cigar.

Mr. G. K. Chesterton can also be bracketed with Mr. Morrison in favor of the cigar.

The pipe is the special favorite among most of our popular writers of fiction. Cutcliffe Hyne, the famous author of "Captain Kettle" and other exciting stories of peril and adventure, is a great lover of the pipe, and nearly always has it in use, especially when he is carrying his gun on his arm, which is his favorite outdoor pastime.

Max Pemberton is also fond of his pipe, and but very seldom takes up his pen to write, without having it between his teeth.

Probably the greatest of all humorous writers of sea stories is W. W. Jacobs, whose immensely popular yarns always create an abundance of good, hearty merriment and jovial pleasure. He also is a firm believer in his dearly-loved briar.

R. Andom, the well-known author of that amusing book, "We Three and Troddles," is another humorous writer who loves a pipe. He confesses that he cannot write unless a peculiar-shaped briar is at hand, and that he always smokes one particular brand of tobacco.

Promotion Indeed.

Here is a story of a rare occasion on which Lord Kitchener has given himself away. Lord K. has a great faculty by which he is able to size men up at a glance.

Shortly after De Wet fell like an avalanche on Lord Roberts' communications in the South African war, Lord K. was down the line fitting out extempore mounted infantry columns. A large number of details had been dumped down at Vredefort Road Station. Lord K. determined to equip and send them into the field at once. He went to the waiting-room to look for officers, and found a single man in occupation. He was smart and well-dressed, and pleased Lord K.'s critical eye.

"You will command a corps of mounted infantry I've just raised!" said the general.

"Very good, sir; what will my duties be?"

"Don't you know your duties?"

"My own—yes, sir."

"Then don't argue. What is your regiment?"

"Blankshires, sir."

"What rank?"

"Master tailor, sir!"

The Best Detective Story of the Last Ten Years

That act assured the lieutenant that he was approaching the climax of his adventure. He had been blindfolded, he had no smallest doubt, because his captors were about to take him out of the carriage, and did not wish him to see where he was going. Their precaution, also, was directed against his study of their faces. Britz drew quick comfort from that reflection. If the three intended to kill him, they would not care how closely he scanned their features. That they wished to make it impossible for him to recognize them indicated it was their design soon or late to set him free. No sooner was that conviction firmly in his mind than he resolved to make the most of his captivity. It must be important to him as it was to the strangers. That it bore in greater or less degree on the Missioner mystery he hardly questioned.

"Every little helps," thought Britz, twisting to make himself as comfortable as possible. "I may be close to something worth while." That did not sway him from his determination to make one bold strike for liberty at the first chance. Profitable though his present situation might prove in a sense, it could not be as valuable as freedom to follow the case in his own way. Something told him it was urgent that he have his little chat with the Oriental of the opera box. The more he thought about that mysterious individual, and the part played by the Indian in the discovery of the false Maharanee, the more eager he became to talk with him about things in general, and diamonds in particular. Britz was not given to gossip, but somehow he felt the Oriental was a brilliant conversationalist, and that anything the Easterner might say would be interesting. He did not neglect to make allowance for the possibility that what the Hindoo might not say would interest him still more.

"It's a small world," said Britz to himself. "Who knows?"

A slight jolt, and three more in swift succession, told the detective the carriage had turned out of the park and was crossing Central Park West. That was certain because there were no car-lines in Fifth Avenue nor in 110th Street, and in Fifty-ninth Street the stretch of asphalt between the macadam of the drive and the crosstown tracks was much wider than the brougham had crossed before the first of the jolts. By which gate the brougham had made its exit was another question: All the cross streets leading to park entrances were asphalted, and most of them were wide. The only way he could ascertain how far uptown he was lay in counting the blocks and listening for further aural indications. The trouble was he could not hear very well. The scarf that gagged him also covered his ears. He craned his neck gently, first to one side, then to the other, until he worked one ear free. Fortunately, it was the ear next the rugs. He rubbed his head patiently against the soft fabrics until he made a space through which he could press his ear to the floor. It was a cold application, but it enabled the sleuth to hear more clearly. The carriage floor served as a sounding board that microphoned the smallest noises with expansive emphasis. He could hear, amid all the thudding of the horses' hoofs, the slight suction every time a crack in one of the rubber tires left the asphalt.

Britz focussed his forces on the task of ascertaining his whereabouts and direction. One, two, three blocks the brougham sped westward. There had been no swerve in the course since parting from the park. Britz knew he was headed for the Hudson. Had not his blindfolding convinced him his life was not in peril, he might have thought his captors were hurrying him to the river to make an end of him. He continued counting the blocks until, wheeling sharply to the right, the horses headed north, and a change in the sound of their hoofs betrayed that they had left the asphalt and were on the macadam again.

"The Drive!" Britz told himself with a slight glow of satisfaction. The distance traveled from the park, the change of direction, and the altered pounding of the highsteppers' hoofs could mean but one thing: the vehicle was bowling along the beautiful Riverside concourse New Yorkers have come to appreciate only in recent years.

It was at that point Britz made his first mistake of the trip. The latch of the left door was jarred loose by an uneven crossing, and the detective felt the door give slightly against his shoulder. He sensed in an eyeflash the door had not swung open. Probably an end of the rug had caught under it sufficiently to hold it shut. But it undoubtedly was unfastened, and that evidently without the knowledge of his captors. Had any of the three noticed the unlatching of the door, he would have drawn it close immediately. There was momentary danger of that. There was not a moment to spare. Britz had little time for thought. With a powerful contortion of his wiry frame, he threw off the men above him long enough to fling himself against the door.

Britz reckoned on the likelihood that his fall from the carriage would be seen by a patrolman—at any rate that his attempt at escape would cause a commotion sure to result in police interference. He did not expect to get away unaided; he was bound too securely for that. It was more than possible bad bruises, if not broken bones, would be among the consequences. He was willing to take that chance rather than to hazard indefinite captivity with the great Missioner diamond mystery unsolved. In the very moment of hurling himself against the door, nothing was stronger in his mind than a yearning to see the Swami. He felt he positively must chat with that mysterious personage about diamonds and steel safes, and other things. Until he made the Oriental's acquaintance, his social development would be stunted.

The detective omitted from his reckoning the astuteness and readiness of his captors. He thought the surprise hinging on his desperate attempt at escape would be of sufficient duration to let him roll to the road. He was shocked mentally as well as physically, therefore, when his fall was stopped with a jerk, and the back of his head struck with cruel force against the carriage step. Just for a second's flight, reinforced steel and rubber though he was, he lost consciousness. When his senses returned, he was in the same position—head dangling, shoulders resting against the rods of the step, back bent painfully over the steel-shod threshold of the carriage floor, legs inside, gripped in a hold not all his struggles could break. His ankles still bound. So, for that matter, were his wrists, with his hands behind him. The scarf bandaging his eyes had slipped partly to his forehead, so that he could see a little; but, in his upside-down position, he could not see the sidewalk; only treetops and the dusk line of the Palisades were in his line of vision. The gag was fixed as firmly as ever. He tried to call for help, but the cry was smothered in his throat.

Then began as strange a struggle as any in which Britz had engaged in all his exciting career. The men in the cab strove to pull him inside; he battled against their efforts. Bound though his hands were, his fingers were twined tightly about the step rods. He had a grip on the rods as powerful as that with which one of his captors held his ankles. The crossing of his hands to bind his wrists had made his hold only the firmer. All the leverage of each sinewy wrist strengthened the other. The rods were so small they hurt his hands, but unless they broke his grip could not be loosened. Britz clutched them with an iron resolve not to be drawn into the brougham again. Safe though his life might have been at the outset, he was not certain it would be secure after his daring defiance of the odds against him. He still knew nothing of his captors. Even their nationality was problematical, to say nothing of their purpose. He felt that his grip on the rods might be his last hold on existence—and Britz, in any stage of his career, would have said he was tolerably satisfied with life, thank you!

"This," said Britz to his inner consciousness, with a touch of the grim humor his colleagues often found disconcerting, "is hill-climbing under difficulties." For the coachman, in spite of—perhaps because of—the silent struggle going on furiously at the door of the cab, had whipped his horses to a gallop, and was speeding them up a slope. Over the edge of the scarf that had slipped from his eyes, Britz got a glimpse of the Soldiers' and Sailors' Monument. He knew exactly where he was then. Next moment his eyes fastened themselves on the faces in the carriage, and he tried with all his might to make out the dark features of the three in the gloom of the cab; but their features still were shadowy. He would not have liked to have to pick them out of a line in a police station. It was a point of honor with the lieutenant always to be sure of his man before making an indentification. In part, that accounted for the failure of almost every defendant in any of his cases to establish an alibi.

Lean hands stretched forth from the dark interior and caught him about the middle. Other hands seized his legs, while the pair clutching his ankle tightened their grasp, but he only twined his fingers the more firmly around their slight circumference. By now the carriage was rolling and pitching like a seagoing tug. Had he not been held so stoutly by the six lean hands above, and his own iron clutch below, the motion might have swung his head against the step again with force to crack it in a dozen places. The very fury of the battle made for his safety.

The horses struck a slope that took them out of the Drive. Britz guessed they could not go far without encountering a policeman. If they did not meet a mounted patrolman or a bicycle blue coat in the avenue, it was almost certain they would strike an ordinary policeman in one of the by-streets. Britz chewed the gag savagely in the hope of freeing his voice. Finding the bandage too tight to force it out of his mouth, he tried to swallow the silken ball inside his teeth. Gulp as he might, his reversed position distressed him so he could not get the ball behind his tongue. And, owing to the elusive texture of the gag, not all the biting and grinding of his strong teeth could shred it.

Abrupt as its beginning was the end of the struggle. Britz, his eyes still boring into the inner murk, saw one of the long, lean hands slip forth again. This time, the hand clutched something between thumb and forefinger. The arm extended until the hand was close to the detective's wrists. Suddenly, the sleuth felt a frightful burning pain in the back of his hand. The agony was duplicated in the knuckles of the other. Strive though he did with all his grit and strength to retain his grip, his fingers opened against his will, the tendons contracted by the biting agony, and Britz knew a powerful acid had been sprinkled on his hands. He could not close them again in the first moment of his torment, and before a [illegible] could recover from the shock, the sway of the brougham swung him clear of the rods. Then, by the united strength of the three inside, he was jerked upward, and dragged with a single tug into the carriage. The door was slammed, and the coachman brought his horses back to their high-stepping trot. Suddenly they slowed to a walk.

"What's wrong here?" asked a voice at the window.

"Hallo, Rafferty," said the driver with an easy familiarity of a night-hawk toward the rank and file of the force. "Just a bunch of drunks I'm taking to their little white cots," he added in an undertone.

A patrolman pressed his face against the pane and looked inside. Already, the three dark, slender men who had kidnapped the detective were lolling and nodding in a way suggestive of safe but satisfied intoxication. Britz, trussed more securely than ever, was under their feet, well out of the policeman's range.

"They're sure a fine lot of rummies!" exclaimed the bluecoat to his friend the coachman. "The sooner they hit the hay, the better. On your way!" And, the driver flicking his horses in a leisurely way, the brougham resumed its journey with Detective-Lieutenant Britz raging in enforced silence among the silk rugs on its floor.

It was just about then that Britz made his second mistake. He breathed deeply. True, he was blown sadly by the desperate struggle as he hung headdown from the vehicle and his lungs had almost stopped working when he was jerked so violently back into the carriage. The air near the floor was cool and refreshing. No ordinary man would have hesitated to renew his strength by drawing it as far down into his lungs as the cramped position would permit; but Britz himself, in calmer moments, would have observed early that air itself was not always an unmixed blessing. He would have told inquiring minds that, under suspicious circumstances, it should be taken with caution and, if possible, should be well shaken before taking. In this instance, the air Britz breathed was mixed with a subtle something that gradually stole his senses and left him, though healthily alive, a limp heap under the feet of his captors.

So potent, so gentle was the effect of that strange something that the stoppage of the carriage, the lifting from its floor of the inanimate detective, the carrying of his limp form up darkened stairs in dead silence to a top room at the remote end of a suite at the top of the building, and that which happened to the Headquarters man as, sodden with the subtle soporific, he remained at the mercy of the strangers there, were things Britz for many a long day could only guess. So groping was his conjecture through those weary days of uncertainty that whenever he recalled the experience, it was with a certain gliding movement of the jaws that boded ill for the three dark, slim men if ever he should be able to enfold them in the meshes of the law as they had wrapped him in their scarves.

No, Britz was not vindictive, but he was—human.

CHAPTER XII.
The Empty Apartment.

When Britz groped his way out of the soundest sleep he had known in many a year, it was in absolute ignorance of his whereabouts. One cause of that unpleasant fact was the inky darkness that covered him like a pall. Even if he had been able to put his hand before his face, he could not have glimpsed its sketchiest outline. The darkness wrapped him so closely it seemed to clasp him in a deadly embrace. He felt like the Inquisition victim in the steadily contracting contracting room. The darkness pressed upon him. With the remorseless insistence of some murky monster of the deep, it forced its way into his eyes, his ears, his mouth. It made its way between his teeth and into his throat until he fancied he could taste it—until he almost suffocated. He gasped desperately several times before he returned to anything like his normal breathing.

Mingled with the peculiar taste of the smothering dark was a faint odor unlike anything in the Headquarters man's experience. Britz, in the course of his long career, had worked on cases in which subtle chemical agents were important factors. He had solved one mystery hinging on murderous use of poisonous perfumes from Persia and Asiatic Turkey, and fatal narcotics of South America. This ghostly scent that hovered about him was unlike any of those drugs or essences. Neither did it suggest any of the anesthetics that are the servants of surgery. So delicate was it that after the first whiff it was only by an effort the detective could make his doubting senses record its presence. Yet it had a persistence all its own, and when he tried to persuade himself his sensory nerves had played a trick upon him, it wreathed into his nostrils with unmistakable individuality.

Britz needed no effort to rise to tell him he still was bound hand and foot, and in the first instant of his full awakening he realized the silken gag still held his speech in thrall. So unlike all other waking was his return to consciousness that just for a moment he fancied his thoughts were spoken aloud. It was when he tried to call whoever might be within earshot that the complete awakening came upon him and with it the knowledge he could not make himself heard more than a few feet off. He bit the ball of silk savagely and strained his tongue until the roots ached in endeavors to force the gag out of his mouth. As well might he, helpless as to hands and feet as he was, have tried to shake off a gorilla's grip at his throat. Yet the seeming hopelessness of his plight did not dismay him greatly. He had been in worse places. It was a question of patience, perseverance, and pluck, and when it came to virile qualities the famous Central Office man was abundantly and alliteratively equipped.

"This," said the sleuth to himself, for want of a more appreciative auditor, "is a proposition that calls for both thought and action. It is both a theoretical and practical pickle. Much time might be spent in following it out logically. Guess I'll save a few hours by considering the condition and not the theory."

REGIMENTAL COLORS.

They Are Made at Pimlico and Service Is Held Over Them.

There is nothing in the British army around which so much sentiment and romance linger as the regimental colors. In the old days they were taken into battle, and historians have told many a thrilling story of hand-to-hand fights when the safety of the colors of the regiment has been threatened. To-day, however, when a regiment goes to war its colors are left behind. It was the death of a couple of young officers of the South Wales Borderers, who were killed while endeavoring to prevent the colors of which they had charge from falling into the hands of the enemy at the Battle of Isandhlwana, which led to this rule being enforced in 1881.

Two colors, known as the "King's" and the "regimental," are allowed to every infantry battalion. They are made of silk, with gold-fringed edges and cords and tassels of crimson and gold, mounted on a staff 8 feet 7 inches long. The King's color, always of the same pattern, shows the Union Jack on a blue ground; while the "regimental" has a wreath of roses, shamrocks, and thistles with the regiment's motto and crest, surrounded by a list of the various battles in which it has taken part, says The Evening Standard.

All colors used in the army are in the first instance supplied by the Army Clothing Factory at Pimlico, and before being issued a special religious service is held upon them. When a regiment is presented with new colors, which happens about once in twenty years — although the Guards' regiments, which use their colors more often than do other regiments, are given fresh sets every ten years—the old ones are usually deposited in the cathedral or parish church of the territorial headquarters.

In the old days no one seemed to trouble much what became of the colors, with the result that they often found their way into auction-rooms and pawnshops. The state, however, now insists on the old colors of any regiment remaining their property, and on no account must they be sold or given to a private person.

The colors are always escorted by non-commissioned officers, termed color-sergeants. There are eight of these "non-coms." in a battalion, and as a badge of rank they wear two crossed flags embroidered on the right arm, and have precedence over all other sergeants in a company.

There is an amusing story connected with the race for the Ascot Gold Cup and Father Stanton, who was buried recently. Six years ago, it will be remembered, the Gold Cup was stolen on the racecourse, and about the same time Father Stanton, the cherished idol of the London criminal classes, was being presented by his admirers with a gold chalice and other gifts. On the morning before the presentation meeting an "old lag" met Father Stanton, and gravely asked, "Is it true, dad, that some of your pals are going to give you the Gold Cup they pinched at Ascot?"

ADVERTISING

A STORE'S importance is rightly judged by its advertising. Not altogether by the size of the advertisement, but by size and tone, and quality of announcement.

What the store has to say is one thing. Quite as important is how it says it.

Given that the clerical force is competent and up-to-date, it will say, over the counter, the very best to be said in reference to the goods enquired for. It may, and should, suggest other goods, not in the customers view.

This implies that the customer is in the store. But what brings him or her there? The wish to buy and the belief it is a good place to buy at.

How is this learned of?

By advertising. The advertisement is a message, an intelligent middleman, doing service between seller and buyer. The space talks to thousands, even while the store is closed for the night.

Use The REVIEW and tell the story of your store and its opportunities for good service.

BUSINESS OF THE CITY COUNCIL

At Council meeting last night Ald. Gordon tendered his resignation from the Board of Works, with the explanation that he would need all available time for his assistance to the expected arbitration proceedings in connection with the Hydro Electric. He suggested that Ald. Gillespie be appointed to fill the vacancy.

The resignation was accepted and Ald. Gillespie appointed.

A SWITCH

In connection with their tracks to the new freight sheds, the C.P.R. Company is applying to the Railway Board for permission to place a switch on King Street.

This switch will be at the eastern end of the street over which all the tracks will cross.

But the City Council last night, decided to instruct the City Solicitor to take up the question in the interests of the city. The Council does not wish the switch to be so placed.

REMOVE THE POLES

The city is endevoring to have the C.P.R. remove their poles from George street, south of Charlotte street, and application will be made at the same meeting of the Railway Board.

WANTED—A CROSSING

Ernest Telford, Benson Ave., asked for a crossing from the east side of the street to this residence on the other side. The Board of Works will decide.

Peck Kerr and McElderry gave notice of a claim for damages on behalf of their client, Alex Ferguson, who lost one of his legs through accident on Bethune street.

LIGHT FOR CHURCH

The Fire, Water and Light committee will decide on a request from the Park street church for a light in front of that church.

BOARD OF TRADE

C. H. Pennfather president of the Board of Trade wrote that Messrs. W. G. Morrow, W. H. Denham and C. H. Pennefather had been appointed to represent the Board on the Manufacturers' Committee.

CROSSING REPAIRS

The Quaker Oats Company will supply the timber for the repair of the Hunter street crossings in front of their plant. Street Commissioner Evans is acting in the matter.

DRY SWEEPING

The Board of Works will pass on a recommendation to Council from the Board of Health, for the passage of a by-law, prohibiting dry sweeping of the sidewalks.

VOICE FROM THE WEST

Thos. Turcott asked that attention be paid to the creek near the Bonner-Worth Company. The Board of Works will take up the question.

A NEW SIGN

The report of the Manufacturers' Committee included a recommendation that J. J. Turner and Sons be given the contract of placing a new sign, advertising the city's utilities, on the island above the C.P.R. bridge.

The question was referred back to the committee.

Ald. McIntyre objected to a new sign as there was one there already.

It was explained that the firm would use the present sign of the city and their own and make one sign at a cost of $97.

Other locations were suggested such as the railway "diamond" and the stations.

ANOTHER HORSE

The Fire Water and Light Committee was given authority to purchase a horse for the fire department.

TWO WEEKS HOLIDAYS

T. Q. Quartermaine, of the City Engineers department and Robert Wilson caretaker of the city buildings were each granted two weeks holidays.

SIDEWALKS FOR EAST CITY

Ald. Anderson asked for sidewalks on Woodbine Avenue, north side, on Clifford street and Ratcliffe street, and that they be added to the list on the Board of Works report.

"I've had this matter before the Board for the last three years," said Ald. Anderson.

Ald. Duncan held the street should be petitioned for in the regular way.

"If those streets had been on this side of the river they would have been built three years ago," remarked the east city representative, who also prophesied that somebody would break their necks.

The sidewalks were added.

NO STEEL FOR HOPE FACTORY

And Brick Work Is Being Held Back

The cement foundation for the Henry Hope factory has been laid, as has also the flooring, but the work has for a week or so been at a standstill. The foundry which has the contract for supplying the steel has too many orders on hand and cannot fill the local one. The steel being a minus quantity, holds the bricklayers from starting the work, so the whole construction work will be held up till the steel arrives. Mr. Richard Sheehy, who has the contract for the brick work stated this morning that he didn't know when the steel would arrive, and said it might be a month.

As yet neither of the two Railway Companies have made connection with the new factory, and it is not necessary to have a siding to bring in the steel. The C.P.R. tracks is only about 100 yards away, and the G.T.R. is also very close. In all probability both railways will run a siding to the factory.

THE DOWNIE STREET CREEK

Johnston wants to know what is doing in regard to the Downie St. creek and last night he asked for information.

He was informed that there were mortgages on the properties to be conveyed to the city for the diversion of the creek, and that this situation had to be investigated before action could be taken.

HYDRO-ELECTRIC.

On motion of Ald. Gordon the Power Committee and the City Solicitor were authorized to retain what counsel and expert witnesses are necessary in connection with the arbitration proceedings re expropriating the Peterborough Light & Power Company's plant; to engage an official stenographer, and motors if necessary; and to take whatever other steps are necessary in connection with the same.

TEN CENTS ADDED TO PEA COAL

Pea Coal Alone Remains at Same Price.

ACTIVITY ON THE TRENT CANAL

Ottawa Aug. 5—It transpires that the construction of the Trent Valley Canal is within sight. This waterway has been before the public for nearly a century and has been under consideration for many years.

Hon. Frank Cochrane has taken the work up in earnest and recently went over the route from Trenton, on Lake Ontario, to Orillia, on Lake Simcoe, and from Orillia over the proposed route of the Georgian Bay section as far as Ragged Rapids, on the Severn River. That portion of the canal between Trenton and Hastings, at the Lake Ontario end is rapidly nearing completion, and it is expected that it will be finished in 1914 and ready for use in 1915. That will give complete water connection between Orillia and Lake Ontario.

The Port Severn section at the Georgian Bay end will be advertised in a day or so. The remainder of the work between Port Severn and Lake Couchiching will be advertised in three sections some time in the coming Fall, and it is hoped that the work on these sections will be completed in 1915.

TREATMENT WAS BRUTAL IT IS SAID

Toward Young Girl From Local Institution

DRAGGED BY HAIR

And Beaten With Ropes—Woman in Court

WINDSOR, Aug. 5—Complaint has been made before Magistrate McKevelle of Amherstburg, against Mrs. E. Seniscar, aged about sixty, charging her with brutally beating and ill-treating fifteen-year-old Kitie Sherwood, a former inmate of the Barndao Home for Girls at Peterboro.

According to the story the girl told the officers, Mrs. Senicar dragged her more than thirty feet by the hair of her head. She also charges she was beaten with a heavy rope. This case was scheduled to be heard in the Police Court yesterday, but the nonappearance of the defendant caused the postponement of the case until Wednesday. The child has been placed in the custody of the Children's Aid Society.

FIRE IN THE DRY CUTTINGS

So Far As Is Known, Green Timber Is Safe

As stated yesterday, a fierce fire is raging in the eastern part of Cavendish and Anstruther, and a couple of camps have been destroyed.

So far, however, the fire has been confined to the dry cuttings, and the green lumber is practically untouched. Heavy rains have fallen in certain localities, and thus the efforts of the men engaged in fighting the flames have been aided.

Unless heavy winds rise, the fire will, it is felt, be confined to the areas already invaded and where the dry cuttings alone will be consumed.

Mr. Dickson Davidson of the Peterboro Lumber Company made a trip to the north country yesterday, going as far as Ketcheeum Lake and Bottle Lake.

FULLER CHARGED WITH VAGRANCY

His Wife and Children Are At the Shelter

Yesterday afternoon a man named Fuller was arrested by County Constable Archie Moore on the charge of vagrancy.

It appears that for the past ten days or so, Fuller and his wife along with their four children, have been camping just outside the city in Smith township. Owing to the unhealthy condition in which the family were living, the Children's Aid Society authorities were notified and the wife and children removed to the Shelter. The mother is in need of medical attendance. The father was placed in jail and will appear before Magistrate Edmison to-morrow morning on the charge of vagrancy.

Fuller, who is a rather rough-looking customer claims that he was brought up near Kingston and came here about ten days ago from Oshawa.

HARBOR PLANS WERE ADOPTED

Were Prepared By Mr. T. E. Pearse, An Old Peterboro Boy

A late issue of the Times-Herald of Newport News, Va., gives details of extensive changes to be made in the harbor, and of proposed drainage of swamp lands to be used as truck farms.

The work will call for a very large expenditure, and the plans, which were at once favored by the authorities and adopted, were proposed by the city engineer, Mr. T. E. Pearse. Mr. Pearse has been city engineer for the last thirteen years. He is an old Peterborough boy, son of the late Mr. Edgcumbe Pearse, for many years county clerk and treasurer.

The work proposed has been long in view, and plans proposed at different times, but none offered so practical and applicable as laid down by the now city engineer.

RAILWAY SIDING FOR PETER HAMILTON CO. AND ONE FOR TURNERS

No Time Lost in Granting Request of Turners After Hamilton Co. Application is Allowed.

The minutes taken by the City Clerk at last night's Council meeting show that the Council passed a by-law authorizing the C.P.R. to construct a siding by way of Water street to give a rear service to the Peter Hamilton Co.

Authority was also given for the extension of the siding across King street to serve J. J. Turner & Sons.

According to the City Solicitor, the first by-law will have to be amended as it provides for the use of the siding by the Peter Hamilton Co., only.

The request from J. J. Turner and Sons for a siding was made about the same time as the application from the Hamilton Co., but the former firm was turned down.

Last night when the by-law was introduced, Ald. Duncan made objection on the grounds that the street would be practically closed, with sidings on the east and one on the west. Then too the subject for the proposed Dalhousie street bridge was to be considered.

"Why not have the Company use their own property?" "It's a foolish move," said Ald. Duncan.

"We're making an awful mistake," said Ald. Johnston. He cited conditions on Bethune street as the horrible example.

Ald. Gordon in favoring the by-law held that manufacturers were the life of the city. The Peter Hamilton Co. had never received anything from the city.

Ald. Green contended that the company had a perfect right to the siding. The company was one of the oldest and possibly the best for the city. All the property south of the tracks would be for manufacturing purposes.

The vote was recorded as follows:

Yea—Ald. Gillespie, Gordon, Duffus, Green, Anderson and McInty.

Nay—Ald. Duncan, Johnston, Langford and Mayor Bradburn.

Ald. Duncan then moved that a by-law be passed granting the request of J. J. Turner and Sons.

Ald. Johnston—"When these people get in you might as well try to move the earth," Ald. Johnston alluded to the Railway Co.

Ald. Langford—"I'm opposed to allowing these tracks to cross the road. We don't know what the future will be."

The vote was taken with the result that there was a majority for the Turners' request.

"Are you fellows codding," queried Ald. Johnston.

"Put it up to the market square for Dennis's," remarked the Mayor.

"Is it a fact that the by-law is carried?" asked Ald. Langford. The reply was affirmative.

"It's an awful mistake to put sidings across the streets. I don't see where it's going to end," added the Mayor.

"You'll have to amend the first by-law," explained the City Solicitor.

SET OF TYMPANIES AND MONSTER BASS VIOL

For the 57th Band—Three Year Contracts for New Players

The 57th Regiment have just completed arrangements for the purchase of a set of tympanies and a monster bass viol. Mr. Dyer, the new addition to the ranks will look after the tympanies, while Mr. Lech an old-time member and a player of more than ordinary ability, will take charge of the new viol.

Mr. Alfred Chown piccolo and flute player for many years with that most celebrated of English Bands, that of the Royal Engineers, is expected to arrive in town this week and will immediately enter upon his duties with the 57th. Mr. Chown should, with his wide experience in such a good company as the Royal Engineers, prove a decided acquisition to the ranks.

For the protection of both band and player, binding three-year contracts are executed to cover all new players. This will tend to keep the efficiency of the band at a high standard at all times and prevent temporary fluctuations. The 57th with this new and aggressive policy of progress will soon be in a position second to none in the Dominion.

UPTURNED CANOE TELLS OF DEATH

Two Young Men are Drowned Near Orillia.

Orillia, Aug. 5.—An upturned canoe and two coats found floating in Lake Couchiching were the first evidence of a drowning accident in which David Church, Jr., and Harry Massey lost their lives. They started out to Chief's Island yesterday morning but evidently upset before getting half-way there. Neither could swim. Church was 21 years of age, and Massey, who came here recently from London, was 16. The bodies have not been recovered, though dragging has been going on all day.

BARREL top, peg tops, suffragette or any of the other names by which the new skirt lines are heralded, all have the same thing in common: seams are superfluous, and there is more material in the skirt than in preceding seasons. It is not about the feet. In fact, so far, excepting in a few isolated cases, all extra fulness is introduced in various ways, but more generally as in the skirts just named, by taking a very wide piece of material and literally encircling the figure loosely with it. The extra material, usually removed by darts or gores, is simply pleated into the waist band in triangular shaped pleats. These are always left unstitched and often unpressed also, which gives the effect of added dress material and thickens the figure considerably between the waist and the knee.

Another skirt, not quite so new, has this extra fulness, the one wide piece of material placed about the figure, but widely crossed in front and drawn up into pleated unstitched folds to the belt. The lower edges are rounded off. When of clinging material and hanging in about the feet because of the slash the garment looks like modern style Turkish trousers.

Still another style of skirt, somewhat on the lines of the last one, in so far as using one width of cloth is concerned, has drapery folds on one side and is caught up and fastens below hip depth into a horizontal fold on the other side.

Corsages are soft, shapeless layers of chiffon tulle and lace with the skirt material mounting up in girdle or pointed tabs. Sleeves are loose without being exactly puffed, of no definite shape, sometimes short, sometimes long.

All this is a part of the new idea in dressmaking. Gone are the fitting or semi-fitted dresses and coats, and in their place are flowing lines and drapery that affect even the attitudes of the fashionable woman. No longer is an erect pose necessary, so that the gown may fit the figure like a glove. Instead, the new aesthetic poses that go well with the artistic lines.

As a side issue there is an ever increasing tendency toward the fashion of the '80s, vague, perhaps, but none the less increasing as the season advances. This is a sort of modern [illegible] fashioned with numberless buttons down the front and with a bit of polonaise drapery.

The skirt slash remains, but it is a very different one from that of preceding seasons. It is a lapped slash, which makes it much more modest for the average gown, and when the dress is also drawn up enough in front to expose the instep and ankles the lapped folds above hardly ever separate enough to show [illegible] silken ankle.

Three views of a three piece gown worn by a charming French actress are pictured here, in Nos. 3, 4 and 5 the front and [illegible] back views of the [illegible] and the little [illegible] blouse coat.

The skirt is of light gray [illegible] [illegible] to a point in the back [illegible]

The other three piece gown, pictured [illegible] in two views [illegible]

[illegible] there is a deep shaped insertion of this [illegible] net. The wrap, of gray charmeuse [illegible] the skirt, is as vague and apparently [illegible] as the corsage [illegible] revers open so widely as to show the front of the corsage. On the dress a very narrow girdle is placed, hardly accentuating or tightening the wide waist line blouse [illegible] done.

A quaint hat goes with this costume, [illegible] on the head; it has two ruffles [illegible] placed over and under the absurd little brim, and two big poppies are posed on the front at the top of the crown.

Elaborate Toilettes.

THE present fashions are composed of all sorts of original and unexpected details. No one general rule has been laid down, with the result that [illegible] fashions have distinctly gained in variety and charm. One of the characteristics of the present season is the habit of wearing elaborate toilettes every afternoon. People are beginning to be much less stay-at-home, and since the society woman now frequents the smart tea rooms or the half-public, half-private hotel salons where the tango is danced she necessarily adopts a much smarter afternoon dress than she used to wear before these reunions became the fashion.

Many smart women are adopting little short "garments," such as the bolero, the "saute en barque" and the "mantelet," as they find them an excuse for utilizing in their composition all sorts of old lace and charming old-fashioned embroidered tulles. As the summer is warm and sunny this idea is carried out in a number of lingerie dresses, and little short loose-fitting paletots are also made of lingerie materials. These toilettes strike a very feminine note and are most becoming, especially if they are worn with the large hats "à la Reynolds," whose graceful becoming lines are one of the successes of the season.

A very pretty novelty to be especially noted is the dress in broderie anglaise veiled in mousseline de soie of the same shade, on which is contrasted a wide soft bayadere sash of pink or pale yellow crêpe de Chine.

All-over lace is also much used in the composition of lingerie dresses. The newest come in very fine, delicate designs, and the champagne tones are the most popular. A pretty trimming for these laces is a bias band of satin in the same shade, or else in some color which harmonizes well with the rest of the toilette.

The different materials now used in the same costume, when they are mingled successfully, produce a very original and personal toilette.

PETES TAKE JUMP TO THE FIRST DIVISION

Swartz to the Front Again Through His Heavy Hitting Tracey Scored Shut Out.

To-day the Petes are in the first division with prospects of going still higher. Percy Swartz was in the limelight again yesterday with a three base hit and another for two bags.

BERLIN, Ont., Aug. 5.— Peterboro and Berlin divided a double meeting yesterday, the locals capturing the morning game by 4-1, and the White Caps took the afternoon fixture by six to nothing. Berlin scored the four counters in the first inning by getting to Cresswell for a triple, homer and three singles. After that Cresswell pitched good ball. Bramble for the locals held the visitors hitless up to the seventh, and after that they got but four. Tracey for the White Caps repeated Bramble's performance in the afternoon and had no trouble registering a shut-out. Pitcher Schaeffer's offerings were easy for the Petes, they gathering an even dozen. Two passes in the sixth and a scratch hit by Trout were followed by Swartz's three-base clout. Brant's one hand stab of Dinsmore's liner and the latter's fielding were the features of the day. Box score:

A Boring Incident.

The name of Sir John French has been much before the public of late owing to the prominent position he occupies at the War Office.

Gen. French is noted for his dry wit, and during the Boer war he was continually irritated by a young officer on his staff who was always imagining that an attack was about to be delivered by the Boers, whom he always pronounced "Bores." Sir John had several times endeavored to correct his pronunciation, but without effect. One day the young officer reported to Gen. French that he believed he could see through his field-glass quite twenty "Bores" hiding amongst the rocks near the camp.

"'Bores,' did you say?" inquired Gen. French.

"Yes, sir, 'Bores.' Can I do anything?"

"Yes, don't add to them," was the prompt reply.

World Has Forgotten.

The X-ray martyr and pioneer, Prof. Harnack, formerly of the London Hospital, who has had seventeen operations for dermatitis, among them the amputation of his left hand, gave evidence in an action in the Bow (London) County Court. Mr. Harnack's right hand is also affected, and in the course of an interview after giving his evidence, he said the disease was gradually spreading all over his right hand, which he feared he would lose in time.

"They very kindly pensioned me off from the London Hospital on my full salary," he said. "I am always thankful for that, but," he added, "the nation has done nothing."

Mean Church-Goers.

The meanest of church-goers, who seem to consider that they have done all that can be expected of them if they drop a threepenny-bit in the plate once a week, was commented upon a few days ago by the Bishop of London. "If," he said, "people put a threepenny-bit in the offertory, some of them seem to think that everything is produced—a handsome vicar, two good-looking curates, and a peal of bells." It certainly is a fact that the burdens of the clergy are considerably increased by the poor generosity on the part of worshippers, and it was only the other day that a certain vicar announced that he had given notice to the curate and organist, owing to lack of funds. He had appealed for $500 to pay off the churchwardens' debt, but after cadging round the parish could only obtain half of it. "I can go no longer," he says, in justifiable disgust.

Boy Scouts as Servants.

At the Dorset (Eng.) seaside village of Studland the servant problem has been solved by Mr. and Mrs. A. H. Berens, who employ only Boy Scouts to do the domestic work of the house.

There are four of them. One does all the cooking and superintends the general routine of the house; the second waits at table, mends socks, clothes and boots; the third works chiefly in the garden and does odd jobs in the house and laundry work; while the fourth assists in the cooking, dusting, and sweeping, and is himself more valuable than two ordinary domestic servants.

The boys' work is started about 6.30 and finished about five. Each Scout has a plot of ground to himself where he can grow and sell his own flowers and vegetables.

Queen Bars Change of Faith.

Queen Mary has just withdrawn her consent that Miss Eleanor Church, one of her entourage, should enter the service of Princess Auguste Victoria of Hohenzollern, King Manuel's fiancee.

The princess engaged Miss Church to come to her after the marriage to Manuel, and, in accordance to etiquette, she obtained Queen Mary's consent. Queen Mary learned later that if Miss Church entered the princess' service it would be necessary for her to become a Roman Catholic and reconsidered her action.

Miss Church apparently is willing to become a Catholic, but the princess will not take her without Queen Mary's consent.

The Two Schools

A Story For the Graduation Period

By KATHLEEN J. M'CURDY

When the season comes round in which the boys and the girls speak their graduating pieces to admiring audiences—their parents and relatives furnish the admiration—the boys dressed in their Sunday clothes, the girls in simple white, I cannot refrain from thinking back to those days when all this was of so great moment to me. Even as schoolgirls we were looking forward to a time when we should be the mothers sending our children to school and listening to them orate on graduating day. And some of us girls had sweethearts long before we reached the high school. But there is a long step between a high school and a grammar school graduation and a still longer one between a high school and a college commencement.

My beau ideal at school was Fred Sumner. If I could win a little attention from him I was happy. If he frowned upon me I was like "sweet Alice" in the song of "Ben Bolt." I trembled. He was the son of wealthy parents and one of the leaders in the social features of our school life. Happy was the girl who received an invitation to one of the children's parties at his father's home. I was thus honored, though I was not quite up to Fred Sumner's set, and I appreciated the honor.

There was another boy in the school who lived near me and who was of a very different type. Johnny Ryerson. Johnny's mother was a widow and in straitened circumstances. She really couldn't afford to keep Johnny at school, but she did, though as soon as he was old enough to work she needed what he could earn. Johnny studied very hard. He was obliged to study hard, because he did not learn readily. But what Johnny learned he learned thoroughly. In this he was unlike my idol, Fred Sumner, who learned so easily that he seldom paid much attention to his studies till just before examination, when he would do all his studying at once.

When Fred went away to college I was considered his best girl. He would leave me alone once in awhile to go after some other, but invariably came back to me. What it was that held him to me I don't know. I was certainly nothing of a belle, and the social standing of my family was nothing like his. Nevertheless there must have been something in me to attract him, for he certainly gave me the preference, and before he was graduated he told me "his story."

When we all got through the high school the question came up as to going to college. Girls were not so used to getting a college education then as now, and I, not having the means to carry me through without working my own way, concluded not to take a university course. Fred Sumner went to one of the large colleges, where he soon became prominent. He was elected a member of one of the most select fraternities and was altogether an all around desirable fellow.

Johnny Ryerson's mother made up her mind that her son should have a college education, and she bent her energies to that end. Q—— college was but a few miles from where we lived, and Johnny could go there and sleep and eat at home. At least that's what he did, though how nobody could find out. Johnny didn't get into any of the fraternities and, in fact, took a back seat all through his college course. How could he be prominent when he never had any money to subscribe for the different affairs of his class or his college that must be paid for by subscription? Besides, he was working at something all the while. During the winter months he worked at odd jobs, though he was obliged to confine himself to such as he could do at certain times, for not being smart he was obliged to study hard in order to get through college. And even then he took rather a low stand in his class.

While John was in college I was living at home, and when he had time he used to come to see me, for we had been brought up in the same town and had always known each other. I knew very well what his mother was doing for him, how she pinched and saved and worked to get money to help her boy to get an education.

Somehow I took it into my head that I was an object of more than especial interest to John. It did not trouble me—no woman is troubled at a superfluity of lovers—but I felt sorry that I could not reciprocate. John was not my ideal at all. That ideal was Fred Sumner. No two men could have been more different. Sumner's clothes were cut in the height of fashion, and his manners were delightful, especially with women, toward whom he was charmingly deferential. John Ryerson not only wore his hat on all occasions, but it was very shabby. Moreover, he had no fraternity badge to pin on his waistcoat. In other words, he was not considered of enough importance to be elected a member of a fraternity.

And yet there was something about John that I liked. I suppose it was his integrity. The world, especially the social world, takes no account of integrity. Those who are on top are there because they are there, and so long as they have the wherewithal to stay there they can do so. If they disappoint society by doing something to cause their fall society simply walks over their carcasses and goes on, but does not profit by the matter. That is something with which society has nothing to do. Society exists in college as everywhere else. There is the same social climbing in a university as there is on upper Fifth avenue, New York. Considering all this, I couldn't help feeling sorry for John that he must continually take a back seat.

My two admirers graduated within a few days of each other. I attended the commencement exercises at both colleges. The commencement at Sumner's university was held first. He invited me especially, and I was under his care while I was there. He had an appointment to speak at commencement, but did not avail himself of it. I found that he had become one of those who affect to despise learning. This class of students has largely increased of late. They go to college more as girls go to a finishing school, assuming that a university is a small world with all the struggles, triumphs, failures, and other features of the world they are about to enter, and it is well to have some training for the larger field before entering it.

"What do men in a law case care about oratory? They want evidence," said Fred to me when I was arguing the case with him. Since I could not refute him I held my tongue.

Having gone to see Fred Sumner graduate, I was obliged to be content with seeing him elected a member of the Creme de la Creme, the tiptop of all the fraternities. He said himself that he would rather have that election than take the valedictory. He stood well in his class, he said, and that was all he cared for. These ideas were new to me, but since I knew nothing about college life I could form no opinion of my own, though I admit it struck me that if social prominence is the desideratum I could not see but that Sumner was right. He had kept in the leading class of students and was altogether desirable. A valedictory or a salutatory would not likely have improved his status.

After a pleasant visit, a delightful evening at a graduating dance, at which Fred filled my card with the most prominent men of his class, including a multimillionaire, who seemed more desirable than any of the honor men, I left for home. Fred begged me to give him a reply to his suit before parting, and I would have made it then and in the affirmative, but I believed he would appreciate it more from having to wait for it. So, in order to let him feel that he had a rival, I said that I would defer my answer till after the commencement at Q—— college. This had the effect I desired, I'm sure.

The exercises at our home college, comprising not more than 400 students, was very different from the one I had just attended. I went to see John's mother as soon as I reached home, and she told me that her son had insisted upon her coming to the college to hear him speak at commencement. She had so pinched her wardrobe that she was obliged to tell him that she had nothing fit to wear. John had replied that, if she had nothing but a dress of gunny bags, still she must come. She did not wish to go, for her son would surely be ashamed of her attired in an old alpaca she had had for fifteen years and a hat that had been out of fashion for a still longer period. But John had put his foot down, and she dare not refuse.

At the exercises I took a seat directly behind the old lady, being curious to see how she would act while John was speaking. When it came his turn to deliver his oration I was struck with a certain practical simplicity there was about it. His subject was, "Why Do We Go to College?" It seemed to me that there was far more depth to what he said than to what Sumner had said to me on the same subject. The principal point he made was: "We must prepare to do our best in the world by doing our best in college. A college career will not in itself give us success, but it gives us better weapons with which to fight."

When John had finished his oration he did something that won me to him far more forcibly than anything he had said. On receiving his diploma he marched down the center aisle in full view of every one present to where his mother sat in her barbarous costume and laid the sheepskin in her lap. Then, putting his arms around her neck, he kissed her.

Most of those present knew the story the act told—a story of pinch and save, a story of devotion from a mother to a son and its final reward. It was followed by a clapping of hands, through which John walked back to his place looking as though he realized the applause solely due to the heroine, his old mother in her alpaca dress and out of date hat.

I considered that I as well as both my suitors was upon the threshold of the great world, and it behooved me to choose between the two schools they represented. My whole being was suddenly turned to that represented by John Ryerson. At any rate, it filled me with a sudden antipathy to the other. The same evening after my return from the commencement exercises at Q—— college I wrote Fred Sumner an irrevocable refusal.

John Ryerson from that time gradually became more and more to me. I finally married him, and it seems to me that while I got nothing showy I did get all that is really best in a man. Nor is it the showy attributes that count in the long run. My husband has been able to give me and our children all the comforts we need, and whenever he is spoken of by his fellow citizens it is, "There's a man to tie to."

Came To See Her.

The Countess of Warwick sometimes finds that her title rather interferes with her efforts as a reformer. "I suppose," she observed at a public meeting, "that you have all come here to give your support to the resolution in favor of the medical inspection of school children?" "Oh, no, we haven't," said a voice; "we've come to see you!"

Holiday Freaks.

A Streatham (Eng.) man, with his family and servants, has set out for a week's holiday in a hired motor-bus. He is his own chauffeur, and spent a couple of days mastering the intricacies of the vehicle. The party are driving through Kent to the coast. There is a rage nowadays for curious holidays.

PRESIDENT J. C. WATTERS
(OF THE TRADES AND LABOR CONGRESS)
AT THE LABOR HALL

Labor M. P.'s Wanted — Trades Unionism the Remedy for Social Evils—Poverty and War to be Abolished

Mr J. C. Watters, the president of the Trades and Labor Congress of Canada addressed a meeting of working men in the Labor Hall last night. Mr. D. Moore was in the chair.

The speaker began by lamenting the paucity of the audience which, he said, showed that the workers in Peterborough were not alive to their own interests. If the working men were not interested in their own welfare, who do they expect will be? But he consoled himself with the thought that he was, at any rate, addressing the cream of the Labor movement in the city.

He went on to impress his audience with the truth, that the Labor movement did not depend so much upon the leaders, but upon individual workers who could put before their fellows, the importance of Unions in the betterment of conditions of labor.

He pleaded for the International Union of all labor as against a purely Canadian organization. He argued that for every dollar that goes over the line to support the International organization, at least three find their way back into Canada. He combated the idea that Canadians were being dictated to by American leaders, and said that if there was any dictation, it came from Canada.

The speaker went on to show the necessity for the Trades and Labor Congress, and how it looked after labor legislation in Canada. Neither Conservative or Liberal members, he said, are the friends of Labor, and workingmen will not be properly represented and receive fair play in parliament till they send their own men there.

He made the assertion that there were no loyal Canadians outside the ranks of Labor, because Labor was interested chiefly in human life. True loyalty consisted, not in the getting of dollars and cents, as with the capitalists, but in the consideration of the welfare of the people generally. Only a workingman can sympathise with and understand the privation of the poor.

Mr Watters also dwelt on the question of militarism, and said that the workingman never gained anything from war. He said that the day was passing when Tennyson's lines were true:

"There's not to reason why
There's but to do, or die"

that the workingman was going to "reason why" before he would "do and die."

He then went on to affirm that the Labor-movement was an organization which got at the causes of social evils. That all the benevolent institutions and the Salvation Army were only dealing with effects. That if men and women had good conditions of labor, and a wage by which they could keep themselves respectable, they would live decent lives and develope their higher natures. He said that the "social evil" was caused by store-girls being under-paid.

He finished by saying that the unions were not for the mere raising of wages, but for the abolition of poverty and the uplifting of the race as a whole.

A vote of thanks was accorded to the speaker and the meeting closed at 10.15

BY-LAW WAS NOT CARRIED; MR. BRAUND CAN BUILD STORE

Two-Thirds Of Council Present At Meeting Voted In Favor, But This Was Not Sufficient To Pass the By-law

The fact that a petition signed by 97 per cent of the property holders contained the request, that the district from and including King street to Weller street, and Park street to the Boundary Road, be restricted so that no commercial building could be erected, decided the majority of the City Dads last night to vote for the prohibitive by-law, but the by-law was not passed. It was necessary to have a two-thirds majority of the whole Council vote. The vote was as follows:

Nay—Aldermen Duncan, Green and Johnston

Yea—Aldermen Gillespie, Gordon, Duffus, Langford, Anderson, McIntyre and Mayor Bradburn.

Mr. Wm. Pope, sr., who owns property in this district, made vigorous protest to the by-law being passed. He claimed that some of the people who signed did not know what they were signing. He was, he said, not alone in opposition to the by-law, and if it were passed proceedings would be taken to crush it. "There is a corporation interested in this," said Mr. Pope, with some heat.

The aldermen agreed that Mr. R. Braund had acted very fairly in the matter, in fact, Ald. Duffus said he admired Mr. Braund for the stand he had taken.

The by-law was introduced by Ald. G. N. Gordon.

Ald. Green held the opposite view to the aldermen who based their decision particularly on the "97 per cent broadside." "We are doing," he said, "contrary to what we are elected to do in attempting to say what a man must do with his property so long as he is not creating a nuisance." In passing such a by-law, Ald. Green held that the Council were exceeding their rights.

Ald. Duncan—"I think Mr. Braund could go ahead with his store and we couldn't prevent him."

Ald. Johnston—"I don't think a decent, respectable store would be any drawback."

Ald. Anderson thought a good store such as Mr. Braund would build, would be a benefit rather than a detriment, but he joined the majority for the 97 per cent.

The big majority also decided Ald. Duffus.

"Its a mistake that we haven't got what we call a residential district," remarked the Mayor

INSPECTOR MADE RAID AT NIGHT

And Was Successful in Blind Pig Expedition.

COBALT, Aug. 5.—(Special.)—Inspector Rowell, the new head of the provincial police in Timiskaming, accompanied by Provincial Constable J. Lefebore and Town Constable Sharpe, succeeded last night in landing a blind pigger in the Montreal River district, and another alleged one is under arrest.

For a couple of years the police and plainclothes men have been trying in vain to stop the importation of whiskey into this district and Silver Centre in South Lorrain. Several complaints were filed by the mines in the district, but the police and spotters were baffled. The party started out yesterday afternoon and went down Lake Timiskaming and up the Montreal River to the Gillies power house and then after dusk they stole into Lorrain and arrested Robert May and Arthur Valland. The police seized a quantity of whiskey and May was convicted and sentenced to four months.

At Gillies the officers waited until daybreak to accomplish their mission, but it was a successful one, and it is believed will put a stop to the daring illegal importation of whiskey which has been going on in this mining centre. Valland will be tried today.

Domestic Is Arrested.

BROCKVILLE, Aug. 5.—(Special.)—A county constable placed under arrest at McIntosh Mills a young woman named Annie Curtis, charged with setting fire to barns owned by J. Flood, by whom she was employed. Three or four fires were started and all extinguished with little damage except to one building, the roof of which was burned off. Miss Curtis, whose parents reside in the neighborhood of McIntosh Mills, was brought here this afternoon and formally arraigned on a charge of arson. She was remanded to jail until Friday for a hearing.

Prices Fixed, They Say.

BRANTFORD, Aug. 5.—(Special.)—Brantford consumers are complaining that the local market prices are fixed, and an investigation is demanded. It is claimed that prices are fixed before the market opens by a representative of the producers, who is employed in that capacity. Farmers, it is stated, will not dispose of their products before they know the price stated by retail stores and by their agent appointed to look after their interests.

Rabies Suspected.

GALT, Aug. 5.—(Special.)—A valuable Pomeranian dog, owned by the proprietor of the Del Monte hotel at Preston, developed what is supposed to be rabies yesterday and a policeman shot it. The head has been sent to Toronto to determine the question of hydrophobia.

MEDICOS ASSEMBLE

Great Medical Congress Is Welcomed to London.

LONDON, Aug. 5.—(Can. Press.)—Viscount Morley, lord president of the council, presided tonight at a banquet given by the British Government to some six hundred of the leading delegates to the International Medical Congress, which convenes in Albert Hall tomorrow.

During the congress, which will continue for a week, there will be the greatest concentration of medical wisdom in London that the world has ever seen in one place. Doctors from all the countries of the world, estimated to aggregate 10,000, and including the greatest specialists in all departments of medicine and surgery, are here to attend the meetings.

While the general sessions will be held in Albert Hall, there will be daily discussions in twenty-six sections and subsections of the congress, for which purpose as many halls have been engaged. The latest researches and discoveries in every branch of the art of healing will be discussed.

The German delegation includes Dr. Paul Ehrlich, chief of the government's institute at Frankfort-on-Main, who is acclaimed by his people as the world's greatest pathologist. From Japan comes Shibasaburo Kitasato, a famous bacteriologist, and acknowledged to be one of the greatest authorities on bubonic plague.

The congress will be a clearing-house for the free exchange of information concerning achievements and discoveries, in the highways and byways of medical science.

MEDIATION MAY FAIL

President Wilson Not Hopeful of Success in Mexico

WASHINGTON, Aug. 5.—President Wilson will await a report from Commissioner of Mediation John Lind, whom he sent to Mexico City yesterday, with instructions and power to negotiate with President Huerta, to bring an end to the hostilities in that country before taking any further action in the Mexican situation.

While the president believes mediation the best first step in trying to straighten out the Mexican tangle, he is not over hopeful of success. In fact President Wilson and all other members of the administration are inclined to accept the reports received from Huerta and General Carranza that they will not agree to mediation.

Governor Lind will receive assistance from quarters aside from the American Government. Already many of the big monied interests in Mexico-Domestic and foreign, which have been friendly to Huerta, and have right along supported his administration, are at work to induce Huerta to agree to resign and accept some Mexican not opposed by the revolutionists in the northern Mexican states for provisional president.

So far the plans the president has in mind to use in the event of failure of mediation is the repeal of the resolution of March 14, 1912, which prohibited the shipment of arms and ammunition to any faction in Mexico.

EVIDENCE OF WITNESS IS AGAINST GAMBLE

Preliminary Hearing of Charge of Conspiracy Against Labor Man Elicits Testimony That He Was Seen to Act Suspiciously in Vicinity of Rope Which Had Been Tampered With.

WHITBY, Aug. 5.—In order to give Mr. Hartley Dewart time to go into his case, the crown this morning granted a week's adjournment of the trial of Stead Gamble, business agent for the Structural Ironworkers' Union, on a charge of injuring a rope that was to be used in scaffold work. Since the first hearing the charge has been amended by placing a value of $20 on the rope, so as to make the offence indictable.

Magistrate Jephson of Pickering this morning heard several witnesses, among them being William Black, engineer on the derrick at the Dixie bridge. Black swore to seeing Gamble talking with the men on the job in the vicinity of the derrick. He stated that he saw Gamble and a man named McCuaig sitting on a box near the derrick and observed Gamble's hand moving as tho he were spilling something out of a bottle and a minute or two afterwards he threw something away, which he supposed was a bottle. Then Gamble and his companion started throwing stones and sticks at the place where the bottle, which was produced in court, had been picked up.

L. J. Rogers, chemist, of Toronto University, gave results of a test of the rope. The samples submitted to him contained sulphuric acid, which had corroded and destroyed the fabric. Traces of sulphuric acid were also found in the bottle submited to him.

Joseph Jordan, a fireman on the job, Charles Douglas, timekeeper for the Hamilton Bridge Co., and Joseph Deschayes, an employe of the bridge company, corroborated Black's evidence about Gamble being around the work. The magistrate refused bail in ordering Gamble to be put back for a week.

FIREMEN HURT

Eight Members of London Department Thrown Off Truck.

LONDON, Ont., Aug. 5.—(Can. Press.)—Eight firemen of the London Fire Department were more or less seriously injured at 3 o'clock this morning, when No. 2 auto fire truck was rammed by a locomotive at the William street crossing of the Grand Trunk Railroad while speeding to a fire.

The men had not a second's warning. The engine carried the truck along the track for 50 feet, when it was overturned, the men being buried beneath the hose. When the crew were taken out Fireman Percy Summers was found so seriously injured that he was taken to the hospital. The others were badly bruised, but are on duty this morning. The truck was a new one and valued at $7500 and was completely demolished. There was no insurance on it.

WANTS COAST LINE

C. N. R. Is Trying to Gain an Entrance to Boston.

BOSTON, Aug. 5.—Efforts are being made by the Canadian Northern Railway, the third of the great Canadian systems to become a transcontinental line thru the Dominion, to gain a terminal at Portland, Maine.

It is believed here that this step is only preliminary to an attempt to bring its lines into Boston in order to take advantage of the opportunity that the Grand Trunk failed to accept.

A company has already been organised and has obtained a charter to construct a railroad from Portland to South Portland, and to erect whatever terminal facilities may be needed there. This location offers the only available ground for a terminal at the Maine seaport and would make it possible for a transcontinental line to acquire a Portland entry to tide water at comparatively low cost.

It is no secret that for some time the Canadian Northern, which is now engaged in extending its line east from Winnipeg and west from Edmonton to the Pacific has long desired to enter Portland. Its effort to gain a terminal on United States territory and a share in New England trade led the company to take steps toward acquiring rights to build south thru Canada from Quebec and into the State of Maine.

There are still legal obstacles in the way, it is believed, that trackage rights can be obtained over the Maine central lines, or at least that a traffic agreement can be made by which the Canadian system could operate its trains into Portland.

A Maine Central official said today he believed his company would welcome a trackage agreement with the Canadian Northern, and that the most feasible entry to Portland would probably be by way of Megantic and the Rumford Falls division of the Maine Central.

TO INVESTIGATE WATER PRESSURE

Authorities at Toronto Want to Know

Toronto, August 6.—A rather unusual mode of procedure will be invoked by the authorities to investigate the costly series of fires which visited Toronto over the week end. Dr. Johnston, chief coroner for Toronto, will call a jury and will seek to determine not only the cause of the fire at the Exhibition Grounds and the other serious conflagrations of Saturday and Sunday, but will also investigate the condition of the water pressure, the absence of keys from fire alarm boxes at the Exhibition grounds and other matters of similar kind.

Strikers Stay Out.

DULUTH, Aug. 5.—(Can. Press.)—The strike situation at the Allouez ore docks has changed front tonight. The strikers, who were thought ready to go back to work today, voted to stay out. ## FLYER HITS BUGGY

James Fairbairn Is Killed by a Train at Clarkson.

CLARKSON, August 5.—When a Grand Trunk flyer struck the buggy in which he was seated shortly after one o'clock this afternoon, Mr. James Fairbairn was instantly killed at the railway crossing, just outside the village.

Mr. Fairbairn had been help up at the crossing by the passing of a long freight train, and did not notice the approach of the flyer. He had just driven on the crossing when the flyer came in the opposite direction to that in which the freight had been going, and, catching the buggy, threw the vehicle, horse and driver for a considerable distance.

The late James K. Fairbairn, with his family, had only recently come here to reside. He had purchased a small fruit and poultry farm here, and was superintending this. He is survived by his widow, the well-known writer and journalist, and member of the staff of The Toronto Daily Star, one son, William, now in Montreal, and five daughters, all at home.

Frank Baker Used Revolver to End His Life

Will Maintain Stand.

OTTAWA, Aug. 5.—Conservative members from Nova Scotia, New Brunswick and Prince Edward Island have combined to demand from the minister of railways the restoration of the local rates on the Intercolonial. Threats of resignation are made by these members if the increase put into effect by F. P. Gutelius some months ago are not abandoned.

It is reported that the Hon. Frank Cochrane is determined to stand by Mr. Gutelius in his policy, altho the Conservative members from these three provinces state that it is political suicide for the government as far as their constituencies are concerned.

Fire at Athabasca.

ATHABASCA LANDING, Alta., Aug. 5.—A fire, which broke out at 2.30 a.m., resulted in destroying the greater part of the business section. Two hotels were wiped out and over thirty business places destroyed by the flames. The fire started in the Grand Union Hotel, and the fire fighting appliances were totally inadequate to cope with the outbreak. Within a month the city's $75,000 pumping station would have been completed, but today not even an engine was available to fight the flames. A hundred people have been rendered destitute by the fire.

Bill Pushed Forward.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 5.—(Can. Press.)—The administration currency bill, still further amended in important particulars, emerged from the Democratic conference of the house banking and currency committee today over the protests of Representatives Neely of Kansas, Eagle of Texas and Ragsdale of South Carolina. At the end of a lively session, in which the Democratic objectors promised to carry their fight to the floor of the caucus next Monday, the Glass bill was approved by a vote of 11 to 8.

Monkeys Survived Tests.

PARIS, Aug. 5.—Director Roux of the Pasteur Institute has outlined to the Academy of Sciences results of the researches of Drs. Podevin and Vial.

These experimenters injected cholera microbes into monkeys, finding that in some cases, after weak injections, some of their monkeys lived, thereafter showing a certain immunity to fresh infection.

A serum made from the blood of recovering monkeys appears to have an appreciable curative effect on monkeys freshly and artificially injected with cholera microbes.

Child Locked in Empty House.

The little girl was starving and pale.

SIR DONALD MANN SAYS THE CROPS WILL END THE MONEY STRINGENCY

Trip Through West Country Satisfies Him That the Wheat Yield This Year Will Break All Records and Relieve the Money Situation — Harvest Two Weeks Earlier.

TORONTO, Aug 5.—Sir Donald Mann of the C. N. R., was in his office yesterday after a 16-day trip across the continent—Toronto to Vancouver and back. He was accompanied by Col. Davidson of the land department of the Canadian Northern.

Sir Donald said that in the course of his journey—and he went by the C.P.R. and returned by the C.N.R.—he had taken special pains to look at the country and size up the crops and to talk with people all along the road and to their officials in the west in order to size up the harvest situation. This was his 29th year's experience of the crops of the west, beginning in the early days with those of Manitoba and then extending his observations to Saskatchewan and Alberta as these provinces came along, and the conclusion he had arrived at after his late inspection, after the conversations he had had and after receiving reports from all their officials thruout the three provinces, was that the crop of 1913 would be the best average crop ever known to the three Provinces of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta. It would be a bumper crop.

There were places here and there where the crop was poor, but that was where the farming was poor; but over the most of the three provinces there would be a bumper crop and a good average quality as well; and the harvest would begin two weeks earlier than last year. Also the increase in the acreage would be at least 19 per cent. on what it was last year. The harvest was going on already at points and by Aug. 15 the three provinces would be in the middle of harvest work. The labor conditions were also better this year for the farmer, he said, as there was not such a demand for men in railway construction as in former years.

Sir Donald admitted that there was a financial stringency in the west, as in other parts of Canada and all the world over, but he certainly expected that once the harvest was begun, and the good crop was in sight, conditions would improve and that a lot of money would get into circulation.

Aliens Profitable!

AGED MAN THE VICTIM OF MURDEROUS ASSAULT

Hugh Hasson, Aged 65, While Camping on Humber River, Is Found Unconscious and Taken to Hospital—Crowd of Roughs Thought to Be Responsible For Crime.

TORONTO, Aug. 5.—Set upon by thugs and brutally beaten with clubs while sleeping in a lonely bush on the banks of the Humber River shortly after midnight Monday, Hugh Hasson aged 65, of 106 Edwin avenue, West Toronto, lies in the Western Hospital at the point of death. His horse wandered to a store on West Bloor street yesterday afternoon and led children back into the woods where his master lay unconscious. Hasson's skull is fractured at the base, his head gashed and his arm broken. No hope is held out for his recovery.

The county police are making every effort to track down the guilty parties but so far have not unearthed a definite clue, but the police are now working in a direction from which results are expected. No information could be secured from the man as to his assailants, as he has not regained consciousness since entering the hospital.

Between the Humber River and Jane street and just south of Bloor street, there is a lonely piece of scrub bush. This part of the district is so seldom visited by people that it has been termed Deadman's Bush by residents.

Yesterday afternoon at 4 o'clock a horse with part of his harness on, came out of the woods near Gough's refreshment parlors on Bloor street near the east bank of the river. One of Mr. Gough's children atempted to capture the animal, but it ran back into the bush. The children followed and had gone about 200 yards when the horse stopped. A short distance off they found Hasson lying face down in a pool of blood. Help was secured and the man carried to the refreshment parlors.

When County Constable George Simpson arrived on the scene, about an hour later, he immediately sent for an ambulance and a doctor. The officer then went into the woods and located Hasson's camp. This consisted of a small place built between two trees and sheltered by heavy tarpaulins and leaves. Heavy branches were fastened around the trees.

On the inside of the rude tent were found several stones covered with hair and blood and several large pools of blood were near one end. Two cards, one from a liquor store and the other from Bedford's express, 22 Brookfield avenue, were found.

Altho County Constable Simpson and River Constable R. D. Skidmore tried to get the man to give his name all he could mumble was: "They beat me with clubs at midnight; they beat me with a club over a tub at midnight." He could not utter any other words or explain about the tub. Once he said: "It was a stout man that clubbed me." A short time after he said that his horse kicked him.

As to how the man met with the injuries which will likely cause his death the police cannot discover, but there is no doubt but that there was foul play. But the reference the man made to a horse kicking him has led to a theory given by those connected with the case which is thought to be pretty near the truth.

Many people have seen the man in the Humber district before, but none knew his name. As far as could be learned he was a roamer and spent his life camping.

On Monday afternoon he came along Bloor street with his horse and wagon and went immediately into the woods. At 8 o'clock Monday night he was seen fishing on the bank of the river near the Old Mill by Constable Skidmore.

It is supposed that the man returned to his camp, and shortly before midnight came back to the river. This is a favorite spot for canoeists to land and the man may have been fishing quietly while one or two canoeists suspected that he was there to spy upon them.

In case the man had encountered trouble at the river bank it is possible that he was followed by one or more men, a fight ensuing, in which he was struck down with a beer bottle, kicked and then struck with stones, the thug or thugs then leaving him for dead.

Another theory is that the stranger had considerable money on his person. It is known that he worked for gardeners occasionally while passing thru the country, and he may have been held up in his tent and beaten with the butt of a revolver when he refused to turn over his property. No valuables were found on his person when searched.

Should the man die, the aid of the provincial detectives will be invoked. The police hope that he will regain consciousness long enough to describe those who set upon him, and to tell of the affair.

SENTENCES LIGHT

Corrupt German Officers Let Off Very Easily.

BERLIN, Aug. 5.—Light sentences were imposed on the officers and men of the German Ordnance Corps who have been under trial by court-martial here for several days on charges of betraying military secrets, the acceptance of bribes and insubordination.

All were found guilty. Lieut. Tilian was sentenced to two months in prison, Lieut. Schleuder and Lieut. Hinst to four months each and Lieut. Hoge to 48 days. The first three lose their commissions, but Hoge remains in the army.

Chief Clerk Pfeiffer of the ordnance department was sentenced to six months in prison, Non-Commissioned Officer Schmidt to 2 1-2 months in prison and Non-Commissioned Officer Droese to three weeks' confinement in the barracks.

The evidence showed the prisoners had disclosed to Krupp's representative information in reference to government contracts.

PONTYPOOL MAN KILLED

J. Mitchell Met Death in Railway Accident

Kingston, Aug. 6.—J. Mitchell of Pontypool was killed in a bad wreck which occurred about two miles west of Parham on the construction of the new C.P.R. line at ten o'clock yesterday morning. A ballast train going west, with engine behind, was crossing a small trestle when the front car jumped the track.

On this car there were about ten men riding. Two of these men jumped and apparently went right under the cars. The rest of the men stayed with the car which turned completely around and rolled down the embankment of twenty-five feet throwing the men clear. Four more cars followed this car and buried the two men who had jumped. Their bodies have been recovered and are fearfully mangled.

MAY BE THE WRECKAGE OF THE TITANIC

Philadelphia, Pa., August 6.—Much of the mystery that surrounded the sinking of the White Star liner, Titanic, on April 14, 1912, may be dispelled by the discovery of the wreckage believed to be part of the hulk of the ill-starred vessel, standing on end in the Atlantic Ocean, off the Grand Banks of Newfoundland practically in the spot where the disaster occurred.

Captain Remnant, of the British steamship Luciline, which arrived at Philadelphia from Bordeaux, reported sighting the derelict, and the United States Hydrographic Office has begun an investigation to learn more about the wreck.

Should the wreckage sighted by the Luciline prove to be part of the remains of the Titanic, the story of the memorable wreck would have to be rewritten. The fact that after more than a year the hulk stands vertically in the waves, protruding eight feet or more above the surface would indicate that a submerged ledge of rock has prevented the wreck from going to the actual bottom of the sea. If such a ledge exists—and evidences of one were reported as long ago as 1723—then it is regarded as possible that the foundering of the Titanic was caused by a hidden obstruction ripping open her hull, as much as by her collision with an iceberg.

Captain Remnant says the wreck was covered with marine growth of comparatively recent formation tending to show that it had been in the water a little more than a year. It had the appearance of being held down by anchors in shallow water and of being buoyed up by a water-tight compartment. He is of the opinion that it was the forward part of the Titanic which, it was said, split in two just before it sank.

SAMPLE OF NEW ALARM BOX

Provides for Sending Fire Alarms and Police Calls.

At the police station is an alarm box by which fire alarms and police calls may be sent.

Some of the present boxes have about completed their usefulness and new boxes are necessary.

The sample of the combination box was forwarded for the inspection of the Police Chief and Fire Chief.

The price is $120, while the cost of the one now in use is $90.

For police calls, a key would be left with a responsible person, residing near the box and this could be obtained by persons wishing to call the police. The key opens the door, permitting the use of the enclosed telephone and this key cannot be released till the policeman arrives. Thus false alarms could not be sent.

The box also provides for an alarm being rung in for a patrol wagon.

HIS BRAVE ACT IS RECOGNIZED

Mr. McFadden appreciates Mr. Carew's kindness but considers that in rescuing Miss Carew from peril he only did what he considered was his duty.

POLICEWOMEN IN UNIFORM

Will Look After Women and Children.

CHICAGO, Aug. 5.—(Can. Press.)—Chicago's ten policewomen, clad in modest blue tailor-made suits and wearing silver stars and hats with blue bands, went on duty to-day. Their work will be mainly to look out for women and children. The details of their duties, apparel and powers have been worked out by a committee of women social workers and the chief of police. The chief had considered assigning the policewomen to stations in the red light districts, but it was decided they would be of greater service in the public parks and other places of recreation.

The policewomen will visit the public dance halls, excursion boats, beaches and railroad stations and will try to keep young folks off the streets late at night. They will obtain information rather than make arrests, altho on occasion they may be called upon to arrest some one.

Whether the policewomen shall wear brass buttons and carry revolvers and clubs will be decided after the civil service examinations for the positions.

LIGHTNING COOKS BEANS

Limas Are Done to a Turn Right on the Vine.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 5.—Beans, large and juicy, of the lima variety, cooked with a delicacy that would suit the palate of an epicure, are being gathered straight from the vine at a truck garden near Washington.

William Williams possesses at Lanham, Maryland, a garden containing this "Cooked bean vine." How the growing beans came to be cooked is thus related by Williams, so help him:

He was afraid that the vines might be destroyed by storms if he allowed them to climb on ordinary poles. He had planted several rows, each about a city square in length, and to guard against the blowing down of the poles he stretched wire between them. Lightning struck the wires and cooked the beans. Williams and his family do the rest.

Favors Home Rule.

LONDON, Aug. 5.—(Can. Press.)—Charles Armstrong, the Montreal railway contractor, who is Conservative candidate for Colne Valley, declares he would not object to Ireland having the same kind of home rule as Canada. He would have such a system applicable to Scotland and Wales as the house of commons had too much in hand already to attend to trifling local matters, and Armstrong says there is too much blind party following at Westminster, and he wants to represent those who are opposed as well as those voting for him.

Galt Was Threatened.

GALT, Aug. 5.—(Special.)—It took 250 men, mostly farmers directed by the Galt fire chief, to get under control a fire in underbrush which started in the Mill Creek suburbs. The fire fighters worked strenuously for four hours and finally, by plowing furrows around the burning area, stopped the spread of the fire and averted a calamity that would have marked the seizure of a large adjacent hardwood bush, dry as tinder, together with house and buildings.

THE MAKING OF A REPUBLIC

Rome was not built in a day and a Chinese Dynasty is not transformed into a United States at the stroke of a pen, or with one stroke of the sword.

All is not well with the new Chinese Republic; no one with any deep knowledge of human nature or history will be very much surprised at the present dissensions among the different factions.

Dr. Sun Yat Sen, who stepped aside to let Yuan Shi Kai take hold of the reins of government, is now condemning the President as a murderer and is calling for his resignation.

Missionaries who had gone back to their fields of labor believing the worst was over and that China was about to settle down to a life of quiet progress and prosperity, are becoming alarmed at the new uprising and are leaving their stations for safer quarters.

Every one will hope and pray that that another revolutionary outbreak will be averted, and that the present unrest is only the sign of an awakened conscience among the people to the cruelties which have been prevalent in China for so many centuries, and which it is difficult to obliterate in so short a space of time.

WHERE ARE THE ORATORS?

Sir W. Robertson Nicol deals with the subject of oratory in the British Weekly. He gives quotations from the speeches of O'Connell, Lord Brougham and Burke. Daniel O'Connell was one of the greatest if not the greatest orator Ireland has produced. Irishmen and women worshipped him. The old song will be remembered by many:

'He's an idicated man,
A roo! a rool
We'll give three cheers for Dan."

In the hey day of his fame O'Connell swept like a firebrand through Ireland and Scotland, advocating Catholic emancipation.

It seems he spoke, not only with his voice, but with his arms as well; and when he was addressing large crowds in the open air, those who could not hear could see him speak and the effect was just the same.

"His arms as he kindled seemed to be inspired. Now he waved them aloft, now he shook one of them in the air, now he folded them as if they had been eagle's wings, over his breast, now he stretched them out imploringly to his audience, and it was all so thoroughly natural."

As a sample of his invective he described Peel as "the greatest humbugger of the age, and as tall of cant as any canter ever canted in this canting world." He closed one speech by depicting the coming day when Ireland and Scotland would be reconciled, and when the Irish mother would soothe her baby to rest with "Scots wha ha'e wi Wallace bled."

This latter was uttered by way of peroration and was met with a torrent of applause. In these days it would sound like a joke.

It is to be feared that real oratory is a thing of the past, in England at least; excepting Lord Rosbery and one or two lesser lights, there are none of the old order left.

The United States still produces orators, but they are found in the pulpit rather than the platform. We have become extremely practical and are a little too ashamed of our emotions in these days.

EDITORIAL NOTES

"Flag incidents" are still the order of the day in certain parts of Canada.

Hamilton reports that there are no tramps this year in that city, while Belleville has a few up before the Magistrate every day. The only cure for the tramp pest is to sentence them to one day's labor at cutting good maple with a buck-saw. One day is enough, the tramp will not be seen within fifty miles of that buck-saw for the remainder of his weary pilgrimage.

The Hamilton Times records the case of a young lady who paid the conductor of a street car for a ride she had had two months previous. She had offered the conductor a ten dollar bill and he trusted her. The Times says that the young lady was very pretty. It says nothing about the conductor's personal appearance.

They must have a good contingent of colored people in Brantford for we are told that fifty of them from hat city celebrated Emancipation Day at Grimsby Beach. Peterborough cannot boast of many, if any of the darker brethren, although among the children of the south end of the city a report is going round that there are "two niggers in the park." But this may be an invention of parents, something like the Bogy man, to keep the youngsters in after dark.

EXCERPTS

Lord Hardinge Recovered.

Everybody was glad to hear from Lord Hardinge's own lips that he has now completely got over the effects of the dastardly attempt on his life and feels better than ever. The Hardinge family presents one of the puzzles of the peerage to the uninitiated, as Viscount and Baron Hardinge are brothers, and are often confused with each other. As for Ladies Hardinge, their name is legion as besides the wives of the two peers, there are Lady Hardinge, whose husband, Sir Arthur, is Minister at Brussels, another Lady Hardinge wife of a baronet, and a widowed Lady Hardinge.

A Cheap Election.

The holder of the record for the most economically-fought municipal election is probably Mr. Septimus Smith, of Blackpool, England. He contested Foxhall Ward as an independent candidate, and his total expenses did not reach two shillings.

Sure.

"I wonder why I am getting so bald," said the man who wanted a little free advice.

"Take off your hat," said the doctor.

"Ah, it is very simple," replied the M. D. after a glance. "Your hair is falling out."—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Perfectly Candid.

"They've not the slightest bit of affection."

"That so?"

"No. They don't even say 'pass the cream' when they know there's nothing but milk in the pitcher."—Detroit Free Press.

Better Test.

Crawford—You can judge a man's character by the way he acts when he has a tooth pulled.

Crabshaw—I'd very much rather size him up by the way he goes on when he has had his leg pulled.—Puck.

Satisfying the Customer.

"I found a fly in the cake I bought here the other day."

"Bring it back, madam, and we will give you a raisin for it."—Journal Amusant.

A LAND OF SPLENDOR.

Maharajah of Mysore's Birthday Was a Gorgeous Festival.

The Maharajah of Mysore is a potentate who combines the magnificence of the east with the progress of the west. Saint Nihal Singh pictures the splendors of his rule in a contribution to a recent number of The London Magazine.

On the occasion of the maharajah's birthday, about a week following his marriage, in 1900, to the twelve-year-old daughter of the Rana Saheb of Vana, the city of Mysore, lavishly decorated with gay-hued flags and bunting, bathed under a soft flood of light, resembling a dream city, witnessed a wondrous triumphal procession. It was headed by two gaily-decorated camels and eight elephants with fantastically-painted faces and jingling ornaments, bearing superb howdahs on their backs.

In the middle of the procession walked an enormous elephant with gilded tusks, wearing a garland of flowers around his huge neck, a heavy gold flap falling over his forehead and trunk, gold anklets, gold ornaments on his tail, and a beautiful saddle-cloth of gold tissue; while jewelled gold chains hung down from his head to his feet. On his back he bore a howdah of solid gold, covered with a canopy of the same precious metal, in which sat the maharajah and the maharanee, both aflame with jewels, that scintillated all the more radiantly in the flare of the red, green, and blue lights, whose rays were thrown in a never-ending stream upon their persons as the procession wended its way through the streets of the city. Behind their highnesses, on another elephant, in a gold howdah only slightly inferior to that of the ruler, rode his younger sister and her bridegroom. Four more sets of nautch girls followed, each with its own band, and singing its own songs, irrespective of the others. The procession ended with two elephants, a body of foot soldiers, and a company of Lancers.

The Best Detective Story of the Last Ten Years

He tested his bonds—gently, then vigorously, then with all his strength. They held because they yielded. They followed every movement of his well-trained muscles elastically. At no time did they offer direct resistance in such manner as to give him opportunity to snap them. They did not clasp; they clung. Shrewdly had his captors planned the holding power of those soft bandages. The scarves were of silk from foreign looms, and their softness was equaled by their strength. They could have been split into half-inch strips without becoming breakable, save in the hands of a strong man pulling with excellent purchase. Circling the detective's wrists and ankles as they did, it was impossible, tug as he might, for him to apply his power to them effectively. The more furious his struggles, the closer their clinging.

Not without profit to his physical, as well as mental, well-being had Britz throughout his service in the Detective Bureau devoted half an hour daily to gymnasium work. He was not a Sandow, but he had abundance of pliant and serviceable strength. After many minutes passed in vain efforts to free himself, he relaxed his body and limbs for a short but complete rest, meanwhile bending his mind to the task of determining where he was. The result of his mental endeavor was as fruitless as the other. All he knew at the end of it was that he lay on a bare floor in a room which, from the sound of his heels on the boards, he judged was small. That thought suggested to him a means of summoning help other than vocal. He began drumming on the boards with his heels. It was tiring work, for his ankles were held so close that, with his feet beating in alternation, he could not make much noise. To make a sound likely to carry far, he had to raise and lower his heels together—an achievement that sounds easy until one has tried doing it many times. With all his endurance he could not keep it up for many times at a stretch. In the intervals he strained his hearing for a response. None came.

The hollow thud of his boot heels told him the room below was bare too. Evidently, he was in a building that was abandoned in whole or in part. The reflection made him just a little uncomfortable. If there was one thing that got on the cool detective's nerves it was the idea of being helpless in a fire. He would not mind fighting his way out of a burning house—he had done so more than once. But the thought of being hemmed in by four walls, unable to move hand or foot, with flames sweeping through the structure or crawling hungrily towards him had been the phantasy of his few nightmares. He dreaded it with all the dread of a strong man who lusts for action in danger. So long as Britz could battle for life or liberty, he was sure to be happy. He would have shone only in a literal sense as the hero of an auto-da-fé.

The Headquarters sleuth, however quickly dismissed from his mind the unpleasant possibility that suggested itself. It was true he would have preferred even the return of his abductors to the probability of being roasted like a trussed fowl, but it also was true that there was no special reason to fear the building would blaze. The important thing was to escape before he could be assailed by either kidnappers or flames. That he had been deserted by the three men who seized him in the park did not occur to him. He thought of them as coming back to carry out the purpose of their daring capture. It was far from desirable that he be there on their return. Yet how should he get away? Already he felt the futility of striving to snap his bonds by main strength. He must have recourse to another method. But what?

Britz rolled over on his face. As his hands were tied behind his back his chin rested on the floor, and he had little leverage by which to lift himself. Several times he tried to rise to his knees, only to slip and bruise his face on the hard floor. mishaps were painful, but not discouraging to a man of Britz's resoluteness. Again and again he made the attempt, again and again he failed, but at last, with a mighty heave that left him panting, he raised himself by a catapult movement and sat back on his heels, waiting to catch his breath.

It was a harder task to get on his feet. He could not do it in the middle of the floor. Slowly, carefully, he worked his way on his knees to the wall, against which he braced himself. Then, bit by bit, he bent his feet forward in a demilune until his weight was on knees and toes. His progress was as painful as it was slow, for the silk scarf compelled his ankles to bend in unison, if at all and even when he had bent his toes to the requisite point it was a great strain to keep them there.

A whim of fancy, in that moment when he knelt and balanced himself with such extreme difficulty, threw on his mental moving picture screen the memory of little Dorothy March as she looked that afternoon in the Forrest Theater when, unwilling as he was in one way to play upon her girlish ingenuousness, he had deemed it permissible to get from her the information he needed in regard to the drawings from which the fraudulent Missioner necklace was made. Of course, it was only natural that anyone in any way connected with the case should come into his mind, yet it undoubtedly was strange that the picture of the demure débutante should present itself to his inner vision so vividly and so persistently. Close behind it came recollection of another afternoon on which he had seen little Miss March cantering along the bridle path near the obelisk—an afternoon months before he ever heard of the Missioner mystery.

The detective, after a brief pause to gather his strength, set his shoulder against the wall and threw all his force into a single, vigorous push. The movement almost threw him to the floor again, but he recovered his poise quickly and stood erect. For a few moments he was content to revel in the relaxation that was so welcome after his long continuance in a cramped and prostrate position. Then a second's forgetfulness, natural enough to one accustomed to his freedom of movement, almost undid the work of the last half-hour. He tried to step away from the wall, oblivious to the scarf that bound his ankles, and pitched forward heavily. He did not fall to the floor, however, for something sharp and hard stopped him. He found himself wedged between a metallic framework and the wall. A venomous hiss and the contact of his bound hands with hot metal told him he had fallen on a steam radiator, and as the hissing sound increased he guessed the shock had broken the little safety valve close to the top of the curved pipes. If the detective's position had been perilous before it was extra hazardous now. He was gripped in the jaws formed by the radiator and the wall, and with neither hands nor feet at liberty, it seemed next to impossible for him to free himself. He kicked and struggled furiously, the hiss of the steam constantly growing louder, and in his endeavor to escape, he bent forward until his face was scalded by the rushing steam. The pain of that mishap aided him, however, for the involuntary recoil it caused culminated in a final effort that loosed the grip in which he was held and sent him staggering in a series of two-footed hops along the wall.

"Things are warming up a little too fast for comfort," thought Britz as he listened to the sibilant menace of the escaping steam. "Looks as if those fellows might be going to have a little steamed detective on the side." But whereas, as a merciless student of self, he was glad to note that even in such a predicament he had a saving sense of humor, Britz appreciated the added danger thoroughly. Once away from immediate contact with the radiator he knew there was a chance he would be scalded seriously, for the room, though small, was large enough to let the steam dissipate its heat. But with doors and windows tightly shut there was a very strong likelihood that if he remained in that room long enough with the steam escaping at its present rate, he would suffocate in the surcharged air—would, in fact, be drowned many stories above the street level. Britz could not repress an inward smile at the grim humor of the thought, but resolved he would not let circumstances carry the joke too far.

"I wouldn't look natural parboiled," he said to himself. The great detective was not without his percentage of vanity, and one of his few weaknesses was a lifelong determination to lie in such state as his Assembly District could afford in a casket of real rosewood that should cost at least four figures. A resolve to do full credit to that luxurious encasement when his time should come had helped, in its time, to pull Britz unscathed out of many a tight place in which otherwise the plan of his construction might have been altered violently.

Bracing his shoulders once more against the wall, Britz began another series of vigorous attempts to break the silken scarves, or to slip out of them. Exerting all his strength, he strained alternately at wrist and ankles, and ground between his teeth the little ball of silk that blocked his voice. But it was all to no purpose. His captors knew their trade, and the clinging bonds, while yielding, did not give at any point sufficiently to set the sleuth at liberty. Suddenly a thought, swift and keen as a saber flash, clove its way straight through his perplexity. That which imperiled his life should give him his liberty. He sidled along the wall away from the safety valve. Pressing against the edge of the metal the scarf that held his hands, he began swinging himself from side to side. The corrugated edge of the ornamental ironwork served as a saw, and although more than once the man gasped as clouds of steam whirled about his head, in fewer minutes than would seem probable, the metallic edge gnawed its way through the silk, and the kerchief parted with abruptness that sent Britz reeling back against the wall and crashing headlong to the floor.

His hands were free! And as that welcome realization followed the jarring impact of his head against an angle of the baseboard, Lieutenant Britz laughed softly as with busy fingers he loosed the scarf about his ankles, snatched the gag from his mouth, and, with a single shake of his shoulders that rippled the kinks out of his cramped muscles, strode to the window and flung up the sash. One deep intake of good cold air, then half a dozen more, and he felt as fit as if he had not been close to a distressing and altogether ignominious end. He gripped the sill and leaned far out, looking first downward, then all around in quest of a landmark. There were not many lights on that side of the building, but a faint gleam in the depths enabled him to judge that he was about at the tenth story, and that the building was in an unfrequented uptown street. Withdrawing his head he pressed the button of a pocket electric torch and explored the room. From the style of its finish it evidently was a section of an unoccupied apartment in a new and rather pretentious building, a room planned to be cut off from the rest of the suite, for it seemed to give directly on the hall, and was separated from its neighbor by a fireproof door of massive steel. He seized the handle. It turned readily, but the door did not open. The same was true of the door between the room and the hall. He shook both doors with all his strength, but they had been locked too stoutly to yield. It was apparent the kidnappers had made him a prisoner in full knowledge of the unlikelihood he would be released speedily. That they had plotted his death was not certain, but it was unmistakable they had given themselves little, if any, concern in that respect. Britz thought of the possibilities of fire as he had lain bound on the floor, and an unpleasant sensation passed over him; but he hastened back to the window and examined the outside of the building with a view to escape in that direction. He did not expect to overtake his abductors quickly, nor was he even of a mind to devote the bulk of his time to that purpose. But he regarded the capture of his recent captors as an important side enterprise to the solution of the great diamond mystery, and habit made him eager to begin working without delay.

There was a fire escape on the floor whence he looked out—a thoroughly modern contrivance with flat steps, and a really serviceable handrail—but it did not run to the window at which he stood. However, Britz had more than one attribute of the lynx, and it did not tax his agility greatly to reach the balcony while still gripping the window frame securely, and, with one quick movement, to swing himself over the ladder rail. It was the work of a minute or two to run down the easy steps to the first floor above the street and, from that point, he had only a short drop to the sidewalk. He strolled in a casual way to the front of the big apartment building, which looked toward the Hudson, and, noting its location, quickened his pace, walking south until he came to a cab-stand. He gave a chauffeur the number of the Swami's house, jumped into a taxicab and continued his course in a southerly direction, the driver in obedience to his instructions wheeling east at Seventy-second Street and turning into the Park.

CHAPTER XIII.
Interviewing the Swami

The more Britz thought about his kidnapping, the more convinced he became that he had been mistaken for another man. It was evident that his captors expected to find in his possession something of value, and from all the circumstances he was inclined to think the object of their daring search was the Maharanee diamond. By this time the detective had pretty well made up his mind that the men who surprised him so humiliatingly in Central Park were Orientals.

Britiz was a studious man. In connection with his calling he had gone fairly deeply into the criminal history of other lands. For one who had never been in India, he was thoroughly conversant with the strange crimes common to that country. He knew there were as many varieties of murder in Hindostan as there were tribes under the benevolent protection of His Majesty, King Edward. He was also aware that robbery in India had been reduced not only to an exact science, but refined to an art. Britz, in delving through the memoirs of many a gallant Anglo-Indian army officer and Civil Service chief, had read thrilling details of thuggee, that remarkable form of assassination which is at once a religion and a trade. In fancy, he had seen the sinuous glide of the Indian thug along the overhanging branches of an umbrageous tree; had watched the patient waiting of the human lynx for his quarry to come along the path; had seen the lightning flash of a silken scarf utilized as a slip-noose as it coiled about the victim's throat; and had beheld the death struggle that followed, with the murderer's knee in the small of the other's back, and two brown, cruel hands drawing tightly the soft but stout ends of the silken scarf.

The manner of his capture bore in upon him the conviction that it had been achieved by men who, if not actual thugs in the original sense of that word, were skilled in their methods. That clear to him, it was plausible to connect his abductors not only with the Hindoo servant in Mrs. Missioner's employ, but also with the mysterious Oriental of the Metropolitan Opera box. That he had decided only a few moments before the attack upon him to visit the Swami was, Britz felt, only a coincidence. It was impossible for the Oriental to have guessed that the detective meant to call upon him. Why, therefore, were his own movements watched so closely that the thugs were able to anticipate the exact moment of his arrival in that part of the park as soon as he was whisked away in the brougham?

Britz, as the taxicab bore him along that same drive he had traversed a few hours before under such unfavorable circumstances, pondered persistently upon the interest of the Hindoos in his doings. Days before he had made up his mind that there was more than a casual interest in the Missioner diamonds on the part of the Oriental who had exposed the falsity of the supposed Maharanee in the opera box. What that interest was might be the keynote of the entire mystery. Were the Easterners merely a well-organized band of jewel thieves? Was the attention they had bestowed and were undoubtedly bestowing on the widow's necklace the result merely of cupidity, or of a less sordid motive? Britz resolved he would settle that question at the earliest opportunity. He was not prepared to say, even to himself, that the Swami had anything directly to do with the disappearance of the gems; on the other hand, it would not astonish him to learn that the Oriental had some idea as to their whereabouts. The possibility that the Hindoo did not know where the diamonds were; that instead of playing at cross-purposes he and the Swami were unconsciously uniting in a common purpose came to Britz for a moment, only to be pigeon-holed in that wonderful mind of his as at present the least logical hypothesis on which he had to work. The one point that stood out most plainly was that his prospective visit to the Swami would be fraught with much interest, and might prove profitable in forwarding his hunt for the Maharanee diamond.

While Britz was speeding southward in the taxicab two men were in the midst of animated discussion in the Swami's rooms. They were the scholar himself and his up-to-date friend, Prince Kananda. The Prince had arrived in the gloom-enshrouded house only a few minutes before. He had uttered several short, sharp sentences big with interest that had stirred the Swami from the repose usual to the Oriental priest. It was evident that Kananda expected a responsive remark from his friend, and that the Swami, feeling the obligation, was weighing his words before utterance.

"Nothing of the slightest interest to us was found," said Kananda, evidently in repetition. He had seen a skeptical expression spread over the Swami's bronze face, and anticipated an inquiry.

"The search was thorough?" asked the scholar.

"My dear old chap," said the Prince "is it likely we would go to such extraordinary lengths without being most painstaking in that respect? A speck of diamond dust could not have escaped us."

A slow smile gleamed through the mask that comprised the scholar's features. Mock deference colored his manner, as, taking the mouthpiece of the Oriental pipe from between his lips and tossing the tube over to the divan, he arose and paced the length of the room.

Napoleon's Hat Sold.

A cosmopolitan crowd of buyers attended the sale of Napoleon relics at Sotheby's, in London the other day, yet while duly authenticated, they brought only $7,007.

Spink paid $1,750 for a portrait in oils of Napoleon by Rene-Theodore Berthon, a pupil of David; $950 for a colossal marble bust of Napoleon by Chaudet, sculptured by order of Napoleon, who presented it to his uncle, Cardinal Fesch; $420 for a marble bust of Napoleon as Emperor, and $425 for Napoleon's hat worn when he was First Consul, with an original document certifying its genuineness.

Permain paid $675 for Napoleon's gun, a flint-lock sporting rifle, which belonged for many years to Egg, the famous gunmaker, and $145 for an engraving, "Napoleon Premier, Empereur des Francais et Roi d'Italie," by Cazenove, after P. Vanderwal, in colors.

Some Nelson relics were offered, too. The christening shirt worn by Lord Nelson sold for $150. It was fully authenticated by Mrs. Garret, to whose husband it was given at the time of their marriage. He was nephew of Admiral Sir Robert Barlow, first cousin to Lady Nelson, the great admiral's sister-in-law.

A Bloodless Sensation.

In the matter of stage realism Mr. J. M. Barrie and Mr. Cyril Maude could a tale unfold. The occasion was a rehearsal of "The Little Minister," at the Haymarket, and both the author and Mr. Maude were seated on a little platform built on to the front of the stage. Now Mr. Barrie has a habit of lolling about on chairs in all manner of attitudes, and the railing that surrounded the little platform was somewhat frail. Mr. Barrie tilted up his seat and leant heavily against this railing, with the result that it gave way, and he fell with a crash into the orchestra.

When picked up Mr. Barrie appeared to be dead, but he soon revived after being carried to a sofa in Mr. Maude's office. The dismissal of the rehearsal caused the accident to be talked about, and a newspaper man appeared on the scene.

"I hear that Mr. Barrie has met with an accident," he said.

"Oh, it's nothing," replied Mr. Maude, cheerfully; "only a severe shock."

"What!" exclaimed the disappointed reporter, "no blood?"

ADVERTISING

A STORE'S importance is rightly judged by its advertising. Not altogether by the size of the advertisement, but by size and tone, and quality of announcement.

What the store has to say is one thing. Quite as important is how it says it.

Given that the clerical force is competent and up-to-date, it will say, over the counter, the very best to be said in reference to the goods enquired for. It may, and should, suggest other goods, not in the customers view.

This implies that the customer is in the store. But what brings him or her there? The wish to buy and the belief it is a good place to buy at.

How is this learned of?

By advertising. The advertisement is a message, an intelligent middleman, doing service between seller and buyer. The space talks to thousands, even while the store is closed for the night.

BEN HOBSON GETS FORTY DAYS

He Supplied Liquor to Lister and Was Drunk Himself

Jas. Tierney, a blacklister, appeared in police court this morning on the charge of being drunk while on the prohibited list. He pleaded guilty and was fined $10 to be paid in 14 days.

After the fine was assessed, the usual ceremony was gone through as to where the defendant got his liquor.

"Tell us who supplied you with the liquor," urged the Chief.

"Ben Hobson," answered the witness.

Tierney said he gave him a $2 bill to puchase the first supply, and and Hobson brought back three bottles of beer.

"I met Hobson yesterday and he got me more liquor," said the witness.

Chief Thompson—"Did you ask him to buy the liquor for you?"

Witness—"No, he asked me if I wanted something. Hobson knew I was on the blacklist. He drank with me and we were arrested last night."

Chief Thompson—"Do you want to ask any questions, Hobson?"

Hobson—"Oh, its no use."

"Ben Hobson," called the acting magistrate.

"Here," answered the prisoner.

To the charge of supplying, Ben pleaded guilty.

"You know there is a heavy penalty for the offence?" said Magistrate Rush.

"The fine is $25 to be paid forthwith."

No sooner was this case settled than a charge of drunk and disorderly was brought against Hobson. Ben pleaded guilty to the charge of being drunk, but denied being disorderly.

Constable Brown was called and as a result Ben had another fine of $2 and costs amounting in all to $5.75, to be paid forwith or 10 days. Ben couldn't pay so for the next 40 days he will drink pea soup and trim flower beds.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

To the Editor of the Review:

Dear Sir,—My attention has been called to a report of the proceedings in the police court re McIlmoyl in your issue of Saturday, Aug. 2nd. You say that no evidence was submitted. In justice to my client I must ask you to note that the facts are that evidence was submitted—documentary evidence — which satisfied the regular Magistrate, Mr. Dumble, that a wife cannot steal her own property or from her husband and he dismissed the case as the records of the Court will show. Will you therefore please give similar prominence to a corrected report in your regular issue.

Yours truly,
R. M. BUDDY.

LT. COL. ROGERS OF THIRD DRAGOONS IS CHOSEN

As One of Sixteen Officers to Go on Visit to England

Ottawa, Aug. 6.—As a result of the plan inaugurated last year by the Minister of Militia and Defence of giving to eligible militia officers who during the year brought their regiments to a marked state of efficiency the privilege of attending the divisional and army manoeuvres in England, a number of officers have been selected this year, and will leave towards the end of the present month for England with Col. the Hon Sam Hughes. The officers chosen this year number sixteen. They include:

Lieut.-Col Cruickshank, D. O. C., Calgary, formerly commanding officer of the 44th Regiment, Fort Erie. Col. Cruickshank is an authority on the history of the Niagara frontier.

Lieut.-Col A. C. Macdonnell, D.S. O. commanding officer of the Strathcona Horse.

Lieut.-Col M. S. Mercer, commanding officer of the Queen's Own, Toronto, and a noted expert on rifle shooting.

Lieut.-Col S. C. Mewburn, 13th Regiment, Hamilton.

Lieut.-Col J. A. Allan, 12th York Rangers.

Lieut.-Col C. H. Rogers, 3rd Dragoons, Peterborough.

Lieut.-Col R. G. E. Leckie, 72nd Highlanders, Vancouver.

Lieut.-Col Frank Meighen, 1st Regiment of Grenadier Guards, Montreal.

Major Davidson, 5th Royal Highlanders, Montreal.

Lieut.-Col Ostell, 65th Regiment, Montreal.

Major Louis Leduc, divisional staff, Montreal.

Hon. A. F. MacLeod, Lieut.-Col. of 71st York Regiment, New Brunswick, Provincial Secretary and Receiver General of that province.

Lieut.-Col David Watson, 8th Regiment Royal Rifles, Quebec City.

Lieut.-Col Macdonald, 59th Glengarry Highlanders, Alexandria.

Lieut.-Col W. S. Buell, Brockville, 41st Regiment. A remarkable feature about the selection of Col. Buell is the fact that he is the third in direct descent of the same family holding the colonelcy of the 41st Regiment, his father and grandfather having held that rank.

TEMPLE BAND FOR FENELON

Costers at Olympia.

There were some merry doings at the International Horse Show, at Olympia, London, when the costers' donkeys were judged. Pearly queens and pearly kings arrived in great force from the East End, and their good friend, the genial Lord Lonsdale, who acted as one of the judges, proved the "life and soul of the party." Society was too amused to be shocked when his lordship waltzed with a coster's "Old Dutch," and roared with laughter when one stout old lady, driving round the ring in her little donkey barrow, accepted a cigar offered to her jestingly by one of the judges and puffed away contentedly.

Grey Top Hats In London.

The grey top hat has come into fashion again his summer, after having suffered a long eclipse. More light grey top hats are now to be seen than for many years. They are now "the thing" in the House of Commons, and they are becoming quite de rigeur at all fashionable open air gatherings. Mr. Winston Churchill has led the fashion in grey top hats among politicians. His was the pioneer grey hat.

Milady's Mirror

New Wrinkles About Wrinkles.

It is a great mistake to suppose that all wrinkles indicate old age. Some wrinkles and lines are indications of temperament and character and result from a muscular contraction of the cheek or brow. These lines become permanently engraved in the face as the underlying tissue shrinks from the steady contraction and consequent lack of circulation.

Wrinkles are often caused by ill health, mental strain and nervousness, and generally these wrinkles can be induced to leave by careful treatment and by building up the health and nervous system.

Whatever tends to promote the general health, to increase the deposit of fat in the skin tissues of the face, will help to obliterate these telltale lines and restore firmness and smoothness.

Very often the skin of the face has become extremely dry, and lines form themselves very quickly and for no apparent reason.

While it is absolutely necessary to keep the face perfectly clean, some skins are so delicate and tender that the use of a bland soap is harmful, and such skins need an entirely different treatment from the stronger, courser skins. It is also necessary to give the skin a chance to recuperate from the drying and parching effect of the steam heated air of modern houses. Skin that is parched and inelastic will wrinkle much sooner than soft, pliable skin. Use plenty of good skin food; don't skimp it; it really does not pay; then wipe it off with a soft towel or piece of cheesecloth.

OMO does three things well.

OMO cleanses white clothes perfectly—
OMO bleaches white clothes without the aid of the sun and makes them spotlessly white—
OMO purifies white clothes and makes a wholly sanitary wash.

OMO does all this in one operation without rubbing or hard work. It will not harm the finest fabrics and will save much time and much labor. Doesn't hurt the hands either. OMO removes tea, coffee, cocoa, fruit stains, etc., like magic.

Simply add a tablespoonful of OMO to a gallon of water, thoroughly dissolve, cover articles completely with this water, boil for half-an-hour to an hour. Let the clothes soak for an hour longer and hang out to dry. Get OMO at your grocer's.

OMEMEE NEWS

Special Correspondence.

OMEMEE, Aug 5.—Omemee High School is credited with the following pupils as having passed the Middle Entrance to Normal School examinations:

Honors—Eva Bradley, Fred Corneil, Maud Laidley, Carrie Stinson.

Pass—Ernest Corneil, Mary Dewan, Irene Evans, Stanley Laidley, Blanch Stinson.

Of the 9 who tried the Lower School Examination 8 passed, and of the 11 who tried the Middle School 9 passed. The record speaks for itself. Congratulations to the successful candidates and the staff.

The Rifle Association held another prize shooting contest on Monday. The scores were lowered considerably owing to the heat, varying winds, mirages and heat waves which occurred frequently because of the rain the previous evening. The best shots made very low scores as a result. Mr. Bert Courtney, a coming marksman carried off the first prize. There were several rifle shots present whose scores do not appear, but they did splendidly, considering the unfavorable conditions. The scores were:

| | |
|---|---|
| M. Sherin | 41 |
| T. C. Stephenson | 37 |
| B. Courtney | 36 |
| I. Toole | 31 |

Prince Henry For Eton.

Referring to King George's intention to send his third son, Prince Henry, to Eton this year, it is an interesting fact that, although no less than sixteen dukes are Old Etonians it has never yet had the son of a King of England among its scholars. The example of sending scions of royalty to Eton was set by the Duke of Connaught, who sent Prince Arthur there. He was followed by the little Duke of Albany, now the Duke of Saxe-Coburg-Gotha. It is of him that the story is told that when it was known in the school that he was to be the reigning prince of that state he was covertly kicked by many boys who wished in after life to be able to boast that they had kicked a future sovereign.

Minutes of last meeting were read and adopted.

Mr. Alex. Small was present and discussed with the Board the work required to be done at the High School. Mr. Small was authorized to go ahead with the work.

A report of the inspection of the boiler in the Public school was read, showing the boiler to be in bad shape, and recommending the Board to have a new boiler put in without any delay.

Moved by Messrs Squire and Marks that the Board accept the Dominion Radiator Cos'. quotation on a No. 6 Kewanee fire box boiler, at $340.50, f.o.b., Norwood.

Moved by Messrs. Doherty and Webster that Messrs. Pakenham, Finlay, Marks and MacNaughton be a committee to arrange for and see after the installing of the new boiler and also the removal of the old one.—Carried.

A telegram from Miss May was read intimating that she was unable to accept her appointment on the High School staff.

The secretary was instructed to try to make arrangements with Miss Morton to take the position.

The following accouts were passed:

K. G. Thompson, supplies and ads................................ $ 6.82
E. S. Hopkins, for Agr. school. 5.79

Mr. J. Alf. Finlay has his new house on Queen street well under way. The frame is already up and the laters are busy on the interior.

Mr. R. W. Waters who has been confined to his house for several months through illness, is in a very critical state. The doctor and his (Mr. Waters) friends realize that the end is only a matter of a short time.

Mr. John Wildman of King street is also very low.

The John Finlay and Sons Company's factory re-opened after a two weeks shut-down on Monday morning of this week.

The need of rain is beginning to be badly felt in this locality. The grain which a couple of weeks ago, looked so promising, is simply drying up and turning yellow. Roots and vegetables are almost dying in the ground. Unless we get a good rain within a very few days the yield in the different varieties of farm produce will not be more than half an average crop.

One evening last week three cows that had strayed into the C. P. R. yards here were run over and killed by a passing train.

The staff of the Norwood Register are off on their annual two weeks holidays and as a consequence, the paper will be printed either this week or next.

The Upper Stoney Lake Regatta at Crow's Landing on Wednesday, Aug 13th, promises to be the best yet held. Good prizes are offered in the different events, and the cottagers are enthusiastic in booming it along.

It is expected that the Norwood Council will declare the day Civic Holiday for the Village, so that all who wish may attend.

Mr. Harland Keefer of the Register is spending his holidays in Western Ontario and Michigan.

Mr. Joseph Doherty of the Union Bank at Haliburton spent a few days last week at the home of his father, Mr. John Doherty.

Mr. Thos. A McMillan is at present visiting friends in the West.

HOW THIS WOMAN FOUND HEALTH

Would not give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for All Rest of Medicine in the World.

Utica, Ohio.—"I suffered everything from a female weakness after baby came. I had numb spells and was dizzy, had black spots before my eyes, my back ached and I was so weak I could hardly stand up. My face was yellow, even my fingernails were colorless and I had displacement. I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and now I am stout, well and healthy. I can do all my own work and can walk to town and back and not get tired. I would not give your Vegetable Compound for all the rest of the medicines in the world. I tried doctor's medicines and they did me no good."—Mrs. MARY EARLEWINE, R.F.D. No.3, Utica, Ohio.

Another Case.

Nebo, Ill.—"I was bothered for ten years with female troubles and the doctors did not help me. I was so weak and nervous that I could not do my work and every month I had to spend a few days in bed. I read so many letters about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound curing female troubles that I got a bottle of it. It did me more good than anything else I ever took and now it has cured me. I feel better than I have for years and tell everybody what the Compound has done for me. I believe I would not be living to-day but for that."—Mrs. HETTIE GREENSTREET, Nebo, Illinois.

CLUB CARS FOR CONNOISSEURS

The popularity of the Grand Trunk service between Montreal and Toronto caused principally by the splendid service of daily express trains over the heavy steel of the only double-track railway between these two points, has caused the management to bring the equipment up to the highest state of efficiency and includes parlor buffet cars, library cars, and dining cars on the day trains and electric lighted Pullman sleeping cars on the day trains and electric lighted Pullman sleeping cars with electric fans and all the latest improvements on their night trains.

Early this week the service is still to be augmented by two limited night trains, leaving Montreal 10.30 p.m., arriving Toronto 7.30 a.m. daily and leaving Toronto 10.15 p.m. arriving Montreal 7.40 daily wide vestibuled club compartment cars built for the comfort and convenience of patrons.

These club cars are DE LUXE in every respect, are named "The Royal City" and "The Queen City" and will be a boon to the travelling public, and appreciated by sleeping car patrons.

The interior of the cars are arranged with one drawing-room, five compartments, and a club or lounging room, the latter having nineteen chairs. The cars are lighted by electricity and each room is provided with an electric fan and separate toilet facilities. A patent ventilating device has been installed in the clubroom. The interior finish is strikingly beautiful, the color scheme having been worked out in a harmony of shades giving an effect both pleasant to the senses and restful to the eye. Simplicity and richness of design are everywhere apparent.

A buffet will be operated serving light summer beverages, cigars, etc. Illustrated current magazines found in handsome leather covers have also been placed in the cars for the free use of patrons.

Curious Old Custom.

The curious old custom of letting land by candle auction still survives in the Berkshire village of Aldermaston, the squire of which is Mr. C. E. Keyser, F.S.A. The custom was observed recently in the letting of some meadow land called "Church Acre," which was bequeathed several centuries ago to the vicar and churchwardens of the parish, the proceeds of the annual letting being devoted to defraying church expenses.

A wax candle was lighted and a pin inserted in it an inch below the flame. Bidding was then started, and ended the moment the inch of candle was burnt and the pin dropped out.

Real Gold for St. Paul's.

It has been decided to regild the cross, ball and trusses of St. Paul's Cathedral. The regilding is very expensive, as only the best English "double gold" leaf will be used. It is of pure gold, and is double the thickness of that ordinary employed for outdoor work.

HOME COURSE IN FRUITS AND BERRIES

RASPBERRIES, CURRANTS AND GOOSEBERRIES.

By LE ROY CADY and K. A. KIRKPATRICK of the Minnesota Agricultural College.

THE raspberry will succeed on any good corn soil. It likes a great deal of moisture. A north slope is accounted best. The presence of an abundance of humus in the ground chosen is desirable.

The best fertilizer to use is stable manure comparatively free from straw or foul weed seeds. Apply a fairly heavy dressing to clover or timothy stubble in the fall and plow under. If the ground is already quite rich in nitrogen it may be desirable to grow a crop of roots or potatoes previous to setting the plants or even to dispense with the manuring altogether.

It is desirable to plow in the fall and allow full weathering. If plowing must be done in the spring the top portion of the soil should first be thoroughly stirred with a disk or other harrow. In the spring, if the plowing has been done in the fall, as soon as the top of the soil dries sufficiently it should be dragged. Follow with a disk or spading harrow, working the surface up thoroughly. Some growers prefer to apply well rotted stable manure just previous to this treatment.

Time to Plant.

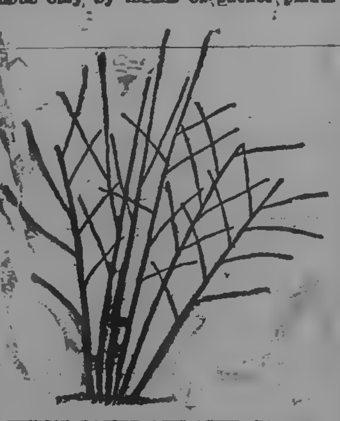
The upright or suckering varieties may be set with good results in the fall. The black caps, or the tip growing sorts, must be planted in the spring. Wait until good, large sprouts have started from the tip plant.

Practicable raspberry propagation is done only by means of sucker plants and tip plants. To obtain sucker plants the planter should dig up the little sucker sprouts which stand in the outer part of the hills or rows. Care should be taken to get a good portion of the running underground root. But the best possible results will usually be secured by digging up several large, thrifty plants in the fall. Cut the roots in three inch pieces and stratify them over winter. In the spring sow these in shallow drills in well prepared garden soil. This method requires a year.



TYPICAL RASPBERRIES AFTER PRUNING.

For the tip plants the tips of the growing canes may be allowed to droop and touch the soil in the latter part of July. If the soil is loose and extremely dry they should have earth placed over their tips with a spade or hoe. In late fall they will have rooted nicely. When laying down the canes for the winter a foot or more of the cane should be cut free and allowed to stick up, to mark their position.

Planting.

Two methods of planting are in vogue—the hill and the continuous row. We believe the check hill system is better.

Cultivation.

Cultivation should be begun as soon as the plants are set. It should be shallow, but kept up all summer long. The soil should never be allowed to bake or crust. The best tool is the horse five shovel or fourteen tooth cultivator.

The patch should never be seeded down, nor should grass be allowed to creep in. If one wishes to ripen the canes in late summer millet, oats or buckwheat may be sowed thickly to take up the moisture in the soil. If it is desired to enrich the ground for the coming year, soy beans or Canadian peas may be used.

Mulching is sometimes used as a substitute for cultivation, but its success is doubtful.

Pruning and Thinning.

Not more than two shoots should be allowed to grow from each plant the first year. The second and succeeding years each hill of the suckering kind will produce a great many shoots. Only four or five of the strongest should be allowed to develop.

The drooping sorts throw out their shoots from the root near the crown. The treatment for the first year is similar to that for the suckering kinds. The second and succeeding years five or six canes may be allowed to develop.

The canes which have borne fruit should always be removed soon after the crop is harvested.

If one wishes to grow the berries without laying them down in winter the young shoots should have the tops pinched out of them when they are about fifteen to twenty inches high. Laying them down in winter is always cheap insurance.

Varieties should be limited. Pests and diseases are usually not present or they are readily controlled.

Currants.

The currant must have a moist, cool soil. The best results are got on a strong clay loam or even on a stiff clay if it is in a good state of cultivation. A cool northern exposure is best, and comparatively low, moist ground, with some shade, will often be most desirable. Planting among orchard trees is practicable.

A dozen plants will furnish sufficient fruit for the ordinary family. They should not be set out along fence rows and allowed to grow up in weeds and grass. Large quantities of barnyard manure should be worked into the site before and after setting the plants.

Plants.

Currants can be grown from seed, but the method is not used except by the plant breeder. Plants are usually procured from nurserymen.

The plants used are grown from cuttings of the ripened wood or from layerings. The cuttings are made from the current season's wood in August or September after the leaves have fallen. These are made seven or eight inches long and are planted in well prepared garden soil, with only an inch above ground, four inches apart, in rows three feet apart. By winter root growth will have started, and in the spring they will start off and grow strongly. They should be kept well cultivated in the growing season to conserve the moisture. They are sometimes planted when one year old, but the best results will be obtained by allowing them to grow for two seasons before setting.

The branches may be rooted by bending them down and covering with soil, leaving the tips exposed. After one season they should be cut loose, lifted and grown in nursery rows for one season before being planted out. They are also layered successfully by cutting off the clump, encouraging as many young shoots as possible and then mounding soil in and about them to a height of eight or ten inches.

Planting.

In large plantations the best plan is the check system. Use a single plant to establish a hill and plant 6 by 6 feet for best results. Where continuous rows are used the plants should stand 3½ or 4 by 6 feet.

Cultivation and Mulching.

The currant must not be cultivated deeply, for it is a shallow rooted plant. The necessary moisture must be maintained by continual surface cultivation or by mulching.

Ashes, sawdust, straw and manure are used for mulching. Hardwood sawdust, if not worked into the soil, is probably the best. Apply to a depth of several inches. Manure is good and tends to keep a supply of plant food always at hand. The best method of mulching is to confine the application to the hills and within the row, where the continuous row is used. The space between the rows is cultivated.

Pruning and Thinning.

The plants probably produce the best fruit and the larger portion of it on the two and three year old wood.

In practical field culture four to eight main stems are allowed to develop, and a system of renewing by cutting out the wood over three years old is followed. The greater part of the fruit is borne near the base of the shoots. For this reason it is advantageous to nip back the growing shoots in the summer season when they have reached about eighteen inches.

Harvesting and Marketing.

The currants, if to be sold, should never be stripped when one is picking. The stems of the bunches should be cleanly severed from the branches. The fruit is said to make better jelly when picked just as the currants are ripening and while the fruits on the tips of the bunches are green.

Winter Protection.

Currants will usually be sufficiently protected in the northwest if the branches are simply gathered up and tied in a bundle.

Pests and Diseases.

The greatest pests of the currant are the currant worm, currant borer, leaf spot and mildew. Directions for controlling them may be obtained from any agricultural experiment station.

Gooseberries.

The gooseberry is closely related to the currant. It is largely used green for sauce, for pies and for canning. For jam and preserves it is usually preferred ripe.

The cultivated sorts are derived from European sources, the native wild species and hybrids of these species. Those of European and hybrid species are larger and heavier bearers, but are more susceptible to mildew. However, this once insuperable foe is now readily controlled by proper methods of planting, cultivating and spraying.

The gooseberry is generally quite hardy in the northwest and will succeed alongside the currant. The propagation and planting are the same as for that fruit. In fact, identical treatment may be given it, with the following variations:

The production will be larger and the size and appearance of the fruits will be better if one-third to one-half of the new growth is cut off each year. The berries must be picked with gloved hands, a stick being used in the left hand by some pickers to spread or hold the bushes apart. They are marketed in the ordinary quart boxes, although in some localities the large English sorts are packed in ten pound trays. When so packed they are faced in the receptacle, just as are the large western sweet cherries when opened up on the city market.

FORTY THOUSAND MEN REQUIRED

Farm Laborers' Excursions—This Year's Wheat Crop Will Be the Largest in the History of Canada.

The wheat crop of 1913 will be the greatest ever harvested in Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta, thus requiring the farm laborers of the East to recruit and assist in harvesting the World's greatest bread basket.

The Governments of the respective Provinces state that forty thousand men will be required for this year's harvest. These will have to be principally recruited from Ontario, and the prosperity of Canada depends on securing labor promptly. The Canadian Pacific, on which Company will fall practically the entire task of transporting the men to the West, is already making special arrangements for this year. Excursions from points in Ontario to Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta will be run, and special trains operated, making the trip in about thirty-six hours and avoiding any change of cars or transfers. This will be a day shorter than any other route.

"CONDOR CHARLIE."

He Got the Eagle, But He Nearly Got Dismissed, Too.

"The Navy is England's insurance money" was a phrase coined by Lord Charles Beresford, and no man has exhibited greater pertinacity in urging that the risk shall be well covered, and the premium kept at a satisfactory figure.

Lord Charles started his naval life as a "middy" on board the Marlborough, and a boyish freak nearly led to him being dismissed the service. One evening, after a joyous time ashore, "Charley" Beresford and his companions were returning to their ship when they espied the Golden Eagle and the Stars and Stripes as they were passing the American consulate. "Boys, we must have that old bird," cried "Charley," and heedless of consequences, he and several of his companions climbed up the building and deliberately tore the eagle from its perch. Then they carried it along the quay in triumph, and conveyed it on board, where it was placed in "Charley's cabin. The following day, when the outrage was discovered, the American consul was full of wrath, and a strict investigation followed. When the eagle was eventually traced to "Charley" Beresford's cabin, the daring "middy" had to face the music, and it was chiefly owing to his extreme youth that he was not dismissed the service.

Some thirty years ago, when Lord Charles Beresford's ship was off the Falkland Islands, a man fell overboard. Immediately Lord Charles seized a coil of rope and jumped into the icy sea, saving his man with great difficulty. There was an interesting sequel fifteen years later, when Lord Charles was addressing a political meeting in the north. From the back of the crowded hall came sounds of a scuffle, and a voice cried, "Throw him out!" Lord Charles, however, ordered that the man should be allowed on the platform and permitted to have his say.

A passage was made for the interrupter, who, mounting the platform and stretching out his hand, said: "I only want to shake hands with you, my lord. You don't call me to mind, mayhap, but I'm the man wot you saved off them Falkland Islands, come fifteen years this Christmas."

PETES GRABBED THIRD GAME FROM DUTCHMEN

Two Hits Off Sterling—Hilliard and Trout Had 22 of the Putouts.

BERLIN, Aug. 6.—Davey Rowan's hustling Petes took the third game yesterday by a 5—1 score. Bob Sterling had the locals tied up in knots and two hits for one run was all Jack White's Hopes could gather.

On the other hand, Auld was hit for runs in the sixth and eighth. Prominent in the day's performance was the clever work of Hilliard in middle field, who accepted no less than eight chances. The big fellow failed to get a hit but he more than made up for his shortcomings in this respect by his fielding. Brant also had a busy time.

Swartz had another three base hit and one double. Rowan was sick and Trout played at first base, he accepted fourteen chances and also had two hits and two runs.

Latest In Holidays.

Many people, anxious to find unconventional ways of spending holidays, are trying their luck with bold schemes this year. Two clerks in a City (London) warehouse have arranged to spend a fortnight in a lighthouse, where, they rightly claim, they will have the freshest of sea breezes all the time. Another party are to encamp on an uninhabited island off the Scottish coast, while three youths, with enterprise and courage worthy of our earliest pioneers, intend to tramp as far as they are able in the desert of the Sahara. Tramping has become a favorite holiday pastime, but few who seek pleasure and recreation are likely to emulate the young barrister who has set out on foot with neither scrip nor purse, and intends to sing and recite his way from London to the Cheviots. A Streatham man, with his family and servants, have set out for a week's holiday in a hired omnibus. He was his own chauffeur, and had spent a couple of days mastering the intricacies of the 'bus.

AFRICA A CLOSED BOOK.

All of Its Territory Now Parcelled Out Among the Powers.

The statement made recently in the House of Commons by Sir Edward Grey, that the British Government proposed to recognize the Belgian annexation of the Congo, brings to a close one chapter in the history of that vast territory which, ever since its exploration some 35 years ago by Stanley, has occupied such a unique position as far as political status is concerned. Thirty-five years ago, when the international scramble for territorial possessions in Africa was just beginning, no one seemed to be specially interested in the Congo. It was due to Stanley that Leopold, King of the Belgians, was induced to found the International Association of the Congo, with the object of exploring it and developing its commercial possibilities. The Belgian people, however, as a whole, would have none of it, and after the conference of Berlin in 1884, when the independence of the new territories was guaranteed, the Belgian Parliament, while recognizing King Leopold as the head of the new state, definitely placed it on record that the union with Belgian was only a personal one. For the next fifteen years little was heard of the happenings in this vast tract of the earth's surface, and it was not until 1901 that there began to filter through into the European press accounts of those outrages on the vast native population, which for several years thereafter associated the name of the Congo, in the same way as Armenia, with the word atrocity. The adverse report of the Congo commission in 1905 brought matters to a head, and vigorous remonstrances of Great Britain and the United States in 1909 resulted in a scheme of reform which passed into law in the following year.

Since then Belgium with a laudable thoroughness, has undertaken the reorganization of the country. A short time ago the Congo Reform Association declared in effect that their work was finished, and the generous recognition by Sir Edward Grey of the efforts of the Belgian Government to bring about a better state of things in their vast possession, will be approved by all those who recognize the difficulties with which the authorities in Brussels had to contend.

The book of the great African continent is fast being closed. With the Italians in possession of Tripoli, France and Spain in possession of Morocco, and now Belgium formally secure in her possession of the Congo, there remains little territory to be allocated. Attention every now and again, it is true, is called to the question of Portugal and her intentions of disposing of her colonies, but whatever may happen in the future in this regard, it cannot alter the fact that practically the whole of Africa has been definitely portion out among the powers of Europe.

The wages of sin don't bother some fellows. They do it for fun.

GENERAL PICKETT.

The Friendship Between Him and Lincoln and Grant.

A NOVEL BATTLEFIELD SCENE

When the Blue and the Gray Joined In a Birthday Celebration—A Meeting With Grant In Washington—Lincoln's Visit to Mrs. Pickett.

In Mrs. Pickett's introductory chapter to "The Heart of a Soldier. As Revealed In the Intimate Letters of General George E. Pickett, C. S. A," there is an extremely interesting story. It appears that while at Richmond, just after the surrender, she was summoned to the door by a sharp rap. She gives a charming account of what followed:

With my baby on my arm I answered the knock, opened the door and looked up at a tall, gaunt, sad faced man in ill fitting clothes, who, with the accent of the north, asked:

"Is this George Pickett's place?"

"Yes, sir," I answered, "but he is not here."

"I know that, ma'am," he replied, "but I just wanted to see the place. I am Abraham Lincoln."

"The president!" I gasped.

The stranger shook his head and said: "No, ma'am; no, ma'am. Just Abraham Lincoln; George's old friend."

"I am George Pickett's wife, and this is his baby," was all I could say.

My baby pushed away from me and reached his hands to Mr. Lincoln, who took him in his arms. As he did so an expression of rapt, almost divine tenderness and love lighted up the sad face. It was a look that I have never seen on any other face. My baby opened his mouth wide and insisted upon giving his father's friend a dewy, infantile kiss. As Mr. Lincoln gave the little one back to me, shaking his finger at him playfully, he said:

"Tell your father, the rascal, that I forgive him for the sake of that kiss and those bright eyes."

Mrs. Pickett explains the interest Lincoln showed in her husband by stating that it was through Mr. Lincoln's influence that her husband received his appointment to West Point.

One impression the book conveys is that of the kindly and generous feeling that existed between Confederates and Unionists graduated from West Point who had been friends before the war. An exhibition of this feeling was made at the time of the birth of General Pickett's first baby. Mrs. Pickett, telling the story, says:

On the occasion of my son's birth bonfires were lighted in celebration all along Pickett's line. Grant saw them and sent scouts to learn the cause. When they reported he said to General Ingalls: "Haven't we some kindling on this side of the line? Why don't we strike a light for the young Pickett?"

In a little while bonfires were flaming from the Federal line. A few days later there was taken through the lines a baby's silver service engraved, "To George E. Pickett, Jr., from his father's friends, U. S. Grant, Rufus Ingalls, George Suckley."

General Pickett, in a letter from Washington, relates another incident in which this same kindly feeling was manifested:

After breakfast we went, as arranged, to see Grant. I can't just tell you, my darling, about that visit. You'll have to wait till I see you to tell you how the warm hearted, modest old warrior and loyal friend met me; how he took in his the hand of your heartsore soldier—poor, broken, defeated, profession gone—and, looking at him for a moment without speaking, said slowly, "Pickett, if there is anything on the top of God's green earth I can do for you, say so." * * *

When I started to go Grant pulled down a checkbook and said, "Pickett, it seems funny, doesn't it, that I should have any money to offer, but how much do you need?"

"Not any, old fellow; not a cent, thank you," I said. "I have plenty."

"But Rufus tells me that you have begun to build a house to take the place of the one old Butler burned, and how can you build it without money? You do need some."

"I have sold some timber to pay for it," I told him, and to show my appreciation and gratitude, unobserved, I affectionately squeezed his leg, when he called out: "Rufus, it's the same old George Pickett. Instead of pulling my leg, he's squeezing it."

If every man was as fierce in action as he is in thought all the jails would be full.

HORTICULTURAL CONVENTION MEET NEXT YEAR IN TORONTO

Delegates Are on Trip to the Kawartha Lakes This Afternoon.

The Sixteenth Annual Convention of Canadian Horticultural Association was formally opened at the armories yesterday afternoon with an address of welcome from Mayor Bradburn. In his address to the delegates present he congratulated the members on their success." The city is yours and we want you to feel at home," said the Mayor in the course of his welcome. During his address His Worship was presented with a beautiful bouquet of flowers by the Association.

Mayor Bradburn's address of welcome was replied to by Mr. E. T. Mepsted, of Ottawa, who thanked the Mayor and the city officials, on behalf of the Association for their hospitality. The speaker also addressed the delegates for a few minutes on the great work the Association was carrying on.

The Secretary-Treasurer's report was read by Mr. Julius Luck, of Montreal, and proved most satisfactory. The appointment of judges for the trade exhibit was then held.

A very interesting discussion arose over the Tariff question. The matter will be brought up for a later discussion.

The entertainment billed for the delegates include a trip to Kawartha Lakes. A banquet will be held at South Beach for the visitors. A demonstration by the fire department will be given Thursday morning and the afternoon will be spent in an automobile trip of inspection around the city and the visiting of the principal factories. Water sports will be held at Nicholls Oval at the conclusion of the afternoon.

Probably one of the most enjoyable features will be the moonlight excursion over the Lift Lock and down the river.

The 2nd session of the convention opened last night at 8 p.m. A paper on "Retail Store Management," by Cecil Hopton, of Montreal afforded much interest for the delegates. Mr. R. W. King, of the King Construction Co., Toronto, delighted the audience with a well read paper on "Greenhouse Construction."

Probably one of the most interesting features in connection with the work was the stereopticon views of Greenhouse construction by Mr. Cobb of the Lord and Burnham Co., of York.

After a short discussion on Greenhouse work, the session adjourned until 9.30 this morning.

THIS MORNING'S SESSION.

It was decided to hold the next convention in Toronto. The report of judges on trade exhibit was presented and proved most satisfactory.

A paper on Christmas plants, by Mr. Chas. Craig of Hamilton, was followed with much interest.

After the adjourning of the session, the members indulged in short trips of inspection to the different parts of the city.

The visitors are being entertained this afternoon and evening to a trip to the Kawartha Lakes, and a banquet at South Beach.

are not matters of every-day purchase, and therefore even the independently wealthy like to take the greatest care of them. Yet sometimes the functions of a single evening will ruin their appearance temporarily. We can remedy this, however, by our system of careful cleaning, and in any case we can dye the garment and make it like a new one.

Mr. and Mrs. Connolly will reside in Peterborough.

$10 ADDED TO HIS ACCOUNT

This Blacklister Has Heavy Bill to Meet

Michael Fallon, appeared in Police Court this morning, charged with being drunk while on the blacklist. He was fined $10.

A few weeks ago Fallon was fined $52.50 fro supplying liquor to a blacklister. He was given 20 days to pay up, but as yet he has only contributed some.

Fallon promised to pay up as soon as possible and judgment was reserved for two weeks.

SUFFERED FRACTURE OF RIGHT ARM

J. W. Fry of Peterboro' Music Co. Injured This Morning.

A very painful accident befell Mr. J. W. Fry, of the Peterborough Music Store, this morning about half past ten. Mr. Fry was on the elevator and when he went to get off at the second floor his foot caught and he fell very heavily, injuring his foot and he also fractured his right arm.

The Dan Spence ambulance was called and the unfortunate gentleman was conveyed to his home at 337 St. Joseph street. Drs. Halliday and McPherson were summoned, but he was suffering intense pain which necessitated his removal to Nicholls Hospital.

On examination it was found that his arm was broken just below the elbow. It will be some time before Mr. Fry will be able to resume work.

FULLER FAMILY LEAVE THE CITY

Arrangements were made this morning to have the Fuller family return to Kingston. Fuller's father arrived last night from Kingston and will take the family back. They have been camping outside the city limits for the past few days, but owing to the unhealthy condition of their surroundings, the husband was placed in jail and the wife and four children in the Shelter. The case came up before Magistrate Edmison this morning, and they were allowed to return home.

Stores Inspected

Col. Bennett, of Kingston, inspected the stores of the Third Dragoons, 24th Field Battery and the 57th Regiment last night.

Darkening Eyebrows.

When touching up light eyebrows if glycerin is applied lightly before the color is added, the effect will be better and not so injurious. Just burnt cork or an eyebrow pencil such as can be had at any drug store is the least harmful of the darkening agents, but if one is attempting to improve the texture or shape of the brows it is far better to leave off dyes or markings of all kinds, as almost all of these dyes have chemicals in them which injure the roots of the hair. There is slight chance of one's brows showing any improvement as long as the roots are not in a healthy condition. It requires weeks to show improvement under any condition. Therefore the applications must be kept up with regularity to be beneficial.

Soap Paste Instead of Soap.

A recipe for a soap paste that is both whitening, softening and healing follows:

Strained honey, fifty grams; white soap shaved into small bits, forty grams; tincture of benzoin, ten grams; white wax, thirty grams. Melt the soap, honey and white wax in a double boiler. Add the benzoin when the mixture is removed from the fire.

MUSICAL RIDE OF ROYAL CANADIAN DRAGOONS

It wouldn't look like the Cobourg Horse Show without the Musical Ride. Those wonderful Dragoons on their spirited horses whirling through many figures to the music of the band are a great feature of the show, and proofs of their never dying popularity are the roars of applause they always bring from the audience.

They're coming again this year and bringing new uniforms and new drills. Something entirely new and better than ever.

Come along and spend an enjoyable time in Horse Show Park. Lots of room lots of shade. The prettiest and coolest spot in Ontario.

August 12th, 13th., 14th, 15th, 16th.

NAPOLEON'S ARMY EAGLES.

They Were Patterned After the Ancient Symbol of the Caesars.

Eagles lasted only from 1805 to Waterloo. Before then it had been the custom in armies to carry huge unwieldy flags mounted on poles which, while they afforded a rallying point for their corps, also drew the enemy's fire. It remained for Napoleon to revive the ancient symbol of the Caesars.

At first an eagle was presented to every battalion of infantry and every squadron of horse. But owing to the number of eagles captured this allowance was cut down. All battalion eagles were withdrawn and one eagle was carried by each regiment of foot and cavalry. In 1812 a still further reduction was made and in some cases line regiments were ordered to leave their eagles in their arsenal. These standards were also taken from all regiments of light cavalry and one eagle sufficed occasionally for an infantry brigade.

The eagle itself was eight inches in height and nine inches across the wings. It stood on a brass block three inches square and weighed three and a half pounds.

Modern colors, cumbrous as they are, are as nothing compared to the old ones, which were as difficult to hide as the big drum. Thus there existed a regular system for saving eagles. Sometimes, when the tide of war ran adversely, they were unscrewed and put into haversacks or great coat pockets. At other times they were buried, thrown into ponds or rivers, broken up, hidden in hollow trees, and, most humiliating of all, stuffed into some dead horse, to be hauled out subsequently.—Harper's Weekly.

Protection of Birds.

The Administrator of the Orange Free State has issued a proclamation protecting the Korhaan and pauw for a period of two years. These birds belong to the bustard species, and the former has been described as the national bird of South Africa. They live mainly on insects, and it has been calculated that a single korhaan will account for between 30 and 40 million ants and other insects most of them destructive to herbage each season. The wanton destruction of these valuable birds of late years has been a great loss to farmers, and the present prohibition, although somewhat tardy, has been warmly approved.

Undocked Army Horses.

Col. Seely stated in the British House recently that as few docked horses as possible were purchased for the army, and an order had been issued that from three years after this date no docked horses will be purchased by the military authorities. "When a horse's tail is docked," stated Mr. Winans in his campaign against the practice, "it is cauterized with a hot iron. Being a very timid animal a horse never forgets the operation, and that is why it is so dangerous to touch the tail or hind-quarters of a docked horse."

Hindu Girl Twice Wed.

The second wedding of the thirteen-year-old daughter of Haricharan Chakabarty — the first Hindu widow who has ever re-married—took place at Chittagong, India. Her first husband died when she was six years old.

SISTER OF LOCAL MAN IS DEAD

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Aug. 6.—Mrs. Ellen Beaty, aged 70, sister of Wm. Beaty, of Peterborough, died last midnight at the home of her niece, Mrs. James N. McCaugherty, 115 Campbell St. The burial will be on Thursday in Rochester.

SHEARERS TO APPEAR ON THURSDAY

The case of Joseph Shearer, charged with theft, will be heard before Judge Huycke to-morrow afternoon at 2.30.

Edward Shearer, a brother of Joseph pleaded guilty yesterday before Judge Huycke and will be sentenced to-morrow.

The prisoners are charged with stealing a quantity of goods and money from David Manley, a south end store-keeper. At the preliminary hearing they were committed for trial.

THE DAILY REVIEW

If there has to be an emergency to impel Canadians to do their duty, I would say "for shame."

SIX HUNDRED GEOLOGISTS AT CONVENTION IN TORONTO

Scientists of International Fame Who Have Been Making Investigations All Over Ontario For Some Days Get Down to Work — Important Monograph on Coal Supply.

TORONTO, Aug. 7.—With much shaking of hands the twelfth International Geographical Congress was informally opened last night in the University College building, Queen's Park. Over 600 members arrived in Toronto during the day and were directed to rooms where they may find lodging for the next week. The congress was opened officially today at noon, when Sir Charles Fitzpatrick, chief justice of Canada, welcomed the delegates and members at a reception in convocation hall.

"The earth's crust is continually changing shape," he continued. "It is only a shell and if you draw a cross-section of the earth on a sheet of paper it is as thin as the thinnest pencil line."

"What of the inside of the earth, then?" the professor was asked. "Is it molten or solid?"

"That is still a disputed point," averred the geologist. "But the evidence of earthquake shocks seems to indicate that there are at any rate no gases in the centre, and there can hardly be fire without gases. It has been shown that earthquake shocks are transmitted right thru the earth as well as around the crust. Some people are now coming to the conclusion that it is sold and cold all thru."

At this point J. W. Spencer of the United States delegation came up and joined in the conversation.

"The World wants to know whether or not the continent of Lamuria ever existed," said Prof. Cole. "You can tell him. You are an authority on those things."

"Why, yes, so far as we can tell," Mr. Spencer replied. "Lamuria was where the Indian Ocean is today. In comparatively recent times—that is within twenty-five thousand years or so—this continent was a great many hundred feet higher than it is today."

"And Atlantis, is there any proof of its former existence?"

"No absolute proof. But a ledge of rock is to be found in the centre of the Atlantic about three hundred and fifty miles wide and a thousand miles wide, which, in my opinion, must have been exposed at some past time."

"Do you attempt to fit into your investigations the universal flood story which runs thru all folk-lore and religion?"

Mr. Spencer declared that the flood was likely of only local significance, as if the Mississippi were to burst its banks and flood a great area. In the days before the myth became separate such an event would by constant retelling become magnified in importance until its local origin would be forgotten.

Interesting Fossils Found.

GALT, Aug. 6.—(Special.)—Twenty delegates of the International Geological Congress, to be held in Toronto, were in town today, investigating the rock formation of the river, and vicinity. They made several interesting fossil discoveries.

DOUBTFUL OF LIND

Mexico City Not Very Hopeful of Emissary's Success.

MEXICO CITY, Aug. 6.—Unfavorable comments appearing in Mexican papers today relative to the sending here of ex-Gov. John Lind as special representative of the United States are based more on the question of the personal fitness of Lind than the motive of the president in assigning him to come to Mexico. Doubt is expressed that any real good can be accomplished by his presence. It is also said that friends here of William Bayard Hale believe he should have been allowed to continue his mission under the same credentials that have been accorded Mr. Lind.

Washington despatches printed in Mexican papers today are held to manifestly do an injustice to ex-Gov. Lind's standing and attainments.

Thus Mr. Lind will begin his work in Mexico under a heavy handicap.

U.S. SHOULD REPLY

Ought to Build up Naval Base Near Bermuda City.

BERLIN, Aug. 6.—Ex-Secretary of the Navy Meyer arrived in Berlin last night from Kissingen, where he had been taking the cure, accompanied by his wife and daughter. He refused to talk about affairs in Mexico, Panama and Nicaragua, but gave a written statement:

"In regard to Bermuda, if England should decide to send a division of four cruisers it would not necessarily make Bermuda an important naval base, but it does demonstrate the possibilities. Irrespective of England's action our government should be alive to the importance of developing Guantanamo as a naval base instead of further developing unimportant bases on the Atlantic coast, which are of no strategic value and only serve to gratify the constituents of some congressman or senator."

Incendiary Sentenced.

WOODSTOCK, Aug. 6.—(Special.)—Flora Riley, who set fire to a barn belonging to James Bartley, was this morning sentenced to serve a term in the Alexandra Industrial Home for Girls, Toronto. The sentence was that she was to remain there until she was 21, but Magistrate Ball pointed out to the girl that if she behaved she would be let out in a short time.

Celebrated Golden Wedding.

GALT, Aug. 6.—(Special.)—William Williard and his wife, both born here and continuous residents for sixty-nine years, celebrated their golden wedding today. Guests to the number of fifty assembled to commemorate the unique event; every branch of the Williard and Hambly families being represented. The groomsman and bridesmaid of fifty years ago, Mr. Thos. Grills, Harriston, and Mrs. Walter Laidlaw of Galt gave interesting reminiscences of the wedding. The celebrants were presented with a purse of gold.

Long Deadlock Ends.

BRANTFORD, Aug. 6.—(Special.)—The Iron Molders' Union of Brantford and the Buck Stove Co. are no longer at odds. Four years ago the molders went on strike, the battle between union labor and the company proving a strenuous one. The shop has now been declared an open one by the union. Hartley's Foundry, at which a strike was recently declared owing to non-union work from Hamilton being accepted, has been placed in the same class.

FRUIT MEN AMALGAMATE

Important Step Taken by Brant County Growers.

BRANTFORD, Aug 6.—(Special.)—A movement of more than passing interest has lately been consummated within the County of Brant. For some time past the apple interests have been divided among three associations. These have now amalgamated under one name and charter, namely, "The Brant Fruit Growers' Association, with head office at Burford, Ont.

The directors for 1913 are as follows: Col. J. Z. Fraser, Messrs. W. M. Metcalf, F. M. Lewis and W. J. Dickie of Burford; C. W. Gurney and Horace Henderson of Paris; Delbert Wilson and Norman Edmonson, Brantford, and J. W. Clarke of Cainsville. From these the following officers were elected: President, Col. J. Z. Fraser; first vice-president, Delbert Wilson; second vice-president, F. M. Lewis; secretary-treasurer, W. J. Dickie.

The interests of the association will be taken care of by a managing committee of three. In uniting the various fruit growing interests of the county under one organization, it is the intention to bring Brant County to the front as a fruit growing section.

MYSTERY UNSOLVED

Police, However, Have Clues to Authors of Hasson Crime.

TORONTO, Aug. 7.—It is certain now that Hugh Hasson, the aged man who was found terribly injured in the Humber woods on Tuesday afternoon, came to his injuries as the result of foul play. Hassan lies in the Western Hospital in the same condition as when he entered it, and he cannot recover, it is stated. A new clue has been found by the county authorities, which it is hoped may prove of assistance in tracing the crime to the guilty parties.

Accompanied by the son of the unfortunate man, County Constable Geo. Simpson yesterday afternoon went to the lonely bush on the eastern side of the river, near Bloor street, and again examined the tent and the surrounding scrub. Hidden in a bush not far off the officer found a suit case with 12 empty beer bottles. These were all moist, showing that they had not been empty long.

County Constable Simpson firmly believes that Hassan was struck down with a beer bottle and then hit with the V-shaped stone found in the tent. The theory that the horse kicked Hassan and caused his injuries is absolutely scouted by the police and regarded as ridiculous.

Altho Hassan has been unable to give any particulars himself, the county police have a pretty shrewd guess as to the exact circumstances leading up to the brutal assault. Another man was at the tent on the Monday night and his connection with the deed will be ferreted out by the officers.

So many wild statements have been made by Hassan while in the hospital, that not much importance is attached to any of them. He seems inclined, however, in his conscious moments to keep the whole affair secret, and this lends substance to the police theory.

Hassan's son told the police that his father drank occasionally, but seldom to excess.

Known in Guelph.

GUELPH, Ont., Aug. 6.—(Special.)—The man Hassan, who was brutally assaulted in the Humber woods, is believed to be the Hugh Hassan who formerly lived at the corner of Thomas street and Edinburgh road, Guelph, and for many years carried on a successful teaming business here. About twelve years ago Mr. Hassan, with his family of one son and three daughters, removed to Toronto, where he has continued in the same line of business. He lived here for many years.

SIX HUNDREDTH TRIP HIS LAST

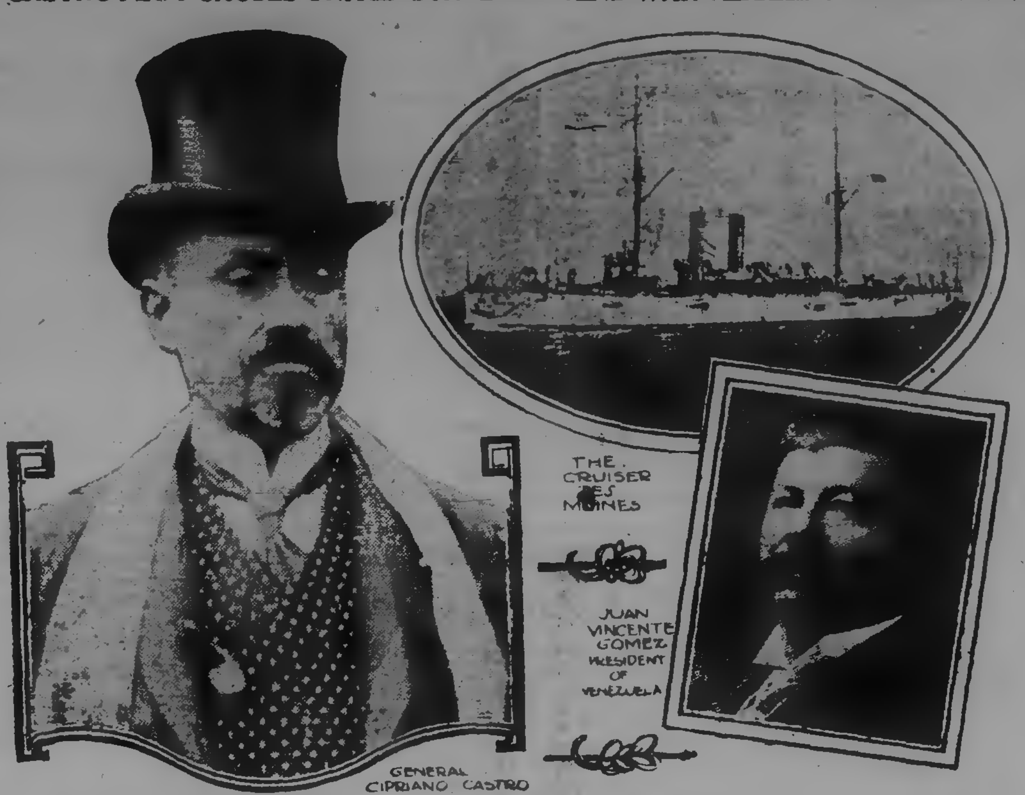
Canadian Press Despatch.

VICTORIA, Aug. 7.—In making his six hundredth aeroplane flight in the same machine, Aviator Bryant from California, fell to his death on the roof of the Lee Dye Building, Wednesday afternoon.

It is believed the fatality was caused by wires attached to the steering gear becoming strained when a fat woman in Vancouver insisted on stepping into the machine to be photographed.

Apples and asparagus are among the vegetables most easily digested.

CASTRO PLOT CAUSES UNITED STATES TO SEND WAR VESSELS TO VENEZUELA



Official Washington was startled when it learned that Castro had eluded the surveillance of American Consuls, who had standing instructions to watch him, slipped into Venezuela and started a revolution against President Gomez.

A hasty conference disclosed the fact that the American Legation at Caracas was in charge of a clerk, and Mr. Bryan at once designated Henry F. Tennant, of the Bureau of Latin-American Affairs, State Department, as secretary of Legation at Caracas and asked the Navy Department to take him to La Guayra on board the cruiser Des Moines. He will represent the United States pending the appointment of a new Minister, in place of Elliott Northcott, formerly Minister. The revolution will hasten the appointment of a new Minister.

PEACE CONFERENCE IS NOT AT ALL SATISFACTORY

Roumania, Whose Sudden Intervention Compelled the Bulgarians to Agree to Terms, Seems to Be the Only Nation Satisfied and Another Balkan Conflict Is Probable.

LONDON, Aug. 6.—(Can. Press.)—The second Balkan peace conference having concluded peace on a basis of compromise, which is unsatisfactory to all the states concerned, except possibly Roumania, the question is being asked how soon before a third Balkan war will break out.

Bulgaria has obtained under the agreement arrived at in Bucharest today, a considerable portion of northern Macedonia—much more than the allies were at first inclined to give her—and also about sixty miles of the Aegean seaboard, which will enable her to build her projected railway from Philippopolis to the Aegean.

Bulgaria, however, deeply resents being deprived of Kavala, a port on Kavala Bay, which goes to Greece under the agreement. Also she is confronted with the task of expelling the Turks from Adrianople, it being clear that the powers will do nothing in this direction.

Bulgars Forced to Yield.

BUCHAREST, Aug. 6.—(Can. Press.)—Peace was concluded tonight between the Balkan States and the preliminary treaty will be signed tomorrow by the delegates of Servia, Greece, Montenegro, Roumania and Bulgaria. The agreement was arrived at only after another exhibition of the utter helplessness of Bulgaria to face her ring of enemies.

Wednesday the discussion in the peace conference threatened to become interminable, but M. Majoresco, the Roumanian premier, and president of the conference, clinched matters by threatening that unless Bulgaria accepted the modified frontier proposed by the allies, Roumania's army would occupy Sofia next Saturday. This threat had the desired effect and an agreement was arrived at today after numerous private consultations between the delegates and a four hours' sitting of the conference.

The new frontier as agreed to starts at a poin on the old frontier, west of the Struma River, follows the water shed to west of the town of Strumnitza thence rns almost thru the Struma valley to the Belesh Mountains, and thence easterly in almost a straight line to the Lesta River, thus leaving the town of Strumnitza, the Port of Lagos and Kanthi, to Bulgaria, and the Port of Kavala to Greece. The new frontier is a deep disappointment to the Bulgarians who still nurse hopes for its eventual revision by the powers.

It is believed that an agreement for the demobilization of the various armies will be signed tomorrow. The news that peace had been arranged, caused great rejoicings here.

Aged Woman Burned.

ST. MARY'S, Aug. 6.—(Special.)—Mrs. Jennie Foster of Granton, aged 79, was burned to death when an oil stove she was lighting caught fire. Mrs. Foster lived alone and was getting her breakfast on an oil stove. She was filling it when the oil took fire. Seizing the stove in her apron she tried to throw it out the kitchen door, when her apron and skirts took fire. The neighbors, called by her screams, found her clothes burning freely. Dr. Land was called, but she sank rapidly and died a short time afterwards.

To Assess Officials.

BRANTFORD, Aug. 6.—(Special.)—City Solicitor Henderson, in reference to the income tax on government officials here, has advised the assessors to make an assessment, despite an adverse ruling some months ago in the county court by Judge Hardy. Assurance has been given that in the meantime the attorney-general will take the matter to the court of appeals for final settlement.

Suspected of Robbery.

KINGSTON, Aug. 6.—(Special.)—This afternoon Henry Merrick, post-office inspector, received word from Sudbury stating that Jack O'Brien, a former Kingstonian, had been placed under arrest by a government detective, charged with having a hand in the sensational mail bag robbery at the outer station early on the morning of Jan. 22. The bag, which contained registered letters and cheques valued at over $1000, was stolen while it lay on a truck waiting to be put on the train for Montreal. O'Brien was suspected at the time and detectives have been following him ever since.

Steerage Rates Cut.

HAMBURG, Aug. 6.—(Can. Press.)—The Hamburg-American and the Austro-American steamship lines today announced a reduction in their steerage passenger rate to Canada, in order to meet the cut in the rate made by the C. P. R. last June.

McCOWAN MAY RESIGN

M.P.P. For East York May Become Sheriff of County.

TORONTO, Aug. 7.—A rumor around the parliament buildings was to the effect that, at a cabinet meeting yesterday, at which Sir James Whitney, Hon. J. J. Foy, Hon. W. J. Hanna and Alex. McCowan, M. L. A., for East York were present, it was decided that Mr. McCowan should succeed to the shrievalty of York, made vacant by the recent death of Sheriff Davillé. It was also decided, according to rumor, that a writ for the by-election in East York should issue almost immediately.

George Henry, former reeve of York

ALEX McCOWAN, M. P. P.

Township and a prominent farmer of Criole, who has been active politically in the Conservative interest, is mentioned as a probable nominee of the party in the event of Mr. McCowan's retirement.

Mr. McCowan has represented East York in the legislature, since the general election of 1905, when the riding, a traditional Liberal stronghold, was redeemed. Mr. McCowan having a comfortable majority over Walter Scott of Markham, the Liberal candidate. In 1908, J. W. Curry, K.C., unsuccessfully contested the seat and in 1911, Reeve Annis of Markham was Mr. McCowan's opponent.

AIRSHIP SCANDAL IN FRANCE

A Paris Manufacturer Has Been Using Backers' Money.

PARIS, Aug. 6.—The sensation caused by the arrest yesterday of Armand Deperdussin, a widely-known builder of aeroplanes, was considerably heightened today by the statement that out of $6,400,000 advanced to him by the Comptoir Industriel et Colonial, his chief backer, it is alleged that only $900,000 was utilized in actual aeroplane construction.

It is alleged that the balance of the money was recklessly squandered in other directions and the newspapers contain stories of sensational expenditure on pleasure. It is further alleged that Deperdussin tried to obtain further financial assistance by presenting a forged order for a large number of aeroplanes.

Before a magistrate yesterday he confessed to many of the charges against him, but estimated his assets as $4,000,000 against $8,000,000 liabilities.

In an interview this afternoon the director of the Deperdussin aeroplane enterprise stated the business will be in no way affected by the arrest, neither will the affair have any detrimental effect on carrying out the contract which the firm had on hand for the French army. Ample financial assistance has already been secured.

The Deperdussin aeroplanes have been among the most successful, Bedrines having used them in many of his record flights. Deperdussin has been considered the foremost patron of aviation in France, which earned him membership in the Legion of Honor.

INQUIRY INTO WHITE SLAVE CASE

Canadian Press Despatch.

LONDON, Aug. 7.—Kier Hardie and other Labor and Radical members yesterday kept after Under Secretary for the Home Department Griffith about the Queenie Gerald white slave case, Hardie stating without reserve that the names of cabinet ministers are being bandied about in connection with the affair.

The Secretary's replies were evasive. The newspapers are getting red hot, and the statement is being boldly made that an inquiry was suppressed for fear of implicating a prominent name.

TWO MEN WITH RECORDS GET OUT OF TORONTO JAIL

Charged With Bigamy.

KINGSTON, Aug. 6.—(Special.)—Charlotte Meeks, aged 23, was arrested this afternoon with a five-months-old baby in arms. She is accused of bigamy by Stuart Meeks of Rochester, N. Y., who came here, called at her apartments on Ontario street and informed her he was about to get a warrant for her arrest. Four years ago the woman was married here to Patrick J. Brennan of Kingston.

Meeks says he was married to her at Cloyne, Ont., nine years ago, when she was just 14 years of age. The babe in arms was born since Brennan has been living with the woman. The latter had four children by Meeks, so it is claimed.

Fewings was pinned under the car and sustained nasty cuts about the head and face. The others escaped with only a scare.

New Claremont Street Police Station Is Scene of a Daring Escapade When Notorious Men Forced a Steel Bar Without Other Inmates Knowing It—One Recaptured.

TORONTO, Aug. 6.—Working so quietly that nobody heard them, two notorious criminals forced a steel bar off the jail window at the new Claremont street police station last night, and dropping 20 feet to the ground below, made their escape. Altho the station police were after them almost before they had left the yard, the crooks managed to elude their pursuers and vanished in the darkness.

One of them, John Gallagher, was arrested later at the cattle market, but his companion is still at liberty.

Both men are well known to the police and detectives in Toronto. They were registered on the slate as William Goodman, aged 38, 521 Dufferin street, and John Gallagher, aged 38, 158 Strachan avenue. The twain showed surprising skill in the manner they broke jail, evidently possessing a lot of knowledge thru detention in almost every station in the city. Detectives were scouring the city for trace of them at an early hour this morning, but so far they have not been recaptured.

Altho Goodman and Gallagher are men with records they were not held on serious charges. Goodman was arrested yesterday afternoon at 1.45 for frequenting a disorderly resort. Gallagher was arrested on a charge of vagrancy at 5.30, which means that he is suspected of something more serious. They were taken to the station and after being searched were placed in the "cage." This is a large steel structure in which men held on light charges are placed. Probably as many as twelve are often together at the same time and there are bunks on which they may sleep.

The "cage" at Claremont street police station is shaped like a half-square, one part running in behind the regular cells. Consequently a man might move over this corner and could not be readily seen until the guard had passed around the cells and looked in from the other end of the cage.

Over the top of the cage and about twelve feet from the floor are placed the window ventilators. These are constructed of small windows, and all work together by means of a steel device operated by a handle from the outside. The windows can all be opened by the guard without passing into the cage. The glass in the ventilators is interwoven with fine wire and protected again by steel bars which form spaces about five inches wide and seven inches long. On the outside of each ventilator are placed three upright steel bars and one cross bar, allowing a space between of about seven inches in depth and about ten inches in width.

After climbing up the cage and squeezing thru between the open ventilator and the wall the crooks reached out and by sheer strength forced one of the upright bars out, thus making a space of seven inches in depth and twenty inches wide.

At 7.45 Patrol Sergeant Griffith, who was in charge of the station, paraded the relief. They left the station about ten minutes later. He then went into the cells and saw that all the prisoners were there, and everything appeared safe and sound. He then returned to his desk in the forward part of the building.

A short time later Constable Judge, on station duty, went in and inspected the prisoners. They were all there. He had been out of the cells about 15 minutes, and the sergeant was just entering the names "Gallagher" and "Goodman" on the report when a well-dressed young man rushed in the station from Claremont street and shouted: "You had better look at the north side of the building. I think someone is escaping." This was at 8.20.

Constable Judge ran out the front door and to the north side of the building. Sergeant Griffith went out the side door and to the south side. Both men met at the rear of the station. The birds had flown. They had disappeared in one minute. Sergeant Griffith ran back to the station to prevent any others from escaping.

Enquiry in the neighborhood resulted in people being found who saw two men pass down Claremont street. Further than that, they could not be traced.

THE APPEAL TO FORCE IN LABOR DISPUTES

Mr. Kier Hardie's motion to recall Lord Gladstone from South Africa because he ordered troops to fire upon strikers, raises the question as to whether force ought to be resorted to in cases where labor comes up against capital.

There may have been times when resort to arms was the only means of bringing about peace in a community. But it ought to be an axiom with all civilized nations that labor has as much right to the use of force as capital.

Since the working man forms the major part of the community, the Imperial troops belong as much to him as to the masters, and he has as much moral right to ask them to be used to force capital to obey as capital has to subdue him.

If force is to be used at all in civil questions, let it not be gunpowder, but let it be the force of strong statesmanship brought to bear on both sides. Capital after all virtually belongs to the state and if the stewards of it will no reason together with their employes they should be forced to.

SIR RICHARD McBRIDE SPEAKS OUT

Sir Richard McBride, Premier of British Columbia, has been stating in his own straightforward way his views on various subjects, more particularly on the navy question and the question of Oriental immigration.

On the navy question and emergency he gives his opinion very plainly and forcibly, he says:

"Canada, unfortunately is not able to boast that she has shouldered her share in the support of the Empire's navy.

"Some talked continually of emergency, urging that there was no emergency and therefore no necessity for aid. I have no patience with such doctrine. If there has to be an emergency established to inspire Canadians to do their duty, I would say, 'for shame.'"

These are strong, sensible words that ought to appeal to every self-respecting Canadian. They should be a sufficient reply to the Liberals carping on emergency and bring them to their senses, if that be possible.

Sir Richard goes on to say:

"I have an abiding faith in the people of Canada. All that is necessary is that the atmosphere should be cleared, and then Canada would rise and instead of presenting only three dreadnoughts would give to the Empire five fighting ships for the line."

These are the words of a Statesman who is used to talking and doing business. Canada can very well leave her coast line to the very efficient care of the finest navy in the world.

Sir Richard also said some plain things on Oriental immigration. The Yellow Peril does not effect us in the east to any serious extent, but in the far west the "peril" is a growing one.

Sir Richard MacBride, while he does not wish to offend Japan or China, believes very strongly in making Canada a white man's country, and is in favor of drastic legislation to stem the tide of Oriental immigration into British Columbia, he says:

"British Columbia is budding into the important place which it's wealth destined it to occupy. The Pioneers should not be Japanese and Chinese, but White."

SIR EDWARD GREY AND THE PANAMA EXPOSITION

Sir Edward Grey, the British Foreign Secretary has disclaimed any direct interferance in the question of British manufacturers taking part in the Panama Exposition.

The Government of Great Britain are not omnipotent in such matters and while they certainly can influence manufacturers up to a certain point, they cannot create the enthusiastic interest that is necessary for the successful participation of Great Britain in such an expensive undertaking.

Business is business and these shows are only run for the mutual benefit of all the participators. Sentiment does not enter into the consideration. The United States did not consider sentiment or even principle when it ignored the treaty it had signed in regard to the tolls of the Canal.

Whether British manufacturers are at all influenced by this is after all an open question; but the action of Mr. Taft's Government has certainly not encouraged them.

EDITORIAL NOTES

The Toronto Fire Chief Complains that he has not sufficient pressure to fight a fire on the second storey. He is bringing pressure to bear upon those who are responsible for his lack of pressure.

Charles Armstrong, a Canadian Railway director, who is a Conservative candidate for Colne Valley, England, declares he would not object to Ireland having the same kind of Home Rule as Canada, and he would also grant the same to Wales and Scotland. Canadians are good home rulers and no doubt Ireland Scotland and Wales, and England as well, would profit by adopting Canadian home rules.

The story which comes from Pembroke about the cat bringing home the lost canary alive in its mouth, is one of those stories that one is naturally inclined to be a little sceptical about. We have all been told in our early youth that a bird can be caught by putting a pinch of salt on its tale. But this tale would require a considerable amount of salt to catch some of us older birds.

It is to be hoped that the company of geologists who are going round tapping the rocks in eastern Ontario will have some good reports to present to the International Geological Congress, when it meets in Toronto next Thursday. These counties have a great future before them if these men will speak out.

EXCERPTS

NOVELIST WANTED

Canada is waiting for her great novel which has not yet been written. It should be possible to give quite a list of clever ladies and gentlemen who are duly qualified Canadians and who have sent forth stories of more or less merit—but it seems to be generally understood that the book has not yet made its appearance. We are all waiting for the master novelist and his immortal story—or series of stories. I use the masculine, though the literary genius on arrival may turn out to be a woman—another George Eliot instead of another Charles Dickens. That is quite possible, though it does not happen to accord with my own premonition. I think it will be a man, and my reason for so believing is that I have for some time had a growing conviction that I myself am to be the Child of Destiny; it is my pen that is to shed glory on my country and triumphantly lay at rest the question—Is there a Canadian literature?—Canadian Courier.

Traveling Sand Hills.

On the coast of Pomerania there are large tracts of sand heaped up by the wind, hundreds of yards in breadth and from 60 to 120 feet high, and these hills, propelled by the wind, move steadily in an easterly direction. The speed at which these great hills travel is from thirty-nine to fifty-six feet a year. Pine woods, which sometimes come in their line of march, cannot stop them and are completely destroyed. The branches are rotted off by the sand, and nothing is left of the tree but the bare stems, which after a few years wither and die.

HER PROTESTS HAD A LIMIT.

Upon her hand, so small and white,
He very gently laid his own.
She drew it back as if in fright
And whispered in a trembling tone,
"You mustn't."

He sat a little nearer still,
Whereat she moved her chair away.
He gazed down in her eyes until
He heard her rather feebly say,
"You mustn't."

He bent above her where she sat
And softly stroked her silken hair.
She seemed so agitated that
She could but faintly still declare,
"You mustn't."

Around her waist he slipped an arm
And drew her closely to his side.
She seemed possessed of wild alarm
And in imploring accents cried,
"You mustn't!"

Deciding to possess the bliss
That fate had put within his reach,
He claimed a sweet and fervid kiss.
But did she then in horror screech,
"You mustn't!"

Owing to the increased supplies of cattle coming forward and the continued warm weather the tone of the market was weaker again, and prices scored a further decline of 25 cents per 100 pounds but at this reduction there was an increased demand from packers and butchers. Choice steers sold at $6 [illegible]; good, at $6 to $6.25; fair, at $5.50 to $5.[illegible] and the lower grades down to $4.

The trade in small meats was quiet and offerings were in excess of requirements, a weaker feeling prevailing in the market. Lambs sold at $5 to $6 per cwt., and sheep, at $4 to $5.

The demand for calves was fair, at prices ranging from $2 to $8 each, as to size and quality. There was no change in the market as to live hogs for which demand was good and sales of selected lots were made at $10.75 to $11, and heavy hogs at from $9.50 to $10.25 per cwt., weighed off cars.

Anybody can afford to pay 50 cents to get rid of terrible rheumatism, Sciatica or Gout, and that's all RHEUMA costs at Warne's Drug Company and they say if it doesn't do all that is claimed for it, money back.

It's wonderful how speedily this simple remedy takes hold and how the sore muscles limber up and the swollen joints come down to normal. Make no mistake—RHEUMA costs but little, but its the best remedy you can find to drive Rheumatic poison from the system and bring back health to misery-racked bodies.

"I had Rheumatism for a long while, and tried many medicines, but was not cured until I used RHEUMA. I cannot praise RHEUMA too highly. My advice to those suffering from Rheumatism is to use this great remedy, as I believe it will effect a permanent cure in any case."—C. B. Lanham, Sattes, W. Va., April 27, 1912.

The Best Detective Story of the Last Ten Years

"Far be it from thy servant, O Prince," he said with palpable sarcasm, "to question the method pursued by so illustrious a personage; but," and he here returned to the easy familiarity of their ordinary intercourse, "since the search was made so thoroughly, since it was a climax to a deed so venturesome that it might have embroiled you even with such slow-witted persons as the policemen of the Western world, would it not have been well to have got the right man?"

"You mean——"

"I mean, your Royal Highness," said the priest with another touch of ironic homage, "that the man whom the brilliant Ali and his equally intelligent assistants seized so boldly in the park, and then spirited away with a skill hardly to be equalled by an Indian schoolboy, was not the person whom it was worth your distinguished while to search."

The Prince was dumbfounded. He circled the table, fished in his pocket for a cigarette, rolled it abstractedly between his thumb and middle finger, lighted it, and then watched the inscrutable features of him whom for so many years he had called "master."

"Is it possible?" he exclaimed at last. "And I gave my personal attention to the task, too! I instructed Ali explicitly, and I ordered him to see that the men who aided him should be among the shrewdest and most praiseworthy of our followers. Ali had tracked the man for days. He said he was as familiar with his face as with that of his own father. How could they have been mistaken?"

"Easily enough," said the Swami. "The men went into Mrs. Missioner's home about the same time. There is a slight resemblance in their general build, and—the wrong man came out!"

"Then we have lost twelve hours," said Kananda.

"You have lost more than that," said the priest, "—opportunity. These Occidentals are singularly fraternal. It is not probable that the man you searched will let the other go unwarned."

The Prince tossed his cigarette into the fire, and with the springing glide of a panther, and as silently crossed to the string of gongs that hung opposite the divan, and struck them smartly. Almost at the same instant the heavy portieres at the other end of the room parted, and Ali's immobile face appeared between them. The servant advanced with salaams that increased in profundity as he noted the storm cloud on Kananda's brow.

"Son of a pig, and fool of a thousand fools!" cried the Prince, his eyes blazing at the low caste Hindoo. "What misguided dotard told you that you were fit to be intrusted with a man's task?"

Ali's whole form stiffened, and he remained in the obsequious attitude of his last salaam, not daring to lift his eyes to the level of Kananda's.

"Your place," continued the Prince, "is among the women, and, even there you would require a guardian to see that you did not exchange rupees for copper coins."

Ali remained motionless, as one about whom lightning has flashed, and who feels his only chance of safety lies in escaping the notice of the next bolt. The Swami signalled to Kananda, and the Prince, following the habits of the Occident, seated himself on the divan in Oriental fashion, and calmed himself with deep draughts from the pipe that bubbled on a low table. As he smoked, the severity of his features relaxed a little, and at length he recovered his composure so far as to take pity on the exceedingly uncomfortable Ali.

"Rise, dog!" he said, and give us, if you can, an explanation of the disgraceful bungling on this simple mission."

What explanation the servant might have mustered is a problem. Before he could collect his thoughts, the electric bell of the outer door burr-r-red sharply. Kananda, the stem of the pipe in his hand, looked toward the curtains expectantly, and the Swami signalled to Ali to answer the summons without. The servant glided ghost-like, from the room, returning shortly with the announcement that a visitor desired audience with the famed Oriental scholar. The Prince disappeared between the portieres of a small door opposite the main entrance of the room, the priest nodded slowly to the servant, and the next moment, Ali ushered into the presence of the sage the man who had had the temerity to let himself be attacked in place of him the Easterners had desired to search.

"I am a special reporter for 'The Times,'" said Britz. "I understand you are a scholar of distinction in your native land. I should like to have a talk with you for a Sunday story."

The Swami's face wreathed into an interrogation point.

"My good friend," he said, "you have come to the wrong person. I am not in the least interested in fiction. Scientific research, with perhaps a glimpse now and then of the psychic limits my activity in literature."

"You don't understand," said Britz. "Newspaper men call everything a 'story.' I should have said an article—an interview, you know."

"Well," said the Oriental indulgently, "it is not the policy of the propaganda to seek publicity through the columns of the press; but, if I can serve you in any way, command me."

"Well, you see, Swami," said Britz, "everything pertaining to that illustrious land of yours, is of interest to Americans; your religion, your politics, your customs, your women, your jewels, your boundless wealth. Everything you can tell me about India is sure to interest our readers."

"If I am to tell you anything about India," said the Swami, "we may as well make ourselves comfortable."

He signed to Ali again, and, rising with much dignity, he placed a chair at the disposal of his visitor.

By the time Britz, who knew enough about the ways of newspaper men not to flourish either pad or pencil was at his ease in a chair that seemed the embodiment of all the luxury in the luxurious East, the Hindoo servant was back with a tray bearing coffee, cigarettes, and strangely perfumed sweetmeats. Britz, who would have made a pretty fair reporter if only he had known how to put his experiences on paper, helped himself to a musk scented cigarette, lighted it with a nonchalant scraping of a match across his sole, nibbled a bit of highly spiced preserved ginger, took in the general appearance of the room with a general eye-sweep, and then, in the most leisurely way imaginable, waited for his host to speak.

"The East is a pretty big subject," said the Swami, and then he spent many minutes sketching Oriental ways and thoughts for the entertainment of his visitor. To follow him would be to recapitulate the history of Hindostan from centuries before the British invasion. When he had finished Britz knew enough about India to fill the pages of all the Sunday papers of New York; but this was not what the detective wanted.

"Your women evidently lead a pretty secluded life," he said, "but I suppose they have their compensations—their music, embroidery, delicacies, gems—by the way, Swami, jewels figure largely in your religion, don't they?"

The same inscrutable gleam again flickered in the eyes of the scholar.

"It would be difficult to make you understand in what way they do," he answered. "In the ordinary commercial sense, they do not. We of India care less for the intrinsic value of the beautiful jewels which you of the West characterize as precious stones. They are precious to us, but in a different way. We love them for their loveliness—not merely for their brilliance and cost. To us, there is a world of metaphysical meaning in the lambent glow of a ruby, or the imprisoned rainbow of a diamond. An emerald to us is the spirit of the sea—the spirit of the water itself; just as the pearl suggests that other world on the floor of the deep. Jewels, as we see them, are the crystallized expression of divine emotions. Diamonds are the tears of Buddha—pearls, so many drops of wisdom from his lips, and sapphires the heavenly aspirations of his thoughts. What to the Occident means profit, to us means poetry."

His visitor seemed duly impressed; nevertheless, he did not depart from his rule to pursue the subject with the enterprising pertinacity of all the newspaper men he knew.

"Some of your jewels," he said, "are, I dare say, a great deal more important than others; for example, the Kohinoor. Has that no larger value than the ordinary stone in your eyes?"

Only so far as it is connected with the traditions of our faith," said the Swami. "Diamonds there are in India, one hundred of which would not make a Kohinoor, yet each a thousand times more precious to true believers. Wars have been fought, races exterminated for gems less beautiful than those which many of the minor women of your public stage can boast. They have a meaning impossible of comprehension to the Western mind."

"And do Hindoos of your generation set as much store by that sort of thing as your ancestors did?" asked Britz.

"The faith of the East is immutable," the Swami replied. "Centuries roll by, but we change not. Nations have broken themselves to shards in efforts to shake the stability of our land and people. What was true before your Prophet left the carpenter's bench is true to-day."

"Now, do you know," said Britz, vivaciously, "all this interests me very much, and will make a cracking good story for 'The Times.' Fancy a whole people—how many millions did you say?—so wrapped up in gems that would not fill a showcase in a Maiden Lane jewelry shop, that they are willing to sacrifice their very lives for them!"

Britz threw all his skill as a questioner into drawing from the Swami descriptions of the more famous jewels of India, deftly keeping the line of his interrogations on the subject of diamonds. The Hindoo, his entire personality an eloquent expression of the indolence of the East, was alike luxuriant in his narghileh and in reminiscences of the sacred gems that had adorned the temples of his faith from Delhi to Benares. Slowly, dreamily, mystically, stories came from his lips of greed and piety, deeds of daring and romance, statecraft and intrigues, until Britz became so interested that for a time even his trained, vigilant mind lost sight of the purpose that had animated all his actions since the day he learned that the famous Missioner necklace was missing.

When the Easterner ended his string of tales, many of them replicas in miniature of the Arabian Nights, and of still more thrilling Oriental legends, the Headquarters man had an exhaustive knowledge of all the great diamonds in the history of Hindostan.

"Your marvelous gems are not proof against imitation?" he said, inquiringly.

"The lesser of them are not," said the Swami. "But the Kohinoor, the Light of Calcutta, the Dawn of the World, and similar stones defy the best efforts of your artificers. In them nature has wrought masterpieces of glory no human plagiarist can reproduce."

"Not even in Paris?" inquired the visitor. "There is a good deal of talk just now, you know, about the theft of a society woman's diamonds. You know she discovered that paste diamonds were substituted, and I understand the central jewel was one of exceptional size."

"Neither Paris, nor Venice, nor yet Stamboul can manufacture colorable imitations of such a stone," insisted the Swami. "Imitations, that is to say, that would deceive anyone with the crudest knowledge."

"But the Maharanee was undoubtedly copied," pursued Britz. "If you have read the newspapers, you know it was through the discovery of that fact that Mrs. Missioner learned her necklace had been stolen."

All the cordiality of the Swami vanished. He seemed to wrap himself in the impenetrable dignity of his caste, and he dismissed the subject with the conclusive remark of his race, "I have spoken." In spite of the most adroit efforts of his visitor, and despite interrogations direct and indirect, he could not be induced to discuss the subject again.

Britz, somewhat baffled, finally led the conversation into other channels by bethinking himself of his role in time to ask the Swami the purpose and probable length of his stay in New York.

"I have no objection to telling you," answered the priest, "that I am here to spread the propaganda, to turn the lamp of the true faith upon the gloom of your Western civilization." He continued. "Yes, I am making proselytes; I am conducting gatherings of seekers after the Light, and I am instructing all who come to me with open minds and honest hearts."

Britz put down the musk-scented cigarette, picked up his hat and coat with a reluctant air, and took leave of the Oriental with not over-profuse expressions of gratitude for his reception. The scholar struck the gong, the Hindoo servant appeared in the farther doorway, and in a few seconds the faint echoes of the visitor's footsteps ended in the quiet closing of the street door.

Kananda, with a carriage akin to the swagger of the English Guardsmen, re-entered the room and looked at the Swami quizzically.

"You certainly have a masterful way of dealing with our friends of the press," he said; "but I am dreadfully concerned for our young friend's education. I fear you have given him a bad start as a student of our jewel lore."

The Swami smiled.

"He already knows all that is good for him to know," he answered. "And perhaps more; and, taking into consideration his little adventure in the park and the events that followed it I think he has had all the Aladdin experiences a New Yorker may reasonably expect in one day. It is nothing. No genius is required to befool these Western minds. We have graver subjects for consideration, your Highness. Patience may be a convenient virtue for us, but—let us remember the brethren."

A shadow darkened the face of the Prince briefly, but the next moment he laughed lightly.

"I think, however," he said, "I shall spare a few minutes to read that chap's—what did he call it, story? A strange tale it will be."

"You need not put yourself to the trouble of looking through the Sunday papers," said the Swami. "There will be nothing about this interview in 'The Times.'"

"No?" returned Kananda. "I heard the reporter say he wanted the facts for the next issue of his Sunday supplement."

"He is not interested in supplements," replied the priest, "sequels are his speciality. When he interests himself in a story he begins at the 'continued' line. He is not a reporter."

The Prince looked at him inquiringly.

"Nor is he the man Ali should have searched," continued the sage. "He is one of the cleverest detectives in New York—Britz, of Headquarters!"

"I ATTRIBUTE MY CURE SOLELY

And Entirely To Taking "Fruit-a-tives"

HULL, QUE., DEC. 24th. 1909

"For the past twelve years, I had painful attacks of Dyspepsia. I could not digest my food and everything caused the most agonizing pain in my stomach. I also had a fearful attack of Constipation and at times, I had no movement of the bowels for two weeks.

Three doctors attended me for two years and gave me all kinds of medicine but did me no good. My weight came to only 80 pounds and everyone thought I was going to die. Finally, I had the good fortune to try "Fruit-a-tives" and as soon as I began to take them, I felt better. I persisted in the treatment and to my great joy, I steadily improved.

Now I feel very well, weigh 115 pounds, and this is more than I ever weighed even before my illness.

I attribute my cure solely and entirely to "Fruit-a-tives" and can never praise them too much for saving my life. To all who suffer from Dyspepsia and Constipation, I recommend "Fruit-a-tives" as a miraculous remedy"

COULDN'T SEE THE JOKE.

Charles Sumner's Woeful Lack of a Sense of Humor.

It was a rainy afternoon, and Mr Longfellow was obliged to go out, leaving Sumner stretched on the sofa reading Lowell's volume. When he returned he asked Sumner how he liked the poems, and Sumner replied: "They are admirable, very good indeed. But why does he spell his words so badly?" Longfellow said that he attempted to explain that the poems were purposely written in the New England dialect but Sumner could not understand.

One summer at Nahant I dined at Mr. Longfellow's with Mr. Sumner and some others. Sumner was a collector of china, about which he knew a great deal, as he did about many other things. He told us a story about going to see Lord Exmouth's collection and how fine it was. When he was taking his leave Lord Exmouth gave him two rare plates and offered to send them to his lodgings, but Sumner would not be parted from his prize and insisted on taking them home with him in his cab. When he had concluded his story, which was interesting, but long in narration, Tom Appleton, Mr Longfellow's brother-in-law, who was present, said, "A pleasing tale, illustrated with two plates." Everybody laughed, and Sumner, looking about most good naturedly, said: "What are you all laughing at? I suppose Appleton is up to some mischief, but my story is quite true."—From "Some Early Memories," by Senator H. C. Lodge in Scribner's Magazine.

Removing Paint Stains.

Paint is one of the most usual of the unavoidable stains which afflict the skirt worn out of doors. "Fresh paint" signs are all very well if they are seen in time, but they have an inconvenient way of appearing boldly before the eyes after damage has been done. The sooner a paint stain is removed the easier the task of removal will be. Spread a little dry laundry or cornstarch around the spot to keep the paint when moistened from spreading. Then wet the stain with turpentine. After a few minutes moisten again. Scrape the paint up with a dull knife or a spoon handle and wet again with turpentine. When there is no trace left of the paint rub the spot dry with a clean cloth and brush off the starch. —Washington Star.

Funny Linguistic Dispute.

It is an axiom among Irish revivalists that no one really understands the Irish language—except the particular revivalist who is talking to you. As soon as an Irish inscription appears, as it now often does on a tablet or a medal, all the scholars who were not consulted as to its phrasing hasten to point out what deplorably bad Irish it is. A cup bearing an inscription in Irish was among those competed for at the national university sports in Dublin recently. Part of the inscription was "Cuirm na mban," which was meant for "The Woman's Cup." But, says a rival linguist, it really means, "The Women's Beer." The same trophy bore the words "Clui hche Odelscoil na Eirehnn," as an Irish rendering of national university sports. The critic now informs us that the words really mean "The University of Ireland is a game."

ADVERTISING

A STORE'S importance is rightly judged by its advertising. Not altogether by the size of the advertisement, but by size and tone, and quality of announcement.

What the store has to say is one thing. Quite as important is how it says it.

Given that the clerical force is competent and up-to-date, it will say, over the counter, the very best to be said in reference to the goods enquired for. It may, and should, suggest other goods, not in the customers view.

This implies that the customer is in the store. But what brings him or her there? The wish to buy and the belief it is a good place to buy at.

How is this learned of?

By advertising. The advertisement is a message, an intelligent middleman, doing service between seller and buyer. The space talks to thousands, even while the store is closed for the night.

Use The REVIEW and tell the story of your store and its opportunities for good service.

Queens Who Could Earn Living.

The queen of England would have no difficulty in supporting herself. She would be most valuable in a dairy, and as a needlewoman she has few equals If her husband were a workingman instead of being a king she could darn the children's clothes. Her majesty could also make a living by two great accomplishments she possesses. These are her fine contralto voice and her capacity as water colorist.

The dowager queen of Italy could earn her living as a lecturer on Shakespeare and Dante.

Queen Elizabeth of Bulgaria could make her living as a hospital nurse.

Queen Helena of Italy, Queen Victoria of Spain and Queen Wilhelmina of Holland would all three be at their best when looking after children.

Queen Maud of Norway, under the name of Graham Irving, has met with much applause as dramatic author.

Queen Elizabeth of Belgium holds a doctor's diploma from the University of Leipzig.

Piquant Parasols.

The parasols of this year of color, 1913, are very brilliant. As for shapes, the imagination fails to conjure up a possible form in which they have not already appeared. They are so gay and original that they will be invaluable adjuncts to help out a simple summer dress.

One curious fad in this connection is that of using a tassel of old and faded silk to adorn the handle of one's sunshade. If you have anything of the kind among your belongings now is the time to resurrect it, as Paris, with proverbial originality, has declared it to be "grand chic."

Paris also insists on the wearing of gloves after having allowed them to lapse last winter into a sort of "innocuous desuetude." The natural color is now more fashionable than white. Long suede mousquetaire gloves are worn with abbreviated sleeves, and the more they wrinkle the better is Dame Fashion pleased.

Outdoor Sleeping Cap.

The custom of sleeping out of doors is becoming so popular that there are now many devices for making it possible to sleep outdoors and still enjoy all the comforts of an indoor bed. One of these articles is a cap which covers the head and well over the cheeks and forehead, with a cape portion that extends over the neck. It is fashioned of soft knit cloth with a pretty touch of color in the silk binding and a silk tie under the chin.

Charming Summer Hat.

A charming leghorn hat has a bowl shaped crown entirely covered with narrow plaited frills of pink malines. Two large pink roses are caught on either side of the wide brim.

GOOD PROGRAM FOR THE LABOR DAY CELEBRATION

Arrangements are proceeding for the big Labor Day celebration to be held by the Trades and Labor Council on Labor Day. The program which will shrotly be announced, should find favor with citizens generally. There will be no need for Peterborough people to spend Labor Day elsewhere, in view of the entertainment to be provided.

A monster parade by the members of the various unions [illegible] held in the early afternoon, with Riverside Park as the objective. There a long and varied line of sports will be carried out, in addition to a baseball match, for which it is proposed to bring a team from Belleville.

It is altogether likely that a band concert by the 57th band will be given in the armories that evening.

RURAL SCHOOL EXHIBIT AT PETERBORO' EXHIBITION

The Rural School Exhibition should be an interesting feature of the Peterborough Exhibition, next month.

This exhibit is collected from the pupils of twelve rural schools in the vicinity of Peterborough. It consists of poultry, crops, and flowers, raised by the girls and boys, and exhibited at the Fair in competition for prizes.

The work, which is undertaken by the Department of Agriculture, is a movement to introduce the study of agriculture into the curriculum of the rural schools. In this they have been generously assisted by the public school inspectors and the teachers of the participating schools. Samples of corn and potatoes have been distributed free to the boy pupils and seeds of various varieties of flowers to the girls. To the pupils, both girls and boys, who performed satisfactory work the preceding year a setting of bred-to-lay Barred Plymouth Rock eggs were given as a premium. These have all been raised at home, and in nearly every instance the work has been done entirely by the pupils themselves. Considered broadly, the work is to give the child something of intrinsic practical value before he leaves the school and to place him in a better position to earn a livelihood.

Last year eight schools co-operated in the work. This year twenty-five have been enrolled, and next year it will probably be largely extended. The County Council has generously appropriated an additional $100.00 to their regular grant in order to finance the movement, and the Provincial Department of Agriculture is actively promoting it. The Rural School Exhibit will give parents an opportunity of learning what is being done for vocational education, and a cordial invitation is extended to every one to call.

PETERBORO'S Y.M.C.A.; GENERAL SEC. HAINSWORTH'S WORK AMONG THE BOYS

Splendid Equipment—Saving the Boys City Baths Wanted

Peterborough boys are the best that are made in Canada, but they don't know, all of them that is, what a splendid city they have right here.

Some of them do. Six-hundred of them at least—noble six-hundred!—The latter have joined the Y.M.C.A. and are enjoying the unique privileges of that organization.

Mr. Hainsworth is what is termed a "live wire." You cannot touch him without getting a shock that wakes you up to your duty to the boys and young men of the city.

The Review had an article entitled "Save the Boys," some weeks ago, in which it pleaded for more supervision of boys bathing in our lakes and rivers. The Review thought it was original, but Mr. Hainsworth had been "there before," and is not writing articles on the subject, but is actually saving the boys every day.

Every boy, red, white, black and yellow, is welcome to use the bathing tank in the basement of the Y.M.C.A. buildings, free of charge, whether he be a member of the association or not. And more than this, each boy if he comes regularly will be taken in hand by an expert swimmer, in the person of Mr. Galley, and taught to swim.

Let all timorous boys take this notice and go and see Mr. Galley between the hours of 2 and 5, any afternoon, at the Y.M.C.A.

It has already been mentioned in the Review that Peterborough has made no provision for girl bathers. Indeed, the city itself makes no provision at all for bathers of either sex.

It is time we woke up to our responsibility in this matter. The whole thing should not be left on Mr. Hainsworth's shoulders. Let the city provide public baths for boys and girls, where they can enjoy themselves with less danger of drowning.

Mr. Hainsworth and his staff would gladly take up the training end of it if the city would do their part.

It speaks well for the popularity and good work of Mr. Hainsworth and his staff that he has now six-hundred on the Y.M.C.A. roll; an increase on last year of two hundred and forty-eight.

The building is undergoing alterations and improvements, and by the beginning of the winter season Mr. Hainsworth will have one of the finest institutions for young people around this country.

A new and original idea has been just carried out on the two swing doors at the entrance on George st. One door is labled "welcome," this can only be seen as you enter: the other swing door has the typical Canadian parting words "Come Again," posted on the inside, so that they can only be seen coming out.

All these things, and more, prove that Mr. Hainsworth is a genius in dealing with young fellows. Parents can very safely leave the social life of their boys in his hands.

A Woman's Right

A woman, as the English statutes are at present, cannot act as a solicitor. She can, however, according to the statements made in the courts recently, act as Queen, marshal, champion of England, sexton, churchwarden, constable, workhouse governor, returning officer and overseer of the poor. C. A. Buckmaster, assistant secretary of the Board of Education, also stated that there were instances of a woman acting as keeper of a prison, gate house and as keeper of a jail. It was stated also that Anne, Countess of Pembroke, as heredity sheriff, sat at the Assizes with the judges on the Bench, and although it is not said in the books that she administered justice, that was obviously meant.

The foregoing list of a woman's activities was mentioned during the hearing in the Chancery Division of the action brought by Miss Gwyneth Marjorie Bobb to obtain from the Law Society a declaration that she is a "person" within the meaning of the solicitor's acts and entitled to be admitted as a solicitor.

Mr. Buckmaster submitted that there was nothing in the solicitors' acts repugnant to the inclusion of a woman within the meaning of the word "person," and instanced other countries in which women practice law.

PETES POUNDED THE KID PITCHER TO ALL PARTS; HILLIARD WAS THE STAR

Three Out of Four in Berlin Series — McNeal Started It In the Eighth

BERLIN, ONT., Aug. 6.—In a lively swat-fest Peterborough made it three out of four in the series by trouncing the locals yesterday by 11 to six. The fixture bristled with extra base hits. The locals [illegible] pounded hard when hits meant runs. Up to the eighth frame it was nip and tuck struggle. Berlin [illegible] the score twice. In the eighth the White Caps got to Bradshaw and hammered out three triples and the same number of singles, scoring six. In the fourth when Berlin got to Creswell Manager Rowan sent in Tracey, and while eight hits were gathered from his delivery, they did not come at opportune stages. Second baseman Atcheson was released and returned to Cobalt.

Hilliard's fielding in the first innings of the game was easily the feature of the fray. His first chance was a line drive to left centre, which he gathered in running at top speed. This hit would have gone for three bases. Again in the same innings he went to deep centre, and jumping in the air, he speared the ball off the fence. This would have meant a home run. Creswell got himself into trouble when he fielded a bunt and threw to third base with no person covering. One run scored and the hitter went to second. This was followed with a couple of two baggers which netted three runs. Tracey replaced Creswell in the fourth with two on and nobody down and he gets credit with the game. McNeal started the rally in the eighth when he singled, scoring Trout, who had previously made a three-bagger. Two men were down at the time. A series of hits followed scoring six runs.

WESTERN CANADA'S BUMPER WHEAT CROP

Thousands of Men Required—This Year's Harvest Promises to be the Largest in the History of Canada

According to present indications the wheat crop of 1913 will be the greatest ever harvested in Manitoba, Saskatchewan or Alberta, thus requiring the farm laborers of the East to assist in harvesting the world's bread basket.

The Governments of the respective Provinces state that many thousand men will be required for this year's harvest. These will have to be principally recruited from Ontario, and the prosperity of Canada depends on securing labor promptly. The Canadian Pacific, on which Company will fall practically the entire task of transporting these men to the West, is already making special arrangements for this year. Excursions from points in Ontario to Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta will be run and special trains operated, making the trip in about thirty-six hours and avoiding any change of cars or transfers. This will be a day shorter than any other route. Dates, rates and conditions will be announced in a few days. eod

A KINGDOM OF HORROR.

Revolting Sacrifices and Orgies In Great Benin.

How many people have heard of Great Benin, the negro kingdom of West Africa that shut its doors to the whole world and continued its frightful orgies and slaughtered its thousands of victims in its human sacrifices until the end of the 19th century? The king of Benin ruled over his people in true savage style, a magnificent tyrant, a picturesque monster whose practices would be beyond belief were they not a matter of very recent history. First heard from by the civilized world in the 15th century, Benin kept up its reputation until the year 1896 when England's long arm was stretched out in vengeance for the massacre of a peaceful expedition and Great Benin suddenly ceased to be.

The kingdom of Benin was discovered in or about 1472 by the Portuguese, incident to their attempts to come upon a new water route to India. The country was then quasi-civilized. Some effort was made to Christianize the natives, but the attempts were short-lived. Owing largely to the unhealthy climate, but also partly to the fact that the country seemed to Europeans to be of little value commercially, the interest of whites soon lagged. Ivory was scarce, rubber unknown, palm-oil little manufactured and, while for a time the slaves formed a consideration, there was nothing when the slave trade was abolished to attract Europeans.

Finally, in 1892, England made a treaty with the King of Benin. To this treaty, however, the king did not adhere. Instead, he continued to lay obstacles in the way of trade and intercourse. Several British officers made attempts at various times to get into Benin territory, but were invariably met by armed forces, and as they were under strict instructions not to come to blows, they invariably were forced to retire. Then in January, 1897, in the absence of the consul general, the vice-consul of the Niger Coast Protectorate determined on a peaceful mission to Benin. Though repeatedly advised of danger, a company of seven men, with carriers, set out, completely unarmed, so as not to arouse the suspicions of the natives, and within a few hours after crossing the Benin border was set upon from ambush and massacred. Only two of the party escaped. In revenge, Great Britain sent out the inevitable punitive expedition, which in February captured the city of Benin and destroyed many of the houses.

Some account of the manners and customs of the Benin people has been given by several of the early explorers, and later travelers have added to the sum of information. The people seem to have exhibited a curious mixture of savagery and quasi-civilization. They had organized government of a sort, with a capital city, Great Benin. Governmental powers were vested in a king, who was not only monarch, but god incarnate. He held court at stated intervals and enforced such laws as his whim and that of the advisory council happened to dictate—so that there was a semblance of law and order. There were three classes of people—nobles or big men, commons and slaves, who generally were war captives.

Yet despite these beginnings of organized society, the people practiced most revolting, savage, social and religious customs, like trial for misdemeanors by hideous ordeals and sacrifice; and their superstitions were of the lowest and most stupid type. Apparently, they worshiped no idols, and the only spirits they recognized were powers of evil, to exorcise which was their chief religious concern. Every house or compound had its altar, decorated with rows of bronze heads supporting elephant tusks.

Human sacrifice was practiced to propitiate the sea, the weather, the spirits of the dead and of mischievous demons, to placate the gods in time of war, to celebrate the harvest and always on the death of the king. The victims, like the Roman gladiators, were generally slaves or prisoners; sometimes the maimed and physically useless swelled the numbers.

To Observe Tides.

Every effort is being made to give unique importance to the new British tidal observatory. It is designed to give important information of somewhat varied kind and only after careful study with this in mind has the ordnance survey chosen Dunbar, on the east coast of Scotland, as the most suitable site. To give surveyors a much-needed permanent datum a primary object of the new station will be to fix the position of mean sea level with exceptional precision, using self-recording instruments. Other purposes will be to examine directly the rise or fall of the coast line if any movement occurs; to record the local tides and all tidal phenomena, and to determine if possible whether the changes of the tide produce any measureable deformation of the surface of the adjacent land.

Magistrate Who Walks.

Mr. T. Simpson, the Manchester (Eng.) magistrate, who last year, though over seventy years of age, accomplished two walking feats, one from Manchester to Land's End and the other from John o' Groats to Manchester, has just added to his laurels. Having been a little indisposed, Mr. Simpson went to the Isle of Man for a "rest," and while there he walked the whole circuit of the island, his tour covering eighty-six miles, in less than four days.

London's Poor Looked After.

The annual accounts of the London County Council with regard to working class dwellings show that just upon three billions have been expended with the object of providing accommodation for the poor. In some instances housing schemes have proved a failure, the proportion of empties being very high. There was, for example, a loss on Carrington House.

The wages of sin don't bother some fellows. They do it for fun.

DIRECTS FARM SCHOOL

E. A. HOWES IS IN CHARGE OF ALBERTA COLLEGE.

New Appointee To Institution at Vermilion Has Had Wide Experience In Scientific Farming, Both at Home and Abroad—Was One of the Teachers Chosen To Study When Macdonald Movement Began.

Ernest Albert Howes, B.S.A., who has been appointed to the principalship of the new agricultural school in Vermilion, Alta., is an Ottawa valley boy who has been making good abroad for some time.

He was born in 1872 near Vankleek Hill, Ont., and received his early education in the model and High Schools there. He later attended the Normal School at Ottawa and afterwards taught a rural school for eight years.

At the time of the "Macdonald movement" he was one of eleven teachers chosen by Dr. James Robertson to take one year of short courses at the Universities of Clark, Columbia and Cornell, and also at the Ontario Agricultural College. His next three years were spent at school garden work in Carleton County and later he distinguished himself along this line by starting the first school garden in Ontario at Bowesville. Subsequently he was made principal of the Macdonald consolidated school which specialized in household science, manual training and elementary agriculture. After holding this position for four years he resumed his special studies at the Ontario Agricultural College where he secured his B.S.A. degree.

ERNEST A. HOWES.

Later he held positions as first assistant in the experimental branch of the Ontario Agricultural College and in the Dominion seed branch and the Department of Agriculture. For a time he was in charge of the germination laboratory and of field plot tests. He then moved to Nevada, where he held several important positions, the last one being that of professor of field husbandry in the University of Nevada. During his stay in that state, along with his many other achievements, he enjoyed unusual success in the introduction of an experimental union, similar to the one which is in vogue in Ontario.

Motor Cycles To Be Used.

A dramatic contest of strategy and wit between British sailors and armed motor cyclists is anticipated upon the East Coast at the end of the present month. Vice-Admiral Jellicoe, who will be in charge of the hostile Blue fleet, will endeavor during the concluding phases of the forthcoming naval manoeuvres to land a force at such a point upon the East Coast as will enable this force seriously to threaten London.

To outwit Vice-Admiral Jellicoe motor cyclists are to be employed in considerable numbers. These cyclists, equipped with reliable machines and a knowledge of the duties of scouts, will play the all-important role of the eyes of the army. They will patrol the coast and immediately report at certain rendezvous any attempted landing by the fleet. At these rendezvous will be stationed highly mobile bodies of troops, ready for instant action, and sufficiently armed to harass and delay a landing. These will be subsequently reinforced from a force held in reserve at a suitable centre.

The employment of motor cyclists in the actual and responsible role of scouts is regarded with great satisfaction by those who have followed the history of military cycling.

The Elastic Earth.

To the layman nothing may seem more rigid than the crust of the earth, but men of science tell us that it bends and buckles appreciably under the pull of the heavenly bodies. Careful observation has also shown that the shores on opposite sides of a tidal basin approach each other at high tide. The weight of water in the Irish sea, for example, is so much greater at that time that the bed sinks a trifle and in consequence pulls the Irish and English coasts nearer together. Thus the buildings of Liverpool and Dublin may be fancied as bowing to one another across the channel, the deflection from the perpendicular being about one inch for every 16 miles. It has also been shown that ordinary valleys widen under the heat of the sun and contract again at night.

Herbert Spencer on the Races.

Herbert Spencer, the philosopher, once attended the Derby. Francis Galton, who was his guide, took notes of the jaunt: "All went off well, except that Spencer would not be roused to enthusiasm by the races. He said that the crowd of men on the grass looked disagreeable, like flies on a plate; also, that the whole event was just like what he had imagined the Derby to be." Even the costumes of the men who shouted the odds was only what he had imagined them to be!

Small Value To Honor.

Apart from a certain appeal to feminine vanity presentations at court would hardly seem to be worth the bother and expense attached to the function except for those really in the court circle. The expense of a court dress, bouquet and other items is considerable, the passage through the throne room lasts only a moment and the occasion presents no other feature of interest beyond perhaps one turn through the drawing-rooms thrown open to the general company and supper downstairs.

Presentation does not entitle those so honored to any further recognition by the sovereigns, such as an invitation to a state ball, or even a garden party.

CHILDREN SAVED FROM DROWNING

Some years ago when the Volunteer Fire Brigade did duty for the city, "Ab" Mitchell, helped his comrades to save life and property.

Now his specialty is saving lives. Several instances are recorded where Mr. Mitchell has been the means of preventing drowning accidents at the Little Lake.

Late yesterday afternoon, prompt action on his part, saved the lives of Minnie Martyn, the young daughter of Mr. John Martyn, Lock street, and also that of Leo Martin, the nine year old son of Mr. Martyn Martin, also of Lock street.

The children had been playing on the logs and they slipped and fell into the water, when some fifty or more feet from the shore.

Mr. Mitchell noticed the plight of the children from his home at 101 Romaine street, and at the peril of his health, which is none too good, he ran to the assistance of the boy and girl. His efforts were successful both being rescued and restored to their homes.

DRY SWEEPING TO CEASE IN CENTRAL DISTRICT

Between Charlotte and Brock Streets and Water and Aylmer Streets

Moved by Ald. Anderson seconded by the Mayor, that a by-law be prepared to prohibit dry-sweeping of sidewalks between Charlotte street and Brock street and Water street and Aylmer street, both sides of each street. Carried.

The Board of Health have at last succeeded in bringing the above question to the notice of the Board of Works, and the resolution was passed at the committee meeting, last night.

The Quaker Oats Company request that a by-law be passed, authorizing the deeding to them of the land on the north side of Hunter street for a similar area on the south side of Hunter street. An agreement was made a couple of years ago, but as yet the land has not been deeded over to the company. City Engineer Parsons was instructed to look into the matter and report at next meeting.

CLIFTON STREET

The question of straightening out Clifton street, between Rogers and concession streets, to a uniform width, was left in the hands of a committee composed of the chairman, City Engineer and Ald. Anderson, for further enquiry. A government survey shows that three buildings on the south side of Clifton street are on the street line, and the Board do not think they should be put to the expense of buying land on the north side to straighten it out and make a uniform street. The petitioners for this work will be advised by the committee, who will report the matter to the Board.

It was decided to extend, free of cost, the sewer to the street line for connection with the lavatories at the new Government Wharf, on George street.

FREE GRAVEL

A communication was received from R. C. Braund to the effect that he was going to take out considerable gravel at St. Joseph street, which gravel he will place at the disposal of the city, if accepted.

NO ACTION TAKEN

Thos. Turcott applied for a concrete wall at the rear of his property No action was taken in the matter.

THE NEW STREET

On motion of Ald. Duffus, a cheque will be issued for payment of some 16 feet of the Chamberlaw property on Patterson street, required for the opening of a street from Bolivar to Patterson streets.

A board walk will be laid on Mark street, north of Sophia, as a result of Alex. McIntyre's motion.

STREET SIGNS

A letter was received from a Montreal Sign firm with a sample of a new sign to designate names of streets. An enquiry will be made as to the cost of erecting these signs in the fire limits, with a view of adoption next year. City Engineer Parsons thought the signs would be a good thing for the city.

Arrangements will be made with Messrs Mitchel and Stothart, for drawing stone at $1 and $1.25 to any part of the city.

STREET PAVING

City Engineer Parsons reported that he had advertised for tenders for street paving.

Mr. T. Quartermaine was granted two weeks leave of absence.

H. B. COWAN, PRESIDENT OF HORTICULTURAL ASS'N.

S. Jordan on the Executive—Delegates Enjoyed Trip to the Lakes

The fourth session of the Canadian Horticultural Association Convention opened this morning at 9.30. The election of officers resulted as follows:

President—H. B. Cowan, Peterborough.

1st. Vice-Pres.—Geo. Hopton, Montreal.

2nd Vice-Pres.—T. Adams, Toronto.

Sec.-Treas.—Julius Luck, Montreal, re-elected.

Executive—S. Jordan, Peterborough; J. Dunn, St Catharines, and G. Douglas, Toronto

Yesterday the delegates were entertained to a trip to the Kawartha Lakes and a banquet at South Beach. A most enjoyable time was spent, the excursionists returning about three o'clock this morning. It had been the desire of the committee in charge to entertain the visitors to a mid-night trip through the canal and over the lift lock. Owing to some misunderstanding the excursionists were forced to walk to the city from the lift lock. The visitors were highly pleased with the beauty and scenery of the islands at Stoney Lake.

An automobile trip and the visiting of the principal industries will be the feature of this afternoon's work. A moonlight will be run over the lift lock to-night and down the river

A demonstration by the fire department was given this morning.

TWO MEN HURT WHEN RIG WAS STRUCK BY TRAIN

Hastings, Aug. 7—What came near being a fatal level crossing accident happened last night at 7.50 o'clock here, when the Belleville-Peterborough Grand Trunk train struck a rig driven by Mr. P. McGuire. With him was Mr. H. McCarthy, and both men were quite badly injured, the vehicle was completely demolished, and the horse so badly hurt that J. H. Hess, V. S., found it necessary to shoot it.

Drs. Edmison, Richardson and Wade attended the injured men, who were both unconscious for some time. Both, however, have recovered sufficiently to be taken to their homes. The crossing is a bad one. Only three years ago, in the same place, a similar accident happened.

Upon arriving at the floating bridge, Bridgenorth, the girls decided to land, and in doing so Miss E. B. Tully slipped off the boom and went down into the water. Miss M. Richards grasped and courageously held the sinking girl's hand, while Mr. Gordon Long came to the rescue and managed to lift Miss Tully out of the water. The girls felt better when safely landed.

NECESSITY OF PROPER WATER SERVICE HERE

What Inspector of Fire Underwriters Has To Say

An inspector of the Fire Underwriters of Toronto, was asked what would be the outcome if the people of Peterboro did not provide proper water service for fire purposes. In cases of a general conflagration, he said that the company would get an assignment of the claims of the insured and bring action against the municipality.

It means also, that city property would not be insured in the expert's opinion.

We are sure that the Board of Water Commissioners will feel themselves fully warranted in going to the people for money enough to provide a complete fire system.

The danger of public health is quite as great. Peterboro citizens will be found willing to come forward and do their duty.

WHAT IS GOING TO HAPPEN TO THE MONEY MARKET?

Enough Money for Getting in Crops and for Commercial Purposes—A Foreign Conscience Needed—Money Will Not be Easier Till December.

What is going to happen to the money market this fall, with the crop still to be reckoned with? The Financial Post regards this as a very pertinent question.

The present tightness in the money market is partially due to the banks reserving their resources for the harvesting of the western crop.

A representative of The Review, in discussing the financial situation with a few Peterborough bank authorities this morning, gathered that while money was still as tight for speculative purposes, both in the east and west, there was plenty on hand for the harvesting of the crops and for ordinary commercial purposes.

It was admiited that there was not as much money coming into Canada as there used to be. As to the cause of this, it may be that the Canadian political situation is affecting the free flow of capital from the old country, or it may merely be due to the general unrest in Europe that is teh cause of the stringency.

Which ever way it is looked at, the situation points to one fact, that Canada, while she has in the past been untouched by foreign politics is more and more dependent upon the condition and confidence of not merely Great Britain, but of other countries.

This means that Canada must develope a foreign conscience which involves a foreign policy. And again a foreign policy involves responsibility and responsibility means an efficient sea-power. Canada has this power at present and the general feeling is that we should recognize this in a practical way.

It is estimated that there will not be much relief in the stringency, so far as speculative propositions are concerned till some time in December. This latter is not very good news, but it is the best that is knocking around just now.

U.S. EMISSARY "PERSONA NON GRATA" IN MEXICO CITY

President Huerta Has Declared That Wilson's Envoy Will Not Be Well Received Unless He Presents Proper Credentials—Bryan Informs Mexico That Lind's Mission Is Peaceful.

MEXICO CITY, Aug. 7.—(C.A.P.)—The native newspapers today express loud praise of Provisional President Huerta's declaration that John Lind will be "persona non grata" in Mexico. The Independante declares that the provisional president's action constitutes "irreproachable logic."

The Imparcial says that the declaration will present to all nations the attitude of Mexico in the face of the menace of intervention by the American Government. El Pais says: "The dignity and decorum of Mexico are in firm hands."

The note issued by the Mexican foreign office late last night, saying that John Lind would be "persona non grata" unless he brought "credentials in due form, together with recognition of the government of Mexico," is regarded as a reply to Secretary of State Bryan's message of yesterday, to the effect that the government of Mexico should admit Washington's communication and not give weight to sensational misrepresentations, altho the Mexican note was prepared in advance of the receipt of Secretary Bryan's message. The exchange of communications was almost simultaneous.

The greatest possible interest is manifested on all sides in the outcome of what is regarded as a diplomatic crisis.

Secretary of State Bryan sent last night the following telegram to the American legation here:

"You may say to the minister of foreign affairs that Gov. Lind comes to Mexico on a mission of peace, and that the president feels sure his presence there will contribute to a settlement of the difficulties. The Mexican Government should await the president's communication and not give weight to misrepresentations published in sensational newspapers."

The message was delivered to the foreign minister.

Increased antagonism has been aroused among Mexicans toward President Wilson's plan for the pacification of the republic by the latest news from Washington, that the object of John Lind's visit here as the personal representative of President Wilson is to consult with prominent Mexicans and advise them that the only basis on which Mexico will be recognized by the United States is the elimination of President Huerta.

Earlier reports to the effect that Mr. Lind purposed to deal with Huerta, perhaps by making the direct suggestion that he resign, were received with indignation by Mexican officials, and the new angle of his visit makes it not improbable that he will be treated with even less consideration than otherwise would have been accorded him.

Pres. Huerta's prestige among Mexicans in the capital has undoubtedly been strengthened by what is regarded as his defiance of the United States. Even those who had been lukewarm in their support of the administration profess admiration for the soldier-president who dared to talk back to Washington, altho not all of them agree as to the wisdom of his course, and many of them consider that he acted precipitately in view of the officially-defined intentions of Washington.

Just what course President Huerta will take in the event that John Lind, President Wilson's personal representative, continues his trip to Mexico is a matter for speculation. No official declaration has been made as yet as to what this course will be. It is assumed that Mr. Lind might enter the republic at Vera Cruz and come to the capital without molestation, since the question of his credentials could not be expected to be answered until his arrival here, but whether he shall be expelled or merely ignored remains undetermined.

Up To Washington Now.

Keen interest is being evinced as to what the attitude of Washington will be in the face of President Huerta's defiance, and speculation is divided as to whether Mr. Lind will be recalled or permitted to continue as far as he can and thus force the issue upon President Huerta. Mexicans of the conservative class appear to believe that Huerta will not drive Mr. Lind from the country, but will be content with ignoring him, except, perhaps, for subjecting him to surveillance in order to see that he does nothing possible of being construed as mixing in the politics of the country.

Unless a radical change is effected in the sentiment at the palace, Mr. Lind will not be given an opportunity to talk with President Huerta, even tho he is permitted to remain in the capital; nor will he be any more successful in meeting any official of the government.

AUTO TANK EXPLODES

Philadelphia Streets Are Flooded With Burning Fluid.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 7.—(Can. Press.)—Four large manufacturing plants were theatened with destruction, several firemen were burned or overcome by smoke and many families had to flee for their lives from their homes this afternoon when the plant of the Union Petroleum Co., which occupied an entire block in the southern section of the city, was practically destroyed in a spectacular fire that raged for hours. The loss is estimated at $125,000.

Five minutes after the first explosion the flames communicated themselves to a 110,000 gallon tank, which exploded, sending an avalanche of burning oil in all directions. Great rivers of oil ran down the streets from the oil tanks and laborers cut trenches for it into the sewers, so that it could escape before becoming ignited. The cause of the fire is not known.

WIARTON, Aug. 7.—(C. A. P.)—William Gilbert, one of Wiarton's oldest residents, is dead at the age of 85 years. Mr. Gilbert was government lightkeeper and storm signal agent at this place for six years, performing his duties faithfully until seized with his last illness, about two weeks ago.

SCHOONER IN DANGER

Crew of "Kitchen" Preferred to Stay on Sinking Ship.

TORONTO, Aug. 8.—The coal schooner, Kitchen, sprung a leak last night when in the lake southeast of Ward's Island and started to sink. The crew of seven men, including officers immediately set to work with the hand pumps and every inch of power in the boat was crowded on in an attempt to beach the schooner before she sank.

Whistles of distress were heard by the life-saving crew at Ward's Island shortly after midnight, and Malt McDonnell put out in the Patricia with three of his men. The life-saving crew picked up the schooner about a mile and a half off the island and drew up alongside of her. The captain reported that the vessel was leaking badly and had only about two feet of "clearboard." The crew were asked if they would leave the ship and get in the lifeboat, but replied that they would stick to the schooner until she sank.

A heavy sea was running, and the captain of the schooner said that it was either a case of beaching her or letting her founder. The lifeboat went for Captain Goodwin of the fireboat Joe Goodwin, and just before one o'clock he set out in the tug. A line was passed to the schooner, and the tug succeeded in reaching the mouth of the channel at 2 o'clock this morning. It was thought that the boat would sink before she got thru the ochannel.

The Kitchen is a two-masted coaling schooner from Cobourg, and was bound for Oakville. She sprang a leak when ten miles out in the lake, and but for the captain's seamanship would have sunk with the crew of seven on board.

TWO WEEKS IN JAIL FOR ROBERT AULL

COBOURG, Aug. 8.—Robert Aull, jr., of St. Louis, whose impromptu marriage with Doris Reid, of Toronto, was a society sensation this season, received a sentence of two weeks in jail this morning, following his conviction on Tuesday. He was charged with obtaining money under false pretences through presentation of a worthless check. Aull and his father had expected suspended sentence.

FREE ICE HELPS THE SUFFERING OF THE POOR IN HOT WEATHER

THE ICE FUND HELPS THE LITTLE MOTHERS

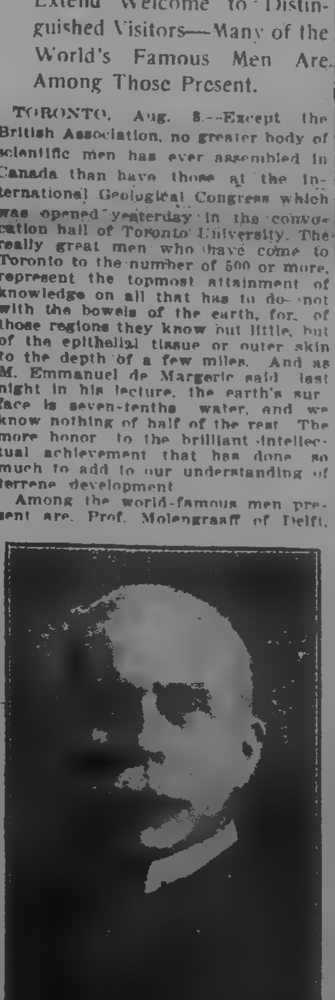
A hot wave seems to be sweeping over the country, and the suffering among the poor will be severe. The poor live in small, poorly ventilated rooms, where the fresh air and breezes never enter. Only the merciless heat of the sun makes its way in and causes sickness and death. Ice would aid them. It would help cool them and preserve their food, but they cannot afford it and they must suffer. In the east side of New York ice is given free to the poor. This is made possible by contributions from the people.

THE GEOLOGICAL EXPERTS BEGIN THEIR CONVENTION

Sir Charles Fitzpatrick, Hon. W. H. Hearst and Pres. Falconer Extend Welcome to Distinguished Visitors—Many of the World's Famous Men Are Among Those Present.

TORONTO, Aug. 8.—Except the British Association, no greater body of scientific men has ever assembled in Canada than have those at the International Geological Congress which was opened yesterday in the convocation hall of Toronto University. The really great men who have come to Toronto to the number of 500 or more, represent the topmost attainment of knowledge on all that has to do not with the bowels of the earth, for, of those regions they know but little, but of the epithelial tissue or outer skin to the depth of a few miles. And as M. Emmanuel de Margerie said last night in his lecture, the earth's surface is seven-tenths water, and we know nothing of half of the rest. The more honor to the brilliant intellectual achievement that has done so much to add to our understanding of terrene development.

Among the world-famous men present are, Prof. Molengraaff of Delft,



FRANK D. ADAMS, F.R.S., McGill University, president of twelfth session.

Holland, where general achievements as a geologist place him in the highest rank; Prof. Reid of Johns Hopkins, an eminent seismologist; Aubrey Strahan, a leader in English science; P. M. Termier, a specialist in archaean work from France; Tadasu Hiki, with the new light from Japan; Dr. Sederholm, director of the geological survey of Finland, who wishes to study our archaean formations and compare them with the Finnish; Dr. Weigel of Germany; Dr. Tietze, the great palaeontologist, from Vienna; Dr. Hague, the oldest member of the U.S. survey; Dr. Anstor of the German survey; Prof. Cole, the brilliant Dublin authority; besides hundreds of others from the two score or so of countries represented. Nor is Canada without a voice. The land in which Logan and Dawson have gained renown, maintains the tradition in the persons of Coleman, Miller, Adams and others, who size up well with the best of the visitors. Prof. Coleman is to lay two papers before the sections, one on the classification of the Archaean in the interglacial formations of Toronto, and one even more important geologically, on the separation of a new series of strata between the Huronian and the Keewatin, which he calls the "Sudbury." The differentiation he bases on stratigraphical grounds and not on fossil evidence. For the general public it may do more than add a few million years to the age of the earth, whose antiquity is judged by the number of suits of clothes it has worn.

The visitors were welcomed in the morning by Sir Charles Fitzpatrick on behalf of the Dominion, while Hon. W. H. Hearst, for the province, the acting mayor for the city and the president for the university conveyed salutations.

Acknowledgments were made by Dr. Helges Baeckstroem, Sweden, and Dr. Tietze, Austria.

FALLS TO HIS DEATH

Hamilton Man Thrown to Ground by Breaking of Hoist.

HAMILTON, Friday, Aug. 8.—While working on the east end branch of the Hamilton Bridge Works plant about 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon, William Sullivan, 22 North Park st., fell a distance of 40 feet and died about three minutes afterwards. Sullivan was riding to the top of the building on a hoist when it broke, both falling to the ground. The man's arms were both broken and he was badly bruised about the head and died as a result of his injuries. He had no relatives in Hamilton, but has a brother in Montana, who has been notified of the accident. An inquest will be held this morning.

Marriage Is Annulled.

MONTREAL, Aug. 7.—(Can. Press.)—Judge Demers, in judgment handed down in the local courts, has declared the marriage of Jessimina Lapello and Luigi Taddeo, alias Ross, Italians, at St. Patrick's Church, Toronto, in 1903, to be null and void because the husband at the time already had a wife, whom he had married in Worcester, Mass., in 1901, and whom he had left prior to his going to Toronto. The first wife procured a divorce.

Eagle Carries Off Child.

GENEVA, Switzerland, Aug. 7.—(Can. Press.)—An enormous eagle today carried off the four-year-old child of a woodcutter while it was playing near him when he was working in the forest in the vicinity of the village of Ander, not far from Chur. A large body of hunters, accompanied by dogs, set off to the rescue of the child, but were unable to find any traces of the eagle or its prey.

GERMANY PLEASED

British Naval Plans Have Been Altered, Say Germans.

BERLIN, Aug. 7.—(Can. Press.)—In reviewing the decision of the British Government to station several cruisers at Bermuda, Captain Persius, the naval expert of The Tageblatt, sees the first breach in Lord Fisher's policy of concentrating every available ship of the British navy in home waters, and an indication of the waning of the tense Anglo-German rivalry which has kept the two nations on the verge of war for a decade.

From this point of view Captain Persius finds the action of the British admiralty of more importance to Germany than to the United States. He says Germany also may take similar steps of deconcentration. He believes that in general the decision was dictated more by the desire to show the British flag than by actual necessity.

The Taglich-Rundschau today publishes a story referring to the possibility of Germany modifying its naval program in view of the acceleration of construction of three battleships of the British navy, recently announced by Winston Spencer Churchill. The German admiralty, however, says there is no question of such action.

ARREST IN MAIL BAG ROBBERY

Government Detectives Land Suspect At Sudbury

Kingston, Aug. 7.—Henry Merrick, post office inspector at Kingston, received a message yesterday afternoon that a man named Jack O'Brien had been arrested at Sudbury in connection with the sensational mail bag robbery which occurred at the G.T.R. outer station here early on the morning of January 22nd, of last year.

The arrest was made by Government detectives, who have been working steadily on the case ever since the robbery occurred. O'Brien is a former resident of Kingston. A detective will arrive in Kingston on Thursday with the prisoner.

The mail bag was stolen while lying on a truck awaiting to be transferred to the train going east. The bag contained letters and cheques. The police were not notified until several hours after the robbery took place, and a short distance east of the station they found a small pile of cheques scattered about. At the old stone quarry a pile of burned paper was found and a small fire still smouldering.

Pavlova Hit Partner.

LONDON, Aug. 8.—While Pavlova and partner, Novikoff, were dancing at the Palace Theatre tonight, Pavlova suddenly struck her companion. Novikoff immediately left the stage. Pavlova then also went off by the opposite wing. The orchestra finished the piece to an empty stage.

As far as the audience could see, there was nothing to explain Pavlova's extraordinary action.

Duchess Recovering.

LONDON, Aug. 7.—(C.A.P.)—Enquiry at Cowes shows that the Duchess of Connaught was much better yesterday, and there is every reason to believe that she will be able to make the journey on the royal yacht to Sweden next week. Major Worthington denies the statement that Sir Arbuthnot Lane was summoned to Cowes on Tuesday morning.

No Canteen in Brantford.

BRANTFORD, Aug. 7.—(Special.)—There will be no canteen in the new armory building in Brantford for the 25th Brant Dragoons and Field Battery. Such was the intimation made today by Lt.-Col. F. Muir, commanding officer, who expressed himself as a strong supporter of the dry Niagara camp as inaugurated by the minister of militia. "If it works to advantage at Niagara, why should it not be a good thing in an armory building?" said the colonel.

Heroine Saves Child.

KINGSTON, Aug. 7.—(Special.)—Miss Irene Mullinger, a daughter of Police Constable Thomas Mullinger, proved herself a heroine at Wolfe Island, when she jumped in the river and saved a 4-year-old child from drowning. The little tot was wading in the water and was swept out by the waves. Miss Mullinger, who was standing on the shore, jumped in with all her clothes on.

Will Buy Pulmotor.

BRANTFORD, Aug. 7.—(Special.)—Brantford will buy a pulmotor, according to Mayor Hartman here today. There have been no less than three drowning accidents in the Grand River in this city this year, besides several near fatalities when a pulmotor could have been used to advantage.

NEW REGULATIONS OF EDUCATION DEPARTMENT

The Ontario Department of Education has sent out the regulations regarding the use of text books in the Separate, Public and High schools and the Collegiate Institutes of the Province.

These point out that High School French grammar used prior to June 30, of this year, must be superseded by the revised High School French grammar of September next, if the Board of Trustees in the different schools do not authorize the use of the old book before the opening of the schools in September. The old grammar may be used under such authority of the Boards until July, 1915 after which date it must be discarded. A note of warning is sent out to the principals of the High schools directing attention to this clause of the regulations.

CHEAPER ANYWAY.

In the revised edition of this grammar the French reader is eliminated. The new book will cost 60 cents, as against $1. The reader in connection with it will cost 11 cents. There will be from 6,000 to 8,000 of these grammars and readers in use.

These notices are being sent to the principals of the High schools partly as a protection to the book sellers, and to prevent the stocking up of books for which there will be no sale.

For this reason notice is given of the revised edition of the Public school spelling book, which will come into use July 1914. This book will be the same price as now, 15 cents, but will be somewhat smaller. The present book is thought to be needlessly large.

BUY YOUR OWN BOOKS.

The option is given boards of trustees under the new regulations of purchasing the readers in history, geography and hygiene for the schools or compelling the children to provide these books themselves. The hygiene readers cost 25 cents, geography readers 50 cents and history readers 35 cents.

Under the old regulations the boards of trustees were compelled to purchase so many of these books for use of the scholars, but in some districts this regulation has been regarded as a hardship and under the new rules has been relaxed so as to permit the trustees to compel the children to provide their own readers for the third form.

HISTORY BELATED.

There are no changes in any of the other books to be used. The Ontario High School History of Canada, which was to be ready in September, will likely be somewhat later owing to the care necessary in the revision and arrangement of the material for the book.

The department will insist upon the regulations being followed and will withold the grant upon the recommendation of the inspectors, from schools which use unauthorized text books.

N.Y. STATE GOVERNOR'S FUNDS UNDER SCRUTINY

Political Opponents of Democratic Chief Executives Promise Startling Revelations After a Probe Into Source of Sulzer's Sinews of War in the Recent Campaign.

NEW YORK, Aug. 7.—Gov. William Sulzer may be impeached at an early date.

The governor and his opponents in the Democratic wing of the state legislature have been at war for months. Recently the legislature named a committee to investigate the governor. At present it is revealing astounding things in connection with the funds contributed to elect Sulzer governor. Under oath he reported, as the law requires, that $5460 was the aggregate of contributions. The committee is showing contributions far in excess of this, none of which was reported, and, in addition, Sulzer's bank account grew more than $30,000 during the campaign. It is asserted by members of this committee that the funds raised by the governor was nearly $75,000.

Convinced that the investigation of Sulzer's alleged stock gambling undertakings and hidden campaign contributions has reached a point where only two or three further hearings will be needed to prove official as well as moral obliquity, the investigating committee is on the eve of formulating plans for the removal of Mr. Sulzer from office. Whether the committee will recommend the governor's impeachment or seek his removal thru the agency of indictment and criminal prosecution is a question hinging on developments at a hearing to be held tomorrow morning, and possible final committee sessions in Albany next week.

The sudden, tho not unexpected determination to "get quick action," as Counsel Richards expressed it, followed today's hearing.

The one big and highly essential develaopment of today was the frank admission of Philip Boyer of the defunct brokerage firm of Boyer, Griswold & Co., that the campaign cheque for $500 given Mr. Sulzer by John Lynn of New York was thru his former brokerage house and was deposited by the firm on Oct. 16, 1912.

During this month, according to the recollection of Mr. Boyer, Frederick H. Colwell of Yonkers, alleged by the committee to be agent for Gov. Sulzer in his stock speculations, bought of Boyer, Griswold & Co., 100 shares of Big Four Railroad stock.

It was maintained before the committee yesterday that Gov. Sulzer, on Oct. 12, 1912, opened an account with Fuller & Gray, brokers, of No. 71 Broadway, and purchased outright 200 shares of Big Four stock.

If this firm's books are produced today, perhaps it will be shown that the Lynn cheque went in part payment for the 100 shares of Big Four bought by Colwell. If this is proved there will no longer exist any question that money contributed to the Sulzer campaign fund was used for speculating in Wall street. Such use of campaign money, the committee asserts, constitutes larceny.

SECRETARY TELLS

Ex-Employe of Manufacturers Gives Away Their Secrets.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 7.—(Can. Press.)—The internal workings of the National Association of Manufacturers were explained to the house lobby committee today by James L. Ewell, formerly manager of a trade publication issued in connection with the organization. The witness went at great length into several internal dissensions that disturbed the organization and attacked rather bitterly some of its officials, particularly J. P. Bird, who, he declared, treated him unfairly in discharging him from the employ of the association.

Little of Ewell's testimony bore on the legislative activities of the association, altho he did describe two conversations between Bird and Col. Martin M. Mulhall, at which he was present.

"On one occasion," he said, "I knew there was a tremendous fight on in the district of Representative Hughes of New Jersey. I was talking to Mr. Bird when Mr. Mulhall came into the room. In his characteristic way he shouted: 'Well, I could have done better if I had more money. I didn't have enough money to buy them. I think I did damn well with the money I had, don't you?'"

On another occasion Ewell said he heard Mulhall demand $2500 from Bird "for working Washington." Bird promised him the money, the witness declared. Ewell told the committee of the circumstances of the resignation of Marshall Cushing as secretary of the National Association of Manufacturers. He said that Cushing declined to tell the officers and directors the details of the expenditure of money in a campaign to re-elect Representative Littlefield for Maine.

"They wanted to know just what he did with the money he had," said Ewell. "He said that he thought that it wouldn't do him or the directors any good if he told them. He told me he went the limit to secure Littlefield's election. He wouldn't tell the directors, so he resigned."

Ewell was still under examination when adjournment was taken.

Strike Scare Is Over.

MONCTON, N. B., Aug. 7.—(Can. Press.)—"There will be no strike on the Intercolonial Railway, and the men will be satisfied with their treatment by the management of the road." This statement was made today by A. R. Mosher, president of the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway Employes.

Mr. Mosher and committees representing the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway Employes have been in conference all day with Mr. Gutelius, general manager of the I. C. R.

FIRE AT BRIDGEWATER; VILLAGE HOTEL BURNT

Five Horses Perish—One Man Reported Burnt While Sleeping in Barn.

TWEED, Aug. 8—Fire started at two o'clock this morning which destroyed the Chapelle Hotel and barns with five horses and all other contents of buildings, at Actinolite. Unconfirmed report says one man is burned to death who was sleeping in a barn. Cause unkown. Insuance partly coves loss.

The village of Actinolite is about five miles north of Tweed and is better known as Bridgewater. This is the name under which it was famous in the prosperous days of the late Senator Billa Flint.

LATER—3.40 p.m.—A special message to The Review from Actinolite says that no man was burned only three horses perished in the barns.

There is now nothing of the hotel and barns standing, all being swept away by the fire.

KICKED INJURED GIRL

Inhuman Mother Angry Because Child Was Hurt by Auto.

TORONTO, Aug 8.—Because she got in the way of a wagon while playing in the road and had her toes crushed, little Anna Cullvick, 109 Portland street, was kicked, beaten and abused by her mother until two neighbors who had brought her into the house took the child from the crazed mother and carried her to the University Mission on Adelaide street.

The little child, who is only 6 years old, had been playing in front of her home when a wagon knocked her down and ran over her, grinding all the toes on her right foot to a pulp. Two neighbors carried her into her home. The mother, incensed to think that the child should get in the way of a wagon, started to kick her on the body.

The neighbors, after the girl had been subjected to such ill usage, took her from the unnatural mother, and the little one was taken to the Sick Children's Hospital in the police ambulance.

AUTO ACCIDENTS

The auto accident which resulted in the death of Mr. L. B. Thomas, of Toronto, the other day, should raise some discussion in motor circles as to the rules of the road in regard to the passing of other vehicles.

In this case it seems that the driver of the auto sacrificed himself to save the rig and its occupant who was either oblivious of the approach of the car or deliberately tried to make the auto pull up.

That there are persons foolish enough to "dare" autoists on the road one only need ride a little way in an auto to discover. On the other hand there are autoists who are too daring, and when they get going at a good speed the joyous thrill of "going some" tempts them to take chances; and it is to be feared that some drivers rather enjoy and boast about negotiating a risky situation.

All autoists should realize that a car is a very dangerous machine, and is only permitted on the public highway on sufferance. Speed for its own sake amounts to selfishness when there are other people on the road, and when there is the least possibility of danger.

From all such accidents as the one in question, autoists and drivers of other vehicles ought to profit. The lesson in this case seems to point to the necessity of, at least, slowing down when approaching anything on the road.

More care and less selfishness on the part of some autoists would tend to command more respect and less dread and hatred among the general public. Only yesterday the news came of the death of the ten year old son of a friend through being knocked down almost in front of his own door, by an automobile. Such a swift and terrible end to a dear young life is all the more mortifying and embittering when one reflects that with a little more care and thought for others, the boy's life might have been spared.

EAST AND WEST

The harvesting of the Western wheat is soon to begin, and if all goes well, it promises to be the finest crop ever known in Canada. We in the East know little of what these prodigious crops mean. Farmers in Ontario have no thought of the world's market when they are raising grain, save in so far as it goes toward the feeding of pork and the making of butter and cheese.

Out West the golden grain represents immediate return in golden coin, gold for gold. In the East the golden grain has to undergo certain long and laborious processes and become golden butter and cheese before it yields the precious metal. But some would sooner stay East on the dairy farm, though it is a little slower and does not yield such large profits. Kipling's lines may be true even in Canada.—

"East is East and West is West, and never the twain shall meet."

THE BUILDING OF WORLDS

Some interesting facts ought to be brought to light at the Geological Convention, which is being held in Toronto. Canada is one of the most interesting countries in the world from a geological point of view, and is "undeveloped" in this respect as in others.

Already it is well known that some of the oldest rock in the world is to be found in Ontario. One of the delegates to the convention told a reporter that Canada used to be many hundred feet higher than it is to-day. And that the Indian Ocean now flows over a submerged continent named Lemuria.

It is also supposed that a great ledge of rock found in the centre of the Atlantic Ocean was at one time above the sea level and was the continent Atlantis, fifty miles wide and one thousand miles long.

All of this may not be of any practical interest to a man in the real estate business, but it makes one stop and wonder at the mighty work of the Founder and Builder of Worlds.

This ought to be the spirit of all research,

"Let knowledge grow from more to more,
But more of reverence in us dwell."

EDITORIAL NOTES

Mr. Alfred Noyes, the young English poet who was mentioned in connection with the Laureateship, has never been to Canada, and yet he seems to know something about our city, or at least some of the ladies in the district, for he sings in a recent poem:

"She is gayer than a child!
Let your torches droop for sorrow—
Laughter in her eyes ran wild!
Carry her down to Peterboro'."

It may be, of course, that Mr. Noyes is thinking of the other Peterboro' in England. He ought at least have said so.

Horticulturalist is a long name for a Canadian to use, and besides it takes up a lot of ink; but the gentlemen who attended the convention in Peterborough would object to being called Hortoists, notwithstanding the fact that they enjoyed the auto rides around the city.

A child was locked in a pantry for four days in East Chicago, the poor little thing was pale and starving when let out. It was in a vacant house. This ought to be a lesson to boys who are too fond of the pantry.

EXCERPTS

MY AUTOMOBILE.

I.

When first I owned an auto,
In the palmy days of yore,
I ran it with a rapture
I had never known before.
For autos were infrequent,
And all the neighbors said,
"A wonderful young fellow,
With a great financial head."

When first I owned an auto
And I tried to pay my debts
The storekeepers reproached me
With politely voiced regrets.
I lived sublime on credit,
With diversions and to spare,
And every one predicted
I would be a millionaire.

II.

When first I owned an auto
('Twas a month ago or more)
I drove it with depression
I had never felt before.
For autos now are common,
And all the neighbors said,
"He's just like all the others,
Sold and mortgaged to the head."

When last I owned an auto
Every tradesman, with a bow,
Remarked with much politeness
That I'd better pay him now.
My poorest neighbor snubbed me
As he mentioned, with a sneer,
"I notice that your auto
Is a model of last year."

New Porch Rug.

The time for open air entertaining is here, and for this reason interest is increasing in those things that tend to add to its charm. One of these is a new lawn and veranda rug, which is woven out of Cape Cod grass fiber, the fiber being in cord form, both thick and durable. It is woven in soft colors that give a parquetry floor effect. Being impervious to water, it may be spread upon the lawn to protect guests from dampness and yet not be injured from moisture. It also makes an excellent veranda and cottage rug.

There is also a French porch rug, oval, octagonal or elliptical in shape, made of fiber, which has an openwork scallop border that is very attractive. It comes in many sizes and shapes.

Difficulties of the Naturalist.

At one end or the other of every animal lies a danger which makes the closest investigation impossible. To study the mule we must hold him by the head, but to study the bull we must have a tail hold as a vantage point.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Plenty of Change.

Fashionable Physician—What you really need is a change of climate. The Patient—Change of climate! Why, I've never had anything else! I've lived in New York all my life.—Life.

Defined.

"Pa, what is a receiver?"

"A receiver, my son, is a man who winds up a business after it has run down."—Boston Transcript.

After a scandal gets started the brakes always refuse to work.—Chicago Record-Herald.

Because of the foolish people who crowd the world one dares not say much on the subject for fear of being personal.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

To The Editor of The Review

Sir— No apology is needed I hope for introducing a quotation from a Catholic journal into The Review. The Catholic Register, in its able editorial of last Thursday, lays down the course of conduct for Catholics and others in future. There must be no more mealy-mouthed nonsense from the "great unwashed!" The following tells us what to do clearly and logically it seems to me:—

"The hoary error of Liberty of Conscience is the root of the trouble. This liberty has been wrongly interpreted, and, of course, wrongly acted upon. Legislators have misunderstood conscience to be the infallible dictator of faith and morals. Conscience has, especially, nothing whatever to do with faith, excepting that, where faith is true, conscience is a willing pupil of the right and logical code of morality instilled by that faith, of which it demands that the soul informed by it must submit. It stands to reason that when people go wrong in their faith, they also have erroneous consciences, and consequently, unsound morals. This has been the Church's way of excusing the material evil such people commit. The unwittingly erroneous are open to denunciation, and also to punishment if denunciation alone will not correct them. Ethics warrant this. But what shall we say of those who are both materially and formally sinful, who recognize their crime and thrive upon it? CLEARLY THERE IS ARGUMENT FOR PHYSICAL CURTAILMENT OF SUCH."

Yours,

"CONSTANT READER"

FORTY THOUSAND MEN REQUIRED

Farm Laborers' Excursions—This Year's Wheat Crop Will Be the Largest in the History of Canada.

The wheat crop of 1913 will be the greatest ever harvested in Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta, thus requiring the farm laborers of the East to recruit and assist in harvesting the World's greatest bread basket.

The Governments of the respective Provinces state that forty thousand men will be required for this year's harvest. These will have to be principally recruited from Ontario, and the prosperity of Canada depends on securing labor promptly. The Canadian Pacific, on which Company will fall practically the entire task of transporting the men to the West, is already making special arrangements for this year. Excursions from points in Ontario to Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta will be run, and special trains operated, making the trip in about thirty-six hours and avoiding any change of cars or transfers. This will be a day shorter than any other route.

"Going Trip West," $10.00 to Winnipeg, plus half-cent per mile from Winnipeg up to MacLeod, Calgary or Edmonton.

"Return Trip East," $18.00 to Winnipeg; plus half-cent per mile from all points east of MacLeod, Calgary or Edmonton, to Winnipeg.

Going Dates.—August 18th —From all stations Kingston to Renfrew inclusive and east thereof in Ontario.

August 22nd—From Toronto and West on Grand Trunk Main Line to Sarnia inclusive and south thereof.

August 25th—From Toronto and North Western Ontario, north of but not including Grand Trunk Line Toronto to Sarnia and east of Toronto to Sarnia and east of Toronto to Kingston, Sharbot Lake and Renfrew, including these points.

September 3rd—From Toronto and all stations in Ontario East of but not including Grand Trunk Line Toronto to North Bay.

September 5th—From all stations on Grand Trunk Line Toronto to North Bay inclusive and west thereof in Ontario including C.P.R. Line Sudbury to Sault Ste. Marie Ontario, but not including Azilda and west.

Don't Poison Baby.

FORTY YEARS AGO almost every mother thought her child must have PAREGORIC or laudanum to make it sleep. These drugs will produce sleep, and A FEW DROPS TOO MANY will produce the SLEEP FROM WHICH THERE IS NO WAKING. Many are the children who have been killed or whose health has been ruined for life by paregoric, laudanum and morphine, each of which is a narcotic product of opium. Druggists are prohibited from selling either of the narcotics named to children at all, or to anybody without labelling them "poison." The definition of "narcotic" is: "A medicine which relieves pain and produces sleep, but which in poisonous doses produces stupor, coma, convulsions and death." The taste and smell of medicines containing opium are disguised, and sold under the names of "Drops," "Cordials," "Soothing Syrups," etc. You should not permit any medicine to be given to your children without you or your physician know of what it is composed. CASTORIA DOES NOT CONTAIN NARCOTICS, if it bears the signature of Chas. H. Fletcher.

The Best Detective Story of the Last Ten Years

Britz, of Headquarters, did not waste any time in gloating over the result of his interview with the Brahmin. In the first place, he did not consider that he had scored anything like a signal victory. He knew enough of the subtleties of the Orient to be aware that such grains of truth as had come to him in the Swami's answers had been merged into a voluminous fabric of mendacity—well, call it diplomacy—and that to winnow out the facts vouchsafed to him was a task for the cloistered seclusion of his own room, supplemented by the silent help of many books of reference. But he was ready to take it for granted that the Brahmin had spoken truly in regard to the difficulty of imitating diamonds of great size. There was no question the Maharanee had been copied; how closely he could not say, as he had unfortunately never had a glimpse of the false stone. The questions that gimleted their way into his brain were: Where was the copying done; how was it done; and, of course, correlatively, by whom was it done?

He walked from the mysterious house only as far as the first corner; turning that, he jumped into a taxicab and, half an hour later, strolled into his private office in Police Headquarters. On the way to his room he passed Manning. The Chief of Detectives, in a waistcoat more than audible and pink-and-white striped shirt sleeves embroidered with a glorified monogram, was seated at his desk wading through a stack of reports from his subordinates, in writing that ranged from that of a grammar school to the sign manual of illiteracy.

"What's new?" he called to Britz.

The lieutenant shook his head. "Very little," he answered.

"Still working on that line?" inquired Manning, permitting himself the luxury of a slightly sarcastic inflection. He was not over fond of Britz, perhaps as no departmental head ever feels really cordial toward a too capable second-in-command. In his direction of the Bureau he needed the shrew sleuth's brain, and so it was seldom he risked offending him. The faint asperity of his superior's tone was not lost upon Britz, but he ignored it.

"Yes," he said, pausing near the threshold for a second ere he went to his way to the other room, "I propose to fight it out on that line if it takes all winter!"

Manning grinned.

It was a busy quarter of an hour Detective-Lieutenant Britz passed in his Mulberry Street office. Awaiting him was a cablegram from Logan, saying briefly he was trailing all the workmen who had taken part in the manufacture of the paste Missioner necklace, and that none of them had left Paris.

Britz frowned slightly as he read the message, then with a heavy fountain pen that fairly raced over the paper, and, addressing his far-away assistant by his cable word, he wrote:

"Logan, Paris. Was Mahranee made there, too?"

Britz tapped a bell and looked up as a Headquarters patrolman opened the door.

"Rush this down to the Western Union office," he said. "Take it yourself, and see that it goes at once."

Then as he saw a question struggling for escape from the bluecoat's muscle-bound intelligence, he added:

"No, don't send it over our loop; take it right down to 195 Broadway, and take it yourself; and, what's more, take it right away; don't let there be any mistake about this."

The patrolman saluted stiffly, and Britz swung his feet to the leaf of his desk. The lieutenant took from his pocket a cigar, black and clumsy enough to indicate its value to any connoisseur; made his teeth meet with a savage crunch in one end, struck a match with a rasp that evidently was a slight outlet for his emotions, and smoked studiously. He had learned something in the course of the last twenty-four hours. First was the fact that Griswold was a master of the pencil; and next came the knowledge that men who would stop at nothing, even in the heart of New York, were on the alert for somebody they anticipated would come out of the Missioner house.

An equally interesting point in connection with these men was that they were not of the West. Britz's memory was a criminal directory of Manhattan. He had at his thoughts' ends a picture of every crook who had ever been caught on the island. Desperate as many of them were, and daring as not a few of them had shown themselves to be, he recalled vividly several instances that had gripped the attention of specialists in many lines, and there was not one among them, he felt sure, who would have dared the abduction of a valuable man in that particular way and in that particular place. The deed had been committed unquestionably by a band of desperadoes from another land. They came from some mysterious country where midnight crimes on occasion braved noonday achievement. Now, it hardly would pay the Hindoo ruffians, however expert, to become pioneers of their peculiar brand of crime in a place so distant from the scenes of their normal operations unless they were inspired by a purpose big enough to attract them the width of the world, and make them pursue it in indifference to the probability of their safe return. Undoubtedly, New York at that moment was the unconscious possessor of about as enterprising a band of thugs as Hindostan could produce; but those thugs had not come to establish thuggee as one of America's protected industries. They were here for a specific object, and in the clarity of the great sleuth's intelligence, that object showed forth luminously—they were here for the Maharanee diamond.

The Swami had done his best to deceive him. It went without saying the Brahmin was connected in some way with the acts of the low-caste Hindoos, and, moreover, even in the darkness of the hall in the Missioner house, Britz had not failed to recognize the swart and sinister features of the man Ali. Of Kananda, Britz as yet knew nothing. That anglicized potentate had absented himself from the scholar's room throughout the detective's visit, and Nandy so far forgot the club ethics he had learned in London as to peer and listen through portieres of the inner doorway; but Britz did not know this. The Headquarters man was convinced, however that the Swami had cognizance of—even if he did not actually direct—the attempt upon his liberty. He guessed, too, that it was by accident he was whirled away from the park path, instead of a man the Orientals evidently considered it worth their while to capture and search.

True, he was not much closer to isolation of the germs of suspicion that sprouted in his mind in regard to Sands, Griswold, Blodgett, and Ali. Motives for the theft were easy to conjecture in the cases of three of them, but how to account for its achievement by any one of the four was something that still puzzled the acute mentality of him whom the Swami had called "New York's cleverest detective."

Where was the Maharanee made? How could it have been made? He saw no reason for deception on the part of the Swami in that regard. If the priest wished merely to hide from his visitor his interest in a priceless diamond, nothing would be more natural than for him to admit the possibility of such a jewel being false. Britz believed the Swami to be sincere in saying he knew of no one in any European capital who could fashion a duplicate of the giant diamond.

It was when his thoughts were tangled in the tighest of knots in that line that a card was brought to him by the twin brother of the heavy-footed bluecoat who even then was supposedly on his way to the Western Union office with the cable to Logan.

"Show him in," said Britz after a glance at the name; and, as his visitor entered, he swung his feet from the desk, advancing halfway to the door and extended his hand cordially.

"How are you, doctor?" he said. "I hope I see you cheerful."

A wan smile broke the fixity of the doctor's countenance for an instant, and he shook his head slightly.

"I don't see how there can be any cheer for me," he said, "as long as that poor girl is a prisoner in the Tombs. When are we going to get her out?"

"I know just how you feel about it, doctor," said Britz sympathetically, "but you'll have to leave that in my hands for the present. Miss Holcomb must stay where she is a while longer."

"But surely," persisted the physician, "it cannot be necessary to leave her there forever to establish her innocence. You know she is guiltless, I know it, Mrs. Missioner knows it, and it would not take much to bring all her acquaintances to the same view. Why must we wait?"

"My dear fellow," said the detective, "you forget that a large proportion of our fellowmen are not prepared to believe anything of the kind. In the eyes of the public your fiancée is the only person who can be suspected of having stolen Mrs. Missioner's jewels. All the circumstantial evidence points in her direction; in fact, as far as the public knows, she was caught red-handed. Bear in mind my esteemed colleagues are not given to over-modesty. You may depend on it, they've filled up the Headquarters reporters with big stories about their discovery of one of the diamonds in Miss Holcomb's room. Trust Donnelly for that."

"Oh, what do I care about the public!" cried Fitch. "What has it done for us? What does the public amount to, anyhow? What's the use of talking to me about the public? All I'm thinking about is the fact that a girl who has never harmed anybody in her life is locked up in the Tombs with jailbirds and felons of every kind! It's enough to make a criminal out of a parson! And with nothing to sustain her except the hope of what you and I may do to get her out; and here we are dragging along, digging out facts inch by inch like a pair of relic-hunters prodding the ruins of Herculaneum!"

The usually mild-mannered physician was goaded to rudeness by the imperturbability of the thief-taker who confronted him. He started to fling himself in a chair, then brought himself up roundly, and with a quick step reached the detective's desk. Planting his fists upon it with force that drove the blood from his knuckles he looked the lieutenant directly in the eyes and asked:

"Are you playing fair with me, Britz? Are you really trying to clear my fiancée of all this horrible mass of false evidence which has been collected about her? Are you really, deep down inside of you, convinced of her innocence—are you as convinced as I am?"

A steady look was the only response. Britz was a man who made his words his servants. He saw no reason for multiplying them now against the perfectly natural impetuosity of Miss Holcomb's lover.

"My God, man! It's not possible you're playing with me in a case like this?" Fitch continued. "You wouldn't use me as a tool to build up a case against that girl? It cannot be you have permitted yourself to think she is guilty, and that you hope, by keeping me on the string, to get information about her you could not get anywhere else. Why, that would b— it's too damnable to think of!"

The sleuth's look never wavered. His cool, gray eyes projected their self-possession through the doctor's excitement into the inner justice chamber of his brain. Fitch gazed into them a few moments longer; then the tension of his knuckles relaxed, his eyes fell away from the lieutenant's, and, turning slightly, he suddenly and rather weakly sat on the edge of the desk.

"I'm sorry I broke out like that, old man," he said. "Of course, you're acting in good faith. It is not conceivable that any man of your stamp could be guilty of double-dealing with two persons as helpless to protect themselves in a case like this as are Miss Holcomb and myself. But, by all the gods! this long-drawn out uncertainty is enough to shatter anybody's nerves. It is playing havoc with mine. It's knocking all my experiments, my ambitions, my very practice itself into several kinds of a cocked hat. How much longer can I do anything, think of anything, plan anything while Miss Holcomb rests under such a suspicion and is subject to such daily, hourly, and momentary wretchedness as I know she suffers in that infernal hole! You are asking too much of flesh and blood!"

"Now, doctor," said Britz, lowering himself gently into a revolving chair, and restoring his carefully polished feet to their comfortable position on the desk leaf, "let us be reasonable. You say I expect too much of you. Now, what do you expect of me? Do you think that I am the whole Russian Secret Service system rolled into one? Are you jollying yourself with the idea that I'm a Turkish Grand Vizier with all the genii at my command? You know very well I am doing the best I can with the material the Department appropriation permits. I have taken the pick of the force, but only a few of my assistants have anything on their shoulders. You cannot drive dubs."

Fitch nodded impatiently.

Students For Peace.

A war and peace society has recently been formed at Manchester University, the inaugural meeting being held in the women's debating hall recently, when Prof. Unwin delivered an address on "England and Germany; the historic root of the trouble."

Norman Angell's book, "The Great Illusion," has been the chief inspiration in the forming of this society, the objects of which are as follows:

1. To gather and distribute information with regard to the economic futility to armed aggression.
2. To consider the problem of defence.
3. To consider the means of settling international disputes without war.
4. To discourage the use of misleading terminology in the discussion of international relations.
5. To establish communication with similar societies in British and foreign universities.

Cloud Records.

Making 100,000 records of clouds observed at Epsom, Eng., in the eight years ending 1910, S. C. Russell has found that cumulus cloud occurred on 1,622 days, the greatest number, and stratus on 1,155. The upper clouds, including cirrus, cirrostratus, and cirromacula, were very prevalent in summer, with minima in winter; and all showed morning and evening maxima. Intermediate clouds—cirro-cumulus, alto-cumulus — were also more common in summer. Lower forms—strato-cumulus, nimbus, fracto-nimbus, fracto-cumulus, stratus, and fog are most frequent in winter. Clouds of diurnal ascending currents—cumulus and cumulo-nimbus—have maxima at noon and 3 p.m. in every month irrespective of season.

ADVERTISING

A STORE'S importance is rightly judged by its advertising. Not altogether by the size of the advertisement, but by size and tone, and quality of announcement.

What the store has to say is one thing. Quite as important is how it says it.

Given that the clerical force is competent and up-to-date, it will say, over the counter, the very best to be said in reference to the goods enquired for. It may, and should, suggest other goods, not in the customers view.

This implies that the customer is in the store. But what brings him or her there? The wish to buy and the belief it is a good place to buy at.

How is this learned of?

By advertising. The advertisement is a message, an intelligent middleman, doing service between seller and buyer. The space talks to thousands, even while the store is closed for the night.

Use The REVIEW and tell the story of your store and its opportunities for good service.

TOLD DIFFERENT STORY TO COURT

Blacklister did not get Liquor at Post Office.

Robert Irwin was re-arraigned before Acting Magistrate Rush this morning at Police Court, on the charge of being drunk while on the prohibited list, refusing to tell who supplied him with liquor. At the last session of the Court Irwin said he got it from the Post Office, where it had been sent by a Thos. Moore, of Hastings. This morning he admitted this was not correct, and that he got it from a man here in the city. Chief Thompson is still suspicious of the man, and as a result he was given another 8 days' remand.

Chief Thompson—"What is it you want to tell me this morning?"

Defendant—"Nothing, except that I got the liquor from Thomas Moore.

Irwin admitted giving Moore the money to get the liquor.

Chief Thompson—"How long have you known Moore?"

Defendant—"Oh. I don't know him very well. He told me his home was in Hastings."

Chief Thompson—"Do you see the man in court?"

After a long look Irwin failed to to recognize his man.

"It happened that a man named Moore was standing in court at the time, but he wasn't Irwin's friend.

Defendant—He didn't know my name, and I didn't know his, except that I heard him called Moore by some men on the street.

Chief Thompson—"How was he dressed?"

Defendant—"Oh, he was just dressed in an ordinry rough tweed suit."

Chief Thompson—"Look here, Bob, that's about as true as you tell us about the 'cock and bull' story of the Post Office."

Acting Magistrate Rush—"Then tht story about the Post Office was false?"

Defendant—"Yes, your honor."

Chief Thompson—"I am satisfied that/this man knows where he got his liquor, and all the rest of these blacklisters who get liquor. I guess we had better remand Bob for another eight days. His head may be clearer by that time."

Acting Magistrate Rush—"Remember, you are on your oath."

Defendant—"Well, your honor, you might as well give me the true now, for I can't tell you anything different."

Irwin wasn't sure, but thought that Moore was a lumberman."

ADAM NOT THE FIRST MAN

Dr. R. A. Torrey Brings Forward a New Theory.

PHILADELPHIA., Aug. 7 — Was Adam the first man? For centuries mankind has believed he was. Adam and Eve were the father and mother of the human race. This is the biblical record and men have accepted it from time immemorial.

Now the Rev. Dr. Reuben A. Torrey, the evangelist comes forward with a new theory. He says Adam was not the first man; that Adam and Eve were created by God after the existence of a pre-Adamite race, whose sins brought down the catastrophe upon this planet, causing it to be laid waste. Following that catastrophe, Dr. Torrey says, God proceeded to recreate the earth in six days, as described in Genesis, and made Adam and Eve to start the human race anew.

SENT FAKE TELEGRAM TO HER FRIENDS

Mary Meade Not Dead but is Living with her husband.

WINNIPEG, MAN., Aug 8.—Last Monday night came an innocent looking despatch from Raddison, 40 miles north-west of Saskatoon, saying that Miss Mary Meade and her brother, had been killed by being thrown form a rig while driving from the station to their house, and that the girl was about to be married.

It is now learned that the driving accident is fiction and it was intended to be a final chapter in a romantic tale. Mary Meade married sometime ago a man who treated her badly, and for three years had lived apart from him. She became engaged to another man and while on a pre-nuptial visit home, met her estranged husband. She sought to escape from the tangle by arranging the transmission of a fake telegram to friends whose curiosity thus aroused, they sought satisfaction and it resulted in her being unearthed, living quietly with her husband and parents at Luxemburg, twenty miles north of Raddison.

are not matters of every-day purchase, and therefore even the independently wealthy like to take the greatest care of them. Yet sometimes the functions of a single evening will ruin their appearance temporarily. ## THE SEASHORE GIRL.

The Prettiest Bathing Cap In Many a Day.

BATHING CAP IN NELL ROSE.

Two long ends of Nell rose silk cross at the back of this cap and are drawn snugly around the head and tied in front in a perky bow, the cap being held firmly thus over the hair. In front is a visor flap of silk, which may be turned down over the eyes.

Concerning Women.

Mrs. Waldorf Astor, whose home is now in England, but who was born and brought up in Virginia, is said to be immensely popular with her husband's constituency in Devonshire. She made five speeches in two days recently and is quite a queen in Plymouth.

Mrs. Frank B. Tracy, who recently resigned the presidency of the Shut-in society of Boston, has been engaged in the work for fifteen years. She was presented with a gift in gold in appreciation of her faithful services. Mrs. Tracy is the wife of the editor of the Boston Transcript.

The famous girls' school at Ogontz has at last acquired the estate upon which the school is located. It was the property originally of Jay Cooke, the financier. It passed into the hands of the members of the faithful, who were never willing to sell it until it has now passed into the hands of Miss Abby A. Sutherland, who has conducted the school for a number of years. The price paid was $500,000 for 200 acres.

The co-eds of the Ohio States university have decided that they will use no more slang. Miss Caroline Breyfogle, dean of the women, and several other members of the faculty are in favor of the campaign, which has been started in earnest. The hall in which the girls meet is called the "gab room," and the dean has offered $5 for a name to substitute for this slangy one.

NINE CHILDREN AT THE SHELTER

Superintendent Henry Now On His Annual Tour

"Here's a funny case," remarked Superintendent Henry of the Children's Shelter as he left the Police Station this morning, with a youngster about nine years of age. "At home he will not behave himself, but take him to the Shelter and you wouldn't want a better boy."

There are now nine children at the Shelter. Mr. Henry is on his annual tour to learn the condition of the children placed in the care of farmers. This work takes about seven weeks, as wards of the Children's Aid Society have been placed in all parts of Peterboro County and also in Victoria County.

Reports from the farmers are very satisfactory as to the conduct of the children, who, if given the proper care, take a big interest in their work and give a good account of themselves. Often Mr. and Mrs. Henry are visited by these youngsters, who seem delighted at the opportunity to call on their friends at the Shelter.

Summer One Piece Frocks.

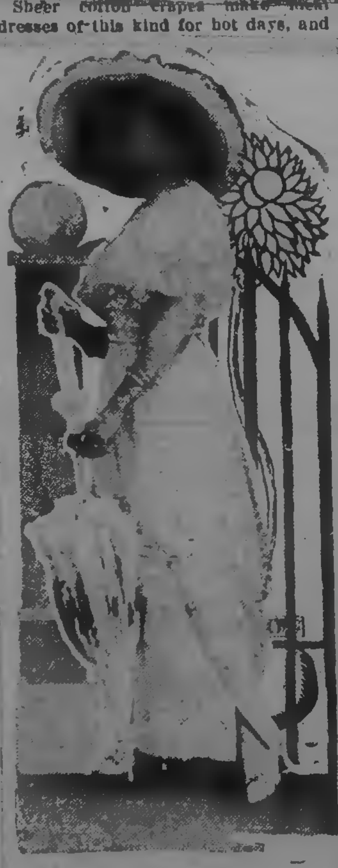
A liberal supply of one piece frocks of thin cottons and linens should be included in every summer wardrobe, and such frocks are to be had in pretty materials in the shops at surprisingly low prices, or they may be made up by the home seamstress at even smaller expense.

Sheer cotton crapes make ideal dresses of this kind for hot days, and a charming model seen recently was of embroidered marquisette, which formed the bodice. On the blouse at the waist line in front were two little pointed tabs, which extended below the waist line, giving the effect of a bolero. The edges of the bolero were outlined in heavy embroidery.



GARDEN PARTY FROCK.

The skirt of the frock was formed of cotton crape. A delightful model of a more elaborate character is illustrated, which would be especially pretty for a garden party.

Starch For Laces and Muslins.

Mix a small quantity of corn flour smoothly with cold water. This will be found excellent for lightly stiffening all delicate and lacy fabrics, including veils and neckwear of sheer materials.

Grease spots may be removed from gowns and draperies with the help of French chalk.

WEDDING BELLS

DENISON — GARDNER

Miss Margaret Gardner and Mr. Mr. D. B. Denison were united in marriage at St. Peter's rectory, Thursday afternoon by the Rev. Father McColl. The bridesmaid was Miss Belle Gardner, sister of the bride, while Mr. B. A. Rose supported the groom.

Mr. and Mrs. Denison will spend a honeymoon in Canadian and American cities, returning to reside in Peterboro.

AMERICAN RATES AND RAILWAYS

Local Railway officials will secure a crumb of comfort and encouragement when they read what Mr. J. H. Haslam says about European Railways as compared with Railways of this continent. There may be some question as to the superior efficiency of our Railways, but most readers must know by this time that the rates on the whole are higher in Europe than they are in the U.S. and in Canada. In making his comparison's, Commissioner Haslam, who is Chairman of the Commission to investigate agricultural credits, also European wheat markets, does not take into account the fact of the higher cost of production, the higher rate of wages paid to trainmen, enginemen and all who help to move the world's freight. If this were done, the showing of American Railways would be even better than appears from this short statemnet. In a column article cabled from Europe to the Hearst newspapers of the U.S., Mr. Haslam, over his signature, said:

"European railway systems are not as highly efficient as ours and charge much higher rates, both for freight and passengers.

How to Massage.

Massage the face with a good skin food for twenty minutes at night after the face has been washed with tepid water and the soap paste. Massage, besides stimulating the skin by increasing the circulation, smooths the surface. Think of the skin as a piece of wrinkled soft paper. To make the paper smooth so that it can be used again one pats and smooths out the creases. The same treatment should be applied to the face, the main difference being that the flesh requires a firmer stroke than would be given to a more perishable material.

The following is an excellent skin food for this purpose:

White wax, one ounce; spermaceti, one ounce; lanolin, two ounces; cocoa nut oil, two ounces; sweet almond oil four ounces; rosewater, two ounces. Melt the first five ingredients in a double boiler, take from the fire and while beating slowly add the rosewater. When quite cold put into jars. This food will not cause a growth of hair on the face.

A good lotion for use in treating premature wrinkles is made from the following formula: Alum, sixty grains; almond milk (thick), one and one-half ounces; rosewater, six ounces. Dissolve the alum in the rosewater; then pour gently into the almond milk, shaking constantly.

"In respect of all messages picked up by wireless we are pledged to secrecy," said a member. "We are also not allowed to use the commercial wave. We send out a shorter length."

Was Beam In Bishop's Eye.

There have been many quiet chuckles during the last few days at the expense of Dr. Ingram, Bishop of London. He strongly objects to long-winded bishops, and told the students at Queen's College, a few days ago, that he always tried to deliver one instead of two addresses at confirmation services. "I think," he said, "we are all much too long-winded." And then he spoke for forty minutes.

THE QUEEN'S HOUSEHOLD.

Her Majesty Has Cut Down the Number of Her Attendants.

"The Queen has been pleased to appoint the Countess Fortescue to be Lady of the Bedchamber, in the room of the Countess of Shaftesbury, resigned. The Queen has been pleased to appoint the Countess of Shaftesbury to be an Extra Lady of the Bedchamber."

This brief announcement in The London Gazette recently calls attention to the fact that Her Majesty's interest in Court arrangements does not begin and end, as is popularly supposed, with the appointment of her personal ladies. Since King George came to the throne, Queen Mary has insisted upon superintending the details of the organization and administration of the royal household, work which in the past was delegated to Court officials. This has resulted in many alterations, particularly in regard to the number of servants employed, for Her Majesty discovered that she did not require nearly the number of servants and attendants that were formerly deemed necessary, the state maintained being much more simple than was previously the case.

"The business-like spirit that pervades the whole of the Queen's household is most striking. Everything seems to proceed there as though by clockwork, and while there is no stint, says The Ladies' Field, Her Majesty permits no waste, the strictest economy being enforced in every direction.

"It appears that the Queen exercises full control over all that takes place in her name, and scarcely a letter is despatched before it is submitted to Her Majesty for her approval. It is Mr. E. W. Wallington, the Queen's private secretary, who deals with the vast correspondence which Her Majesty receives each day, and takes her instructions concerning the replies which should be sent. The Queen devotes several hours a day to her correspondence.

Upon what may perhaps be styled the "business side" of the Queen's household, the Earl of Shaftesbury is the leading figure. He is Her Majesty's Lord Chamberlain, and, to a considerable extent, his duties approximate to those carried out by Lord Sandhurst in the household of the King. He is charged with the entire conduct of Her Majesty's entourage, and is responsible directly to her for its proper maintenance. All items of expenditure upon behalf of the Queen have to pass through his hands, though it is her Treasurer, the Hon. A. Nelson Hood, who actually signs the checks and sees that they are despatched.

The Mistress of the Robes, a position now held by the Duchess of Devonshire, is really the head of the Queen's household, among the principal of her duties being the supervision of the Maids of Honor. Indeed, her former title at Court was "Mother of the Maids."

Next in order of importance amongst the ladies of the Queen's Court come the Ladies of the Bedchamber. These, together with the Bedchamber Women, are more generally known to-day by the designation of Ladies-in-Waiting, but the former title is more correct, and has reference to the days when these ladies were actually called upon to serve a queen at her toilette, and to assist generally at her robing and disrobing every morning and night. Needless to add, this no longer forms part of their duties.

Auto Street Cars Favored.

Having retained cable cars so long, Edinburgh is in a position to take the lead with a system of public transit that has been perfected since most cities adopted the overhead trolley. Its committee of city officials has investigated self-propelled cars, and they report that such cars have reached a stage where they are trustworthy, safe, and suitable for street traffic. While the first cost is greater, this is counterbalanced by savings in tramline construction, conductors, overhead or conduit work, and the absence of a central generating station. Another suggestion brought out by this inquiry is that of abolishing rails in public roads, and using the self-propelled car on the ordinary highway. With cars that are simple and efficient in control and drive, and fairly noiseless in working, this plan has interesting possibilities even if not favored for general adoption.

Dog as Fireman.

The Surbiton Fire Brigade have a pet dog, Toby, who has been thoroughly trained in every branch of firemen's work. When an alarm of fire is given Toby turns out at once, and as soon as the engine is made ready he climbs the ladder and takes his seat by the side of the firemen.

He will run up an escape when placed at the side of the house and go in by the window to see what he can find. When a jumping-sheet is held out below Toby knows at once that he is to jump into it. He has been trained how to put out fire. When newspapers are set alight Toby will extinguish the flames with his mouth and his paws. He jumps into tanks of water also, to rescue articles lying at the bottom.

Australia's Thrift.

Referring to the savings banks in Australia, Sir George Reid said the other day that the population of Australia was about 4,750,000 men, women and children, and there were more than 1,600,000 separate accounts in the savings banks. There was one account for every three of the men, women, and children of Australia. The money deposited had gone up at a tremendous rate during the last ten years; the increase had been, he thought, something like 100 per cent. This was not only a sign of prosperity, but of the best kind of prosperity — that which reached the great masses of the working population of the country.

A Big Harvester.

A mammoth oil-driven harvester that is being tried out on Australain wheat fields strips about 60 acres a day.

The Cost of Living

IS A PROBLEM that affects, in a greater or less degree, every member of the community. It presses hard on some, and on a few its effect is a negligible quantity

THE enterprising merchant is thoroughly alive to the fact that the high cost of living is in many ways an oppressive burden. He knows that the margin between income and expenditure is often a very narrow one. He buys newspaper space to let people know that he knows. In short, he advertises.

The merchant who advertises has something worth while to tell. That stands to reason, don't it, because newspaper space costs money? It will pay you, therefore, to watch carefully the announcements of the stores that advertise. You'll find all the good stores advertising in

The Daily Review

THE persistent reader of newspaper advertisements has discovered the best way to combat the high cost of living. His dollar has a greater buying power than that of the non-reader—or spasmodic reader—of ads because he employs it with more knowledge and more discrimination. It is an easy matter to cut down your living expenses by fifteen, twenty or twenty-five per cent. — and even more — by being a careful student of the daily store ads. In this way you will get "wise" to the values. You will ask for the advertised article at the advertised price and you will know before you go shopping what you are going to pay.

TROUT FELL FOR HIDDEN BALL TRICK IN THE NINTH; BELTING BACK TO FORM

Hamilton, Aug. 8—Hamilton won the first of the series with Peterborough yesterday afternoon by 4—3 and it was the ancient hide-the-ball stunt that brought about the Petes' downfall for a certainty. It was in the ninth of a well-contested game in which both pitchers did good work, that Needham tagged Trout off third base after fooling the runner by hiding the ball in his glove.

The Petes were two behind when they went to bat for their last effort. Hilliard and Trout singled and advanced a base on Swartz's infield out. Byrne's sacrifice fly scored Hilliard and Trout took third. Rowan batted for Belting but before he had a chance to do anything, Needham caught Trout off the base making three down.

The Peterborough hurler was in good form. He issued but one pass and contributed a three base hit.

BARBERS WON AT BASEBALL

A very exciting and peculiar game of baseball was pulled off yesterday afternoon at Riverside Park, between an East City aggregation and the barbers. The tonsorial artists, after many a batting rally, managed to win by 19 to 14. The game was full of features from start to finish, including the smashing of the Ump's new straw hat. The hat will be paid for out of the gate receipts, if there are any left after the water-boy puts in his claim for damages.

The batteries were:
Barbers— Guerin and Rutherford.
East City— Swanston and Collins.
Umpire, Primeau.

WAGNER IS NOW LEADING RED SOX

Kane Is Released—Red Rowe One of the New Men

BRANTFORD, Aug. 7.—Ambrose Kane, manager of the Brantford team since the inception of the Canadian League was unconditionally released yesterday by President Nelson. Kane's work this year has disappointed his best friends, and the fiasco which was staged at Ottawa on Tuesday was too much for President Nelson. Kane's ability as a player is well recognized, and he will doubtless be found on another Canadian League team.

Clarence Wagner has been placed in charge of the team temporarily. New players are being secured, including "Red" Rowe, formerly of Ottawa, Frank Smith and Davis, pitchers from Dunkirk, N.Y. Buster Burrill, recently released, has been signed again and will replace Kane in left field.

FOOTBALL

There will be no game in the finals of the Midland Football League on Saturday, but the C.G.E. eleven and Pickering will play here the following Saturday.

The Nomads have been drawn against Oshawa in the competition for the Connaught Cup. One or more of the games in this competition will be played at Toronto during the exhibition.

SPORTING GOSSIP

Younger brothers of Christy Mathewson and Tyrus Cobb are coming to the front as star ball players, according to reports from the cities where they are performing at present. Hank Mathewson is playing first base for the Kingston team of the New York and New Jersey league, and is fielding and hitting in fine style. Ray Cobb is hitting around the .300 mark as a member of the Lincoln, Neb., club of the Western league, his slugging being credited with keeping the club in the first division. It is said that he will be snapped up by one of the major league clubs at the end of the Western season.

Amos Rusie, the greatest baseball pitcher of his day is confined in a hospital at Seattle, suffering from injuries received when a heavy bar of iron fell on his arm. Rusie has been employed as a plumber of late and was at that work when the accident occurred.

It is rumored that the Toronto Ball Club will draft Frank Shaughnessy this season, and give him the management of the Toronto Leafs next year. Now what do you think of that?

And now Jack Fryer is trying the backstop position with Guelph.

Gilbert Forgue, the speedy backstop of the Saints, is out of the game again this time with a wrenched knee.

FRED BRADSHAW IS SUSPENDED

Berlin Management Took Action After Bombardment of Petes

Bradshaw, the crack spitball artist of the Berlin Club, for whom, it is said, the directors were offered $1,500 from Brooklyn, some time ago, was indefinitely suspended after the game between Berlin and Peterboro Wednesday. The Petes got thirteen hits off Bradshaw's delivery, but his teammates claim that his ball was breaking wonderfully well during the game.

Just why he was suspended could not be learned and a number of the Berlin players are not at all pleased with the treatment accorded him.

Bradshaw will surely be grabbed off by one of the major leagues this fall, and the action of the Berlin management in suspending him when the end of the season is less than a month away seems rather queer. It will certainly have some effect on any offer that any of the major league might have had in mind to make.

LAWN TENNIS

Tennis players from Norwood, led by Rev. P. J. Kelly, came to this city yesterday and entered into combat with the representatives from the Church of the Sacred Heart. The games were very close, Norwood having a little shade the better of the locals. The playing of Miss L. Murray was very prominent. Rev. Father Kelly of Norwood, Rev. Father Cassidy of Paris, Ont., and Rev. Father McCauley of this city, were present.

After the games, luncheon was served on the lawn, and the Norwood visitors left on the 7.57.

The return game will be played in Norwood next Thursday.

MODERN SIGNALLING SYSTEM FOR THE DE LAVAL COMPANY

Warehouse and Separator Department Will Be Completed In October.

A year ago next month the first earth was turned on the property bought by the De Laval Company in the southern part of this city. To-day the De Laval Company is one of Peterborough's most flourishing manufacturing concerns. Scarcely a year has passed, nevertheless this company has gone ahead with unbelievable strides. The residents of sections of the city other than the one in which this factory is located often answer the question of "What's this De Laval Company I hear so much about?" with "Oh! It's one of our several minor manufacturing companies," but one visit to this place will soon convince these people that it is one of Peterborough's foremost industrial plants.

It was stated in the Review some time ago that the main building and office was completed, and that the construction work on two new buildings was begun. By the first of October of the present year these new buildings will be completed, and the various departments doing their respective work. These new buildings are a separator department and warehouse. The latter is directly behind the main office and is some 100 feet by 220 feet. It is a two storey building and the steel and material used in its construction clearly demonstrates the disregard this company has for expense, so long as the building is thorough in every detail. The other building is directly south of the warehouse, and, like the rest of them, runs east and west. The dimensions are 224 feet by 110 feet, and it is a one storey structure.

Between the warehouse and separator department a tinning room has been built, which is some 20 x 40 feet. This building was constructed entirely of timber which could withstand the effects of the acid fumes, so deadly to steel and brick.

One very expensive apparatus that has been installed is a Dedrick Double Baling Machine. In the manufacturing of the various dairying utensils a tremendous amount of lumber is used. One indication of this is the fact that last week this company made a contract for 3,600,000 feet of lumber. Naturally a large amount of shavings accumulate, and it was necessary to install the baling machine. The shavings are taken away from the machines through a pipe and emptied into a large receptacle. This receptacle feeds the baling machine and the bales are turned out after the manner of hay, and can easily stand a great deal of handling. These shavings are sold both to local people and out-of-town concerns. They are used chiefly instead of straw for the bedding of horses.

In the course of a few days a fire pump, to be used for fire protection, will be installed. It is expected that the cost of this apparatus will be in the neighborhood of $1,000.

SIGNALLING SYSTEM.

A signalling system, which is a new thing in this city, will also be installed in a week or so. It will be worked in the following manner: All the foremen, officials etc., will be represented by an electric light of a certain color. At various points throughout the plant a row of different colored electric lights will be placed. If a certain man is wanted, and he is out through the factory, whoever wants him acquaints the telephone central with the fact and the official throws on his light. When he sees this light burning he will at once go to the nearest phone and ask the central who wants him. Thus the various foremen and officials are kept in touch with one another all the time, and this system also does away with the confusion caused by electric bell signals.

MINIATURE RAILWAY.

Another feature worthy of mention is the miniature railway running from one part of the factory to another. Already six cars are being used on the track, and this does away entirely with the trucks and carts.

Owing to the fact that the company has run up against a great deal of water on the premises they have been delayed in getting the place fixed up so as to give a picturesque view to the plant, but the Council has promised to give speedy attention to drainage, and no doubt steps along this line will be taken in the near future. Already in front and around the beautiful two storey office has been graded, and when this is converted into a lawn, which will be dotted here and there with flower beds, the result will be most pleasing.

VISITED CEMETERY SET APART FOR CANINES

It is quite probable that there are many Peterboro people who have not had the privilege of visiting a cemetery for dogs, but Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Johnston who have returned from a visit in Cornell, N. Y., spent some time at such a place.

The cemetery is of several acres and there are many monuments erected to the memory of canines who have departed to the happy hunting grounds.

Some of these monuments represent a considerable outlay of money. They give the date of birth and death, the name of the owner and on some of the monuments is an inscription giving a eulogy on man's best friend, the tribute of a well known writer.

Mr. and Mrs. Johnston were in Cornell to visit their son, Mr. Herbert Johnston who is in charge of a mission.

FOUR RESIDENTS OF AN ENGLISH SUBURB HOMELESS

Sudden Blaze Sweeps Down on "Shacktown," and Only the Efforts of ~~the~~ Firemen Prevent the Flames Frome Devastating the District—Ninety Per Cent. Are Frame Houses.

TORONTO, Aug. 9.—Four Earlcourt men went home last night from the city and found their homes a heap of smoking ruins. Three of them saved a few sticks of furniture and some clothing, while Fred Adams, an employe of the city street cleaning department, lost everything. He has a family of nine children and they have nothing but the clothes they wore when the fire occurred. Furniture, clothes, crockery, everything is gone, and they will have to begin all over again. The losers are: Alfred Franks, building and contents, $1500; William Brown, building, $600; Fred Adams, contents, $500; Chas. Burrows, building and contents, $1400; Bertram Lovewell, building and contents, $1500.

Four houses were burned. Three were totally destroyed and one is a half burnt ruin. The buildings were located on Hatherley road, near Eversfield road, just adjoining R. A. Blackmore's hardware store. The fire started in the vacant half of a house which had been divided into two by a plasterboard petition. It belonged to William Brown, and one half of it was occupied by Fred Armes and his family.

H. Burrows, who lives on the opposite corner, was in his garden at 1 o'clock last night when Wm. Brown rushed out of the vacant half of the house and cried out that it was on fire. Armes' family had just time to rush out of the other half before the whole building was a sheet of flame.

The flames spread rapidly to Chas Burrows' house just three feet north then to Bertram Lovewell's house across a twenty-five foot lot, but were checked by a wide vacant lot from going farther north.

Spreading south the fire destroyed Alfred Frank's house and would have demolished R. A. Blackmore's hardware store but for the efficient work of the city firemen. According to eye-witnesses the speed with which the reels turned out and got the fire under control with water from a hydrant on Dufferin street, half a mile away, was nothing short of marvelous. Had city water not been available the fire would have swept the district, as 90 per cent of the buildings are frame houses many of them only partly completed.

The neighbors worked nobly to assist the firemen, even the women passing buckets of water, helping to move furniture and doing all they could to help the families in trouble.

The cause of the blaze is unknown.

'ABOLISH THE LORDS, PLEADS LLOYD GEORGE

THE RIGHT HON. D LLOYD-GEORGE.

An appeal to democracy against the House of Lords was reiterated by David Lloyd George, Chancellor of the Exchequer.

"The Premier has already announced that next year he will introduce a measure for a new second chamber," he said. "It will be a chamber in which all parties and all sections and all creeds will have equal treatment.

"Under the present system Liberal governments would have no powers by and by except such as the Lords vouchsafed to them. A Liberal Premier would have to go around to Belgravia and ask the butler to tell him his lord's orders for the day."

LAUGH AND CURE APPENDICITIS

BALTIMORE, Md., Aug. 8.—"Smile," that is the latest and cheapest prevenative for appendicitis, according to the surgeons who have handled most of the cases in the hospital.

"Loosen the muscles of your face into a grin,' is their advice, "and you'll never scrape even a speaking acquaintance with a high-priced surgeon."

Since the first of January, seventy-one cases of appendicitis have been treated in the Johns Hopkins Hospital Four of the patients died. That these deaths could have been averted was the confident statement made in the official bulletin issued by the hospital.

The surgeons declare that many cases of internal complaint can be traced to gloomy spirits in those who insist on going thru life with a grouch. The specialists say: "Worry and you'll get a pain in the side. The more you laugh the healthier you'll be and the fewer aches you'll have."

According to the Hopkins house surgeons, mental worry is one of the chief causes of appendicitis—just so much a cause as the lifting of heavy weights. Imperfect mastication is admitted to be one of the primary causes and the bolting of food is generally the habit of a man who lacks a rosy view of life. The man who smiles at table companions and joins in the general table talk is the least susceptible to physical ailments.

ASQUITH NON-COMMITTAL

"People Will Decide," Is His Comfort for Suffragists.

LONDON, Aug 8.—(Can Press.)—Premier Asquith gave cold comfort today to Mrs. Millicent Fawcett, the president of the National Union of Women's Suffrage Societies, and her non-militant colleagues, when they interviewed him in his official residence in Downing street and urged him to bring in a government measure bestowing the franchise on women.

The premier complimented his visitors on their constitutional methods, which, he said, were "such a welcome contrast to the criminal proceedings" of the militant suffragettes. He, however, frankly declared that he had undergone no change of heart in the matter and there could be no question of the government undertaking the desired measure during the present parliament.

Mr. Asquith pointed out that the final word on woman suffrage rested with the people of the United Kingdom, and said that if the women were able to convince the people that such a change was desirable and beneficial no combination in the world could prevent the attainment of their object.

PROGRAM FOR CIVIC HOLIDAY

Two Fast Ball Games for Riverside Park

The program for Civic Holiday is one that will provide entertainment for those citizens who will spend the holiday in the city, as well as for those who wish to spend the day otherwise. There will be a morning and afternoon baseball game at Riverside Park between Peterborough and Guelph, and as both teams are playing good ball, the fans should witness two fast contests.

For the members of the 57th Regiment, the ranges will be open in the morning.

At Stoney Lake the annual regatta will be held, commencing at one o'clock. The C.O.F. are running an excursion down the river.

The S.O.E. are also holding an excursion to Stoney Lake.

TANGO MUST GO.

Muskoka May Be Next to Ban Objectionable Dance.

MUSKOKA, Aug. 8.—(Special.)—Quite a stir was created amongst the guests of the Windermere House last night when it was rumored that the management had decided to prohibit any more of the "tango" dances in the hotel dance hall. Since the summer season opened the "tango" has been the popular dance here, almost to the exclusion of all others. When properly and becomingly executed the dance is not objectionable, and no objection would have been made to it had the dancers kept within the proper limits. A few bold spirits, however, with more boldness than discretion, succeeded in vulgarizing the dance to such an extent that it has attracted the attention of the manager of the hotel, who says he "cannot permit the dance to go on while the dancers continue to introduce so many objectionable features."

Opinion of the other guests of the hotel is very much divided, but the majority express the belief that the management will make no mistake in cutting out the dance entirely.

WILD GOOSE CURED HIM.

Frightened Bird Hit Man and Paralysis Got Better

LOS ANGELES, Calif., Aug. 8.—A frightened goose flying blindly thru the air struck Arthur J. Reddington, a Lamanda Park rancher, in the back of the neck today and cured him of paralysis.

Reddington had been suffering from partial paralysis of the arms and legs for several years and was considered incurable.

As Reddington was hobbling along the boulevard near his ranch the electric horn of a swiftly approaching automobile frightened a flock of geese from an irrigation ditch alongside the road. One flew across the road and struck Reddington full tilt on the back of the neck.

The assault was so sudden that Reddington instantly threw up his hands to his neck. When he recovered his composure he found that he had also recovered the complete use of all his limbs.

Played Joke With Corpse.

KINGSTON, Aug. 8.—(Special.)—Queen's Medical College authorities will demand an investigation into the opening of a box containing the corpse of a man killed near Belleville a week ago, which arrived at Kingston Junction expressed to the medical college. They are very much incensed.

The college authorities desire to find out who is to blame for interfering with the dead body and setting it upright upon a barrel at the Junction. They cannot understand why the box should have been broken open in the short journey from Belleville to Kingston.

Call Was Sudden.

BELLEVILLE, Aug. 8.—(Special.)—James Holden, a gardener who resided in the township of Sydney, dropped dead while in his garden yesterday. Heart failure was the cause of death. Deceased was 60 years of age and married. He was well known and highly esteemed in this vicinity.

Another Term For Gibson.

OTTAWA, Aug. 8.—(Can Press.)—It is understood semi-officially that the recent report that Sir John Gibson will be reappointed lieutenant-governor of Ontario for another year is correct, tho the cabinet has not yet dealt with the matter.

MRS. MALDWIN DRUMMOND RESISTING INCOME TAX IN ENGLISH COURTS

MRS. MALDWIN DRUMMOND

The question whether money owned by an American is subject to the income tax in England again cropped up when Mrs. Maldwin Drummond, who was the widow of Marshall Field, Jr., in the High Court appealed against an assessment of $50,000 on money she had received from the trustees of the late Marshall Field, Sr., for the suitable maintenance and education of his three grandchildren, Marshall, Henry and Gwendolyn, the children of Marshall Field, Jr., and Mrs. Field, now Mrs. Drummond.

Mrs. Drummond appealed on the ground that the children are receiving no income at all from America and none of them benefits under the will until they are twenty-five years old.

SULZER ACCUSED WITH SPECULATING FROM "BAR'L"

Frawley Committee Inquiring Into Source of New York Governor's Campaign Money, Finds That He Was Gambling on Wall Street and Tried to Recoup Out of Party Exchequer.

NEW YORK, Aug. 8.—(Can. Press).—Gov. William Sulzer of New York was nearly $50,000 in debt as the result of stock market speculation at the time of his nomination and used contributions to his campaign fund to make additional purchases of stock while this debt was hanging over him, according to testimony adduced today at the hearings of the Frawley committee of the legislature.

The evidence brought to light is sufficient, according to Senator Frawley, chairman of the committee, to warrant proceedings to impeach the governor for violation of the Corrupt Practices Act, and the committee closed its hearings here today to consider what action should be taken.

A definite decision, Chairman Frawley indicated, would be reached by the time the legislature meets on Monday.

The governor, according to the evidence, had dealings with three different stock exchange firms. L. M. Josephthal, a Wall street banker, and a member of Gov. Sulzer's staff as naval reserve aide, came to his rescue, it brought out, and paid a debit balance of $26,739 still standing against the account in July last. This was after the governor had received repeated calls for more margin and was about to be sold out.

The governor's transactions with the other firms were for cash and it was in connection with one of these that Gov. Sulzer, according to the evidence, used campaign contributions in the purchase of stock.

Arranged chronologically, the testimony appeared to show that on Jan. 1, 1912, there stood on the books of the stock exchange firm of Harris & Fuller an indebtedness of $48,599, against the purchase by Gov. Sulzer of 500 shares of "Big Four," 200 shares American Smelting and Refining Co., and 100 shares of Southern Pacific. This testimony was given by Melville B. Fuller, a member of the firm.

The governor's next transaction in Wall street was on Jan. 16, 1913, when he deposited a $5000 cheque of A. E. Spriggs against his indebtedness to Harris & Fuller. On July 9, 1913, he further reduced this indebtedness by selling his 100 shares of Southern Pacific for $9248. The governor's account with Harris & Fuller, according to Mr. Fuller, was known as No. 63.

After the governor had failed to answer several calls for margin the firm, on June 11, demanded a deposit of $15,000, in default of which it was said his stock would be sold.

"The result of this communication was that finally something over $26,000 was paid by Josephthal and the account taken up, is that right?" Mr. Fuller was asked.

"That was some time after. We got the Spriggs cheque before the account was finally taken up."

A. E. Spriggs is said to have been interested with Gov. Sulzer some twenty years ago in the exploitation of the Alaska Industrial Co., a mining corporation.

LITTLE WAR ON BOAT.

Bulgars, Greeks, Servians and Turks Fight in Steerage.

NEW YORK, Aug. 8.—(Can. Press.)—Officers of the Cunard Liner "Pannonia," arriving here today from Trieste, report that a miniature Balkan war occurred aboard almost continuously during the 24 days voyage. Among the steerage passengers were several hundred ex-volunteers, Greeks, Servians, Bulgars and Turks, who were returning to this country after taking part in the Balkan war.

Frequent riots between these hostile factions in the first few days resulted in several combatants going to the sick bay with severe stab wounds. Captain Capper thereupon ordered a general disarming, but the fighting continued with whatever missile was at hand.

Then the nationalities were separated into groups, but on meeting for meals, the battle was resumed. As a precautionary measure the stewards removed knives and forks from the tables, and all the steerage passengers, of whom there were 1121, had to eat with spoons.

It is stated that the women in the warring camps fought as fiercely and as effectively as the men.

Can Wife Rob Husband?

MONTREAL, Aug. 8.—(Can. Press.)—Whether or not it is possible, legally speaking, for a wife to steal from her husband is the point raised before Judge Leet in the case of Mrs. William Rabinovitch, wife of a farmer of St. Constant, who had her arrested on a charge of stealing $675 of his money.

On behalf of Mrs Rabinovitch it is argued that the question should be dealt with in the civil courts. It was quite impossible to accuse the woman of theft, as all the goods in the possession of the couple are held by them jointly.

As Rabinovitch is to take action before the civil courts to recover the money Judge Leet adjourned the case.

Cornwall Man Killed.

CORNWALL, Aug. 8.—(Special.)—Friends in Cornwall were advised yesterday of the death at Valleyfield, Que., of Edward Walker, a young man about twenty-five years of age, as the result of an accident which occurred on one of Mr. Cohan's dredges engaged there. The remains were brought to Cornwall and the funeral took place this afternoon at Woodland cemetery.

MORE ON THE WATER WAGON

Britain is Steadily Consuming Less Liquor.

LONDON, Aug. 8.—(Can. Press.)—The very remarkable spread of temperance in the British Isles in every rank of society was recorded by Sir Thomas Barlow, president of the International Medical Congress, in a speech delivered to several hundred doctors of various nationalities at a breakfast given today in their honor by the National Temperance League in the Grafton Galleries.

Sir Thomas said that a great improvement in this respect had taken place in the army and the navy, where the young officers were setting a good example to their men. There had also been an enormous change among the commercial classes, while the use of alcohol in hospitals and by medical men generally had greatly decreased it.

The president made an appeal to the doctors present to endeavor to check the consumption of medicated wines, all of which, he said, were mischievous.

Canadian delegates to the medical congress were active in several of the twenty-six sections assembling yesterday. Professor McTaggart, Montreal, spoke in discussion on infant mortality; Dr. Pirie, Montreal, gave an interesting demonstration of the application of the cinematograph to the study of the intestinal canal.

Dr. Maude Abbott has been elected secretary-treasurer of the medical museum.

MAY BRIBE JAPAN

Mexicans Would Give Foothold in America for Aid.

PORTLAND, Oregon, Aug. 8.—The mission to Japan of Felix Diaz, the Mexican leader, who arrived here today on his way to the orient is not merely to create more friendly diplomatic feeling between his country and Japan but for the purpose of signing a secret treaty giving Japan a foothold on the west coast of America, according to admissions made by a member of Gen. Diaz's staff in conversation.

"Japan is playing for a foothold on the Pacific coast, and seeing the attitude of the United States the attention of the oriental diplomats has been turned toward Mexico," said this member of the legation.

"Mexico, on the other hand, is in serious financial embarrassment, and secret concessions, including money with which to continue the war, that is fast impoverishing the nation, will be forthcoming if no upsets are noted in the program.

"There seems to be a silent bond of sympathy between the Mexican and the Japanese races, and the Japanese are playing this to their best advantage. I know of one instance where a huge sum was offered the Madero administration for a coast concession that would have controlled wonderful power."

TARIFF FAR OFF.

Underwood Measure Has Many Obstacles to Surmount.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 8.—(Can. Press.)—All predictions of an early passage of the Democratic tariff bill ~~by the senate are going glimmering.~~ Majority leaders realize that notwithstanding the fact that they have set a new record in pushing consideration of this measure, only a beginning has been made and the earliest anyone now will promise completion of the task is Sept. 15.

The chemical, earthenware, metal and lumber schedules have been approved save for rates on certain articles in each which will be taken up when the bill gets to the senate proper from the committee. There remain to be considered ten schedules, among them the three upon which there will be the most vigorous attacks by the minority, namely, the wool, sugar and agricultural schedules. The minority is making a complete tariff record and shows no sign of letting up on amendments.

Did O'Brien Confess?

KINGSTON, Aug. 8.—(Special.)—Jack O'Brien, arrested at Sudbury in connection with the sensational mail bag robbery at the outer station on Jan. 22, was brought to Kingston this afternoon by Inspector James Parkinson of the Dominion police force. A report from Sudbury stated that O'Brien had confessed.

T. J. Rigney, counsel for O'Brien, had an interview with the prisoner upon his arrival and afterwards Rigney stated that the report about the prisoner having confessed was not true. Inspector Parkinson, when asked if the accused had made a confession, stated that he had. Apart from this he had nothing to say.

Arrives to Find Husband Gone.

KINGSTON, Aug. 8.—(Special.)—After coming from Syracuse, N. Y., to meet her husband, supposed to be working near Kingston Mills, Mrs. Lewis-Jones was disappointed when she found her hubby could not be located. Mrs. Jones did not have a cent of money on arriving in Kingston. Mayor Regney and Rev. A. E. Smart interested themselves in her case, and while a search was made for the missing husband, the wife and baby were given quarters at the Albion Hotel. Whether or not it is a case of desertion is not known, but the sudden disappearance is a mystery.

Lucky Escape From Death.

SPRINGFIELD, O., Aug. 8.—(Can. Press.)—Scores of passengers were badly shaken up but no one seriously injured here this afternoon when a Big Four passenger train on the Sandusky division crashed into a long string of empty passenger coaches just within the city limits. The engine crashed into the rear coach of the empty string, splitting it wide open. The empties then caught fire and the city fire department was called to extinguish the blaze. The engineer and fireman jumped and escaped serious injury.

Marconi Agreement Passed.

LONDON, Aug. 8.—(Can. Press.)—The house of commons by a vote of 210 to 188 today approved the government agreement giving to the Marconi Company a contract for the creation of an imperial chain of wireless telegraph stations circling the world.

ARRIVAL OF LIND IS AWAITED WITH ANXIETY

He Will Land at Vera Cruz This Afternoon or Tonight, and Will Be in Capital of Mexico on Sunday Night—Huerta's Message Regarding Lind is Verified by an Official Despatch.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 8.—The latest developments as to Mexico are:

A wireless from the United States battleship New Hampshire, conveying John Lind, President Wilson's personal representative, states the vessel will not reach Vera Cruz before tomorrow afternoon or night.

Commissioner Lind will reach Mexico City probably Sunday night or Monday morning.

There is no change in the program under which the message to President Huerta which Commissioner Lind brings from President Wilson is to be handed by American Charge de Affaires O'Shaughnessy at Mexico City to the Mexican Government. Immediately thereafter the note will be made public by the American embassy at Mexico City and by the state department at Washington.

The note it is hoped and expected by the Wilson administration will justify it before the world in the plan therein indicated for restoring peace in Mexico.

Commissioner Lind will not go near the palace or in any way communicate directly with the Mexican Government. All communications will be thru the American embassy, which is recognized by President Huerta and which has been dealing with him as a de facto power.

There has been absolutely no intimation from Mexico that any attempt will be made to prevent Mr. Lind from landing at Vera Cruz or from proceeding from there to the Mexican capital.

President Wilson's incredulity as to President Huerta's ultimatum as to Lind was removed early today when the state department got direct from Nelson O'Shaughnessy, American charge d'affaires at Mexico City, an absolute confirmation of the Huerta determination that Commissioner Lind will be considered an "undesirable" in Mexico unless he brings official recognition of the Huerta administration. The statement issued by President Huerta thru the Mexican foreign office was first transmitted to the United States embassy, reaching Charge O'Shaughnessy at midnight Aug. 6. It was received by the state department at Washington and translated out of cipher between 12 o'clock last night and daylight this morning.

The translation was then sent over to President Wilson at the White House. The president summoned Secretary of State Bryan and they were in conference for an hour. Secretary Bryan then proceeded to the state department, where he soon after announced the following message to Charge O'Shaughnessy at Mexico City, with instructions to deliver it in person to the Mexican Government:

"The statement of the Mexican foreign office was based on misrepresentations for which this government is not responsible. In sending Gov. Lind as adviser to the embassy the president is entirely within his rights and this department will not assume that his going will be regarded as unfriendly when the character of his mission is understood."

As to how President Wilson regards the attitude of Huerta toward Lind several different views are held by leaders in congress. The president himself has said nothing directly for publication on the latest developments, but the White House late today authorized a statement that there is no change in the plans of the president to maintain friendly relations with Mexico and to end or endeavor to end strife in that country by friendly means.

President Repentant.

One report, with no verification, is that he is sorry he has sent anybody on such a mission as Lind is now undertaking.

There is a report in circulation in Washington tonight that the president was so astounded by the Huerta ultimatum that no plan of action has yet been determined on in the event that Lind is turned back at Vera Cruz and not allowed to land, or, if let land, is attacked or snubbed at Mexico or on the way there.

Mexico City Calm.

MEXICO CITY, Aug. 8.—The flurry over the coming of ex-Governor Lind as special advisor to the American embassy has largely subsided among Mexicans and foreigners.

Wm. Bayard Hale, who has been investigating affairs here for President Wilson, left tonight with instructions from the United States State Department to meet Mr. Lind at Vera Cruz and accompany him to the capital. He is expected to arrive here Sunday morning.

It is reported that the more radical advisers of Huerta are urging him to bar Lind from landing at Vera Cruz unless he states categorically what is his mission, but there is no indication early this evening that any further steps will be taken to impede his journey or prevent him from fulfilling the duties assigned to him in Mexico by President Wilson.

Secretary Bryan today directed Charge O'Shaughnessy to transmit to the Huerta Government in the name of the United States assurances of friendly feeling and proper motives which animated President Wilson in sending Lind to Mexico.

It expressed the belief that the Mexican Government had been misled by the press dispatches from the United States placing unwarranted and unauthorized construction upon the mission of Lind, and asserted that no one excepting Lind and the proper officials in Washington knew what the errand was, that it would not develop until he arrived and placed the message he bears in the hands of the person for whom it is intended, and Mr. Bryan requests the Mexican Government to reserve judgment until in possession of the full facts.

In light of this it is very unlikely any further objection will be urged to the coming of Mr. Lind.

Big Task to Perform.

LONDON, Aug. 9.—(Can. Press.)—Commenting on the Mexican situation, The Spectator says:

"If America gets involved in a Mexican war, she will be lucky if it lasts only three years and stops short of forcing her to raise armies on the European scale. Perhaps, however, the worst aspect of the whole affair is if America succeeded, as no doubt she ultimately would, her success would even be worse than failure."

TORONTO STAR AND THE NAVY SQUABBLE

The Toronto Star was always a mild opponent of the Naval Aid Bill, and to those who followed its editorials closely it was evident that it had but a half-hearted love for the Senate when that chamber rejected Mr. Borden's proposed contribution to the Imperial Navy.

If the Star is not repentant it is at least in a conciliatory mood just now and wants to have done with all this squabbling about emergency, etc., and would welcome a mutual and unimpassioned discussion of the real points at issue.

The unfortunate thing about the Star's suggestion is that it has come a little late. The Star knows very well that whatever party bitterness exists over the naval question it has been created and sustained by Liberals while the Naval Aid Bill was before the House of Commons, and by the Liberal press when it was rejected by the Senate.

The Globe, for instance, has found no greater delight than in trying to prove that the "emergency" was all a Tory ruse. Apart from the question whether it was a ruse or not, this one thing is certain, that Mr. Borden was prompted by a sense of loyalty, and a sense of responsibility as a Statesman to do what he felt was the duty of Canada at a critical moment in British and German relationships. And who can say, but that the prompt action of Mr. Borden did not relieve the situation?

If it did then the credit is all upon the side of Mr. Borden and the discredit on the heads of the Senate and its Liberal instigators for negativing what was a generous attempt to do a good turn to the Mother Land which has done so much for us.

The Liberal party cannot get rid of the past so easily. It is not a question to be settled by newspapers, so far as the Conservative party is concerned it has declared definitely against the Laurier naval policy, not because it was a Liberal policy, but because it was a failure. The Borden Government stands for immediate and efficient naval defence and believes that it has the best that is obtainable, viz., the British Navy.

So far as the people of Canada know the Liberal party still stands by the Rainbow and the Niobe. While Liberals continue to mourn like Niobe over her two children, they will still remain rigid and cold as stone, and their tears, which ever as summer months return, shall burst forth anew.

HUERTA AND THE STATES AMBASSADOR

The withdrawal of Ambassador Wilson from Mexico does not seem to have accomplished the bringing about of better relations between the States and Mexico, which it was evidently intended to do.

The newly appointed ambassador ex-Governor Lind, has not received a very cordial reception to his new post at the hands of President Huerta. Indeed the Provisional Government under Huerta is reported to have sent the following message to Washington:

"By order of the President of the Republic, I declare as Minister of Foreign Affairs ad interim that if Mr. Lind does not bring credentials in due form together with recognition of the Government of Mexico his presence in this country will not be desirable."

The Mexican newspapers are expressing loud praise of Provisional President Huerta, and are supporting him in his claim for recognition by the United States Government.

OLD YOUNGSTERS

A writer in the London Daily News says that to grow old is to as old fashioned as to wear a frock coat. "Fifty years ago a man of 70 was allowed to look upon himself as on the shelf, or, at any rate as in the arm-chair, but now he is hustled onto the golf links and instead of seeing him in his frock coat with his feet upon a hassock you see him in a golf jacket holing a putt on the 16th green.

Old age after all is chiefly a matter of temperament, some people were never really young; age is not a matter of growth with them, but a condition of mind and heart. Whatever may be said about old men there are certainly fewer old women than there used to be, and this not because they all die young.

The truth is a man or woman grows old when they cease to take an active interest in life, when they are content to look on and compare the present with the past, very much to the discredit of the present.

We have only got to mention a few names of active men who have passed the alloted span of life to prove this, Lord Strathcona, Dr. Alfred Russell Wallace, Frederick Harrison, Lord Morley. All of these men are old in years, but they have more of the spirit of youth in them than many men of thirty or less.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Things are quiet generally in Peterborough just now; many people are away holidaying, and those who are not, are wishing they were, or preparing to go.

There is a scarcity of news from the Balkans these days. It will seem awfully quiet if one of those "allies" don't get doing something pretty soon. Perhaps Mexico will oblige next.

The Morning Times has made a discovery. It has discovered that Magistrate Dumble has discovered Indian relics. The Time's difficulty now seems to be in discovering Mr. Dumble.

Older Now.

Now her hair is slightly gray;
In her forehead wrinkles show.
Where the lights are bright and gay
She has no desire to go.

She has ceased to think of style,
Now her pudgy hands are red,
But she still retains her smile
Though the charms of youth have fled.

Time was, not so long ago,
That her husband called her fair,
And his love was glad to show.
Now he slumbers in his chair.

Do you think his love has died;
That he sighs for what is past
And in her has lost all pride
Since her beauty couldn't last?

Not at all. He still is true.
Arm in arm they wander out.
Time has walloped him a few—
Now he's knockkneed, bald and stout.

"No, I'm not!" returned Florence promptly. "I'm a little her patient!"—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

BROOKLYN TABERNACLE BIBLE STUDY ON ISRAEL SPARED, OR PASSED OVER.

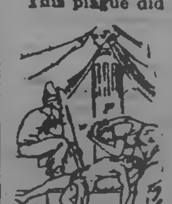
—August 10.—Exodus 12:21-31.—

"The Son of Man came not to be ministered unto, but to minister, and to give His life a Ransom for many."—Matthew 20:28.

THE tenth plague upon the Egyptians for their persistent injustice toward the Hebrews was the death of their first-borns. In every home there was death—the first-born son or daughter. The terror of such a night can better be imagined than described.

In Scripture death is always represented as the enemy of man—the penalty of sin. The death sentence came upon our first parents because of sin; and through them, by the laws of heredity, it has passed to all their children—the human family. The Bible [illegible] the only hope of a recovery lies in the fact that God [illegible] for the satisfaction of His Justice through the death of Jesus; and that during Messiah's reign the curse of death shall be removed.

What God brought upon the Egyptians in that night was, therefore, merely the same penalty that has been against all mankind for six thousand years. The first-borns, retiring in good health, were corpses before morning, the death sentence coming upon them more suddenly than it otherwise would have done.



"In every house there was death."

This plague did not touch the home of the Israelites. Their first-borns were passed over, spared, by the Almighty; hence the name Passover. By Divine command the Israelites made the anniversary of this event historical. Every Israelite shows his faith in God and his confidence in this record of the Divine deliverance of his forefathers, when he celebrates the Passover.

The Passover's Real Meaning.

Israel's experiences in being passed over were allegorical. As a type they represented the experiences of God's Elect—Spiritual Israel, a company of saintly people of God, gathered from all nations and denominations. The chief members came from Israel, but no nation can lay exclusive claims. It is an elect class, chosen along no other lines than that of character.

Spiritual Israel was represented in the first-borns of fleshly Israel, passed over in that night. The next morning the Israelites went forth under the leadership of the first-borns, who subsequently became the priestly tribe, typically representing the Royal Priesthood, whose Royal High Priest is the glorified Messiah.

Just as the first-borns of Israel passed over, were not the only ones saved from Egyptian bondage, so the Church of the First-borns (Hebrews 12:23) will not be the only ones saved from the bondage of sin and death, symbolize by the Egyptian bondage. The preservation of the First-borns implies the deliverance of the remainder.

The Bible represents the six thousand years in which Sin and Death have held sway and enslaved many as a night time. During this night God's people have been increasingly oppressed by Satan and his servants, typified by Pharaoh and the Egyptians. The morning will be the dawning of the great antitypical Sabbath, the Seventh Thousand-year Day. Then Messiah and His Church, passed over from death to life by Divine Power, will begin the great work of blessing all desirous of coming into harmony with God.

"Israel My First-Born."

Since deliverance from the power of Sin and Death was of God's grace, and not an obligation of justice, He had a perfect right to determine long in advance that His purposed blessings should reach mankind through Abraham's Seed. Unnoticed by the Jews, the Lord indicated that Abraham would have two seeds: one a Heavenly, the other an earthly. Thus He said, "Thy seed shall be (1) as the stars of heaven, and (2) as the sand of the sea shore."

Sprinkling the blood.

The stars represents the Heavenly Seed of Abraham—Messiah and His Church. The sand of the sea shore represents the vast multitude who ultimately will be saved from sin and death, and recovered to Divine favor and everlasting life in the Messianic Kingdom. God's providences were to the Jew first as respects the spiritual privileges, and will be to the Jew first as respects the earthly privileges—Restitution to human perfection.—Romans 11:25-33.

First-Borns Blood-Protected.

Let us not fail to note that Divine favor toward the first-borns of Israel was not without blood. Indeed, the whole lesson of the Old Testament Scriptures is that "without the shedding of blood there is no remission" of sins. By Divine command, the Israelites indicated their faith by taking a lamb of the first year without spot, killing it and sprinkling its blood upon the door posts and lintels of their houses, and eating the flesh within.

As the Passover was typical, so also were the lamb and the sprinkled blood. The lamb represented Jesus, the Lamb of God. His death was not for His own sins, but for the sins of humanity.

It is one thing to gain experience, but quite another thing to profit by it.

OF HEADQUARTERS

The Best Detective Story of the Last Ten Years

BY MARCIN BARBER

Supplied exclusively in Canada by the British and Colonial Press, Ltd., Toronto

"I'll tell you what I'll do," continued the detective relighting his cigar, and drumming on the table thoughtfully. "I will make a bargain with you. I know you want to get that girl out of jail, and I don't blame you a bit. She is altogether too fine a girl for that sort of thing—not that anything can contaminate her, though; the stuff in her is too good for that. You can't spoil the real sort by a few weeks' association with undesirable citizens, but just the same, you want to get her out. I'm going to tell you something. I do, too. I know you are in love with Elinor Holcomb, and I know you are not a bit more anxious to see her out of that place a free woman than I am, and I know I am not a bit more eager to see her come out with her reputation as white as milk than you are. It stands to reason, as you are the man to be responsible for her name all your life. I only hold myself accountable until this case is ended. How, then, can you think of suggesting such a thing as setting her free as long as the smallest scrap of suspicion stands against her? Why, you must be crazy!"

Fitch winced.

"See here," he said, "you don't have to talk to me that way. You know perfectly well when I say I want her out, I mean I want her out in exactly the same position in the eyes of her friends she was in before she went there. I know I'm an impetuous chump, and of course I have not any idea of forcing your hand in any way. But you needn't pretend you don't understand how hard it is for a man in my position to hold himself in."

Britz laughed—not unpleasantly. In fact, there was a ring of hope in the sound that made the doctor prick up his ears and turn to him expectantly.

"Say," said Fitch, "you know something?"

Britz nodded.

"Something important? Good news?"

The detective's head was motionless. With excruciating deliberation he took the pencil from his pocket, examined its point, used that point to push the ashes off his cigar, slipped the pencil back into his pocket, and then nipped the cigar between his teeth. He then brought the fingers of his two hands together, tip to tip, and looked at the physician with an air of judicial abstraction.

"Good boy!" he said. "I don't know just how good it is. It may be the key to the whole situation, and it may only deepen the mystery. All I can tell you about it is that it's a new lead. I can't tell you anything more about it until I run it down."

A sound of impatience came from Fitch. He started to spring from the desk, then whirled his back toward the detective and poised himself on the edge, drumming a lower panel with his heels.

The tension of the situation did not diminish as the minutes passed, the silence broken only by the electric thud of the doctor's heels. The strain became unbearable to Fitch, and with one final backward kick that seemed to shake away the desk, the detective, the room, and even the Missioner mystery itself, he landed with both feet midway of the space to the door and reached for the knob as if bent on hurling himself out of the place.

"Not so fast, doctor!" called Britz without moving from his comfortable pose. "I said I couldn't tell you anything," continued the detective, "but I don't see why I can't learn something from you. I'd like to have your advice on a question of science."

It was by a visible effort the physician controlled himself, returned to the centre of the room, and finally sat down in the chair which Britz indicated with a wave of the hand.

"I know you're scientist," Britz said, "but you've never told me how your curriculum extended."

"Why," said the doctor impatiently "you know I'm a physician, and as I'm in good standing with the County Medical Society, it goes without saying I at least made a stab at learning preliminary to taking my degree."

"What do you know about chemistry?" asked Britz.

"Why, that's part of the curriculum, you know. I don't quite know what you mean."

"Oh, curriculum be—everlastingly condemned! What do you really know about it?"

Fitch looked his astonishment.

"Ever tried to make an elixir of youth?" inquired the detective. "Ever have a whack at the philosopher's stone? Ever do anything along transmutation lines?"

Fitch, despite his anxiety for Elinor grinned. "You must take me for a crank," he said. "The only dabbling I have done in transmutation has been trying to transmute what I know about medicine and surgery into the silver of the moderately well-to-do. I have not wasted any energy in going after the gold of Millionaires' Row—not yet."

"Now, let us talk," said Britz. "You and I have fenced long enough along this line; let's get down to business. You know something about chemistry, that's certain. Do you know enough about it to tell me whether any progress has been made in recent years in the manufacture of paste jewels?"

"Can't say I do; haven't been much interested in that line until this outrageous attempt to prove Miss Holcomb a thief."

"Well, it's about time you did," said Britz meaningly. "I don't see what good it is to a girl to have an M.D. for a lover if he can't be of any more use to her in a case of this sort than Binks of the Hardware Club, or Jenks of the Retail Grocers' Association. Now, you know how these false gems are made, don't you?"

"I know pretty well," and Fitch gave him the formula with which the minute men of the jewel trade were familiar for purposes of self-protection.

"Well, I'm quite free to tell you," continued Britz, "that the whole question of Miss Holcomb's stay in the Tombs depends on our success in finding out who made the Maharanee diamond. I know who turned out the other stones—had Logan over for several weeks in Paris, you know." The detective then sketched rapidly for Fitch the detailed information sent to him by his assistant across the water. "But I cannot get a line on the Maharanee diamond. I've been over every place in this neck of the woods—in fact, I've gone over the whole country with a fine-tooth comb. I've had every important city in Europe canvassed, and the sum-total of all these inquiries is that nobody knows any live man who could make an imitation of the real Maharanee anything like good enough to deceive Simple Simon. Now, you just get that scientific thinking apparatus of yours going, and help me puzzle out the problem. We know there was a fake Maharanee diamond. It was ground to pieces under Griswold's heel in Mrs. Missioner's opera box. It was picked up by a man from the Orient—this Swami—whatever his name is, the sort of combination priest and scholar who says he's here to spread the propaganda of the Buddhist faith among the elect of New York society. Sands saw the diamond; Miss March saw it; Griswold saw it, and, of course, Mrs. Missioner herself had it in her own hand. There is no doubt about its existence. In fact, here is a piece of it now," and he showed Fitch a flake of the false diamond. "But you don't know, and I don't know what we have both got to know, and that is who made it, where was it made, by whom was it made, why was it made, and for whom was it made? The sooner we work out that end of the game, my dear young man, the better it will be for that little girl up in Centre Street."

The doctor's eyebrows began to contract. There was a peculiarity in the facial gesture. Something was going on in his scientifically inquiring mind. The brows drew together until their separate lines curved into the form of a minute interrogation point; little knobs of skin gnarled under the bristles; his eyes focused until they almost crossed. He clasped his hands behind his head and studied the ceiling. A rather long silence followed. Smoke spiraled from the detective's cigar and eddied upward. The detective's keen glance was leveled at the doctor's intellectually sharpening face.

It was in a reminiscent tone that Fitch at last spoke.

"When it comes to guessing, I'm no good," he said. 'I havn't been trained to guess. The little I know is the result of careful study and patient analysis; but there are a few things besides pharmacopoeia in my mind and memory, and one of them may help us a little." He shifted his position until he turned a square front to the detective.

"'Way back in my ambulance days," he said, "there was a case that your question reminds me of. It was one of the first I had after I went to Bellevue. It was a call to a queer little old shop in Fourth Avenue. You remember that row of rookeries filled up with second-hand furniture stores, art dens, old curio shops, and so on, on the west side of the avenue, somewhere in the Twenties?" A nod from Britz was the only reply. "Well," continued the doctor, "this call was to one of those curiosity shops. It was kept by a queer little old chap who must have starved himself to death to carry out some object he had. He sold curios for a living, and played at alchemy for amusement—cracked, you know. At any rate, he wasn't all there. His neighbors looked on him as a harmless lunatic, and in spite of his solitary habits, he was pretty popular. It was owing to this popularity that he didn't die in the back part of his own store with all the busy traffic of a busy city just a few rods outside. A neighbor heard a noise like an explosion and, running in, found him on his back all covered with some chemical that was turning his clothes into porous plasters. The neighbor turned in an ambulance call, and I was the answer. I found the old man half suffocated and wholly unconscious, and as I was pretty nervous from inexperience, it was about all I could do to bring him around. I wanted to take him back with me, but he wouldn't have it; said he was just as well off where he was; didn't like the hospital anyhow and wouldn't go, so I fixed him up where he was. Afterward, in the exuberance of my youthful zeal, I called on him outside of working hours, and kind of looked after him. He pulled through all right, but he was a pretty badly charred old person for a long time after that. As soon as he was well enough to take care of himself I left off going there, and that is the last I have seen of him."

"What caused the explosion?" asked Britz.

"I believe he was experimenting with some chemical—couldn't get him to tell me anything about it; he got mad as a hornet every time I touched upon it. I learned, however, from the neighbors that he was interested in precious stones, and in his later years the idea became firmly fixed in his mind that if he only tried long enough, spent money enough, mortified the flesh sufficiently, he would be able to make diamonds."

"What sort of stuff did he succeed in making?" asked the detective.

"You can search me," said Fitch. "I never got a look at any of it. His cracklets would never make any sort of admission to me about the stuff he was making. All I know is that the man who told me about experiments was quite positive that was crack in the old chap's brain—that he could make diamonds, and could make them just as well in a few hours as nature could in a thousand years."

"So the explosion must have been——?"

"Some fussing around with the ingredients he was going to convert into gleam and glitter. That's all I know about it. There you have it. Now, what do you make of it?"

"Well," said Britz as he put his heels to the floor with a click, "what we'll make of it won't be made down here. I'm glad that memory of yours worked in the long run; but it might have save me an extra hazardous 'joy ride' if it had worked sooner. Come along!" and he moved toward the door.

"Where are you going?" asked the physician.

"To the Bleecker Street station," replied Britz, "and from there to Fourth Avenue as fast as the local can take us. Guess we won't wait for a taxi."

"Then you think," said Fitch eagerly, "there may be a clew in what I've told you?"

"What's the use of thinking," almost snapped Britz, "when we can know? There's just one way to know, and that's to go. Come, let's go."

As they walked briskly down the Headquarters building, Britz paused at Manning's office, pushed a button and, when the door swung open, thrust his head in long enough to say:

"See you later, Chief; going up town for a little while."

"Still fighting it out on that line, eh?" was Manning's return.

"Yes," said Britz calmly, "and it may not take all winter either."

The detective and the doctor were so absorbed in the subject as they raced down the subway stairs that they did not notice a dark-faced man who, after a keen glance at their faces, hastened east in Bleecker Street and sprang into a waiting cab at the next corner.

FACED SEVEN LIONS.

And Three of Them Got a Dose of Lead In Short Order.

Captain H. A. Wilson has written a record of "Service and Sport In Equatoria" in "A British Borderland." He relates a thrilling encounter he had with seven lions on the Mara river when in pursuit of roan and accompanied only by his gun bearer. Five of them were lionesses. They were all full grown and occupied with their kill—a cow giraffe. They were feeding slowly, their first hunger appeased, pushing and jostling one another playfully, their low growls distinctly audible:

"For a couple of minutes I waited, watching them; then, as the biggest lion, a fine, black maned fellow, turned sideways to me, I raised my rifle and let drive at his neck. I heard the thud of the bullet on flesh, and he dropped in his tracks like a stone. With a simultaneous growl every head went up, and the lions swung round, facing the noise of the shot. I let fly a second bullet at the chest of the second male, and with a deafening roar he bounded high in the air, dashed a dozen yards forward and fell dead to earth just as I was drawing a second bead on him afresh.

"The remainder, all lionesses, turned at my second shot and walked slowly away with much tail lashing and a chorus of growls. I was just in time to get a snapshot at the hindmost as she disappeared into the scrub. The 'tell' of the bullet and her answering snarl told me that I had hit her, which blood spots on the leaves confirmed."

He Couldn't Plow.

A certain incident connected with the great Napoleon while he was in exile in Elba is commemorated in the island to this hour by an inscription affixed to the wall of a peasant's house. A man named Giaconi was plowing when the famous exile came along one day and expressed an interest in his work. Napoleon even took the plowshare out of the man's hand and attempted to guide it himself. But the oxen refused to obey him, overturned the plow and spoiled the furrow. The inscription runs thus: "Napoleon the Great, passing by this place in MDCCCXIV, took in the neighboring field a plowshare from the hands of a peasant and himself tried to plow, but the oxen, rebellious to those hands which yet had guided Europe, headlong fled from the furrow."

Sleeplessness.

When people of nervous temperament retire for the night and cannot sleep it is usually because their brains are still active and refuse to part with the blood which should properly travel elsewhere. What the sleepless really need is a sloping bed, so that the congested head will relieve itself easily of the superfluous blood. For the upper part of the body, being heavier than the lower, inevitably sinks more deeply into the bedding, and even if one props the head on two pillows the neck is curved and strained and obstructs the backward flow of blood.

THIS FINE OLD GENTLEMAN ANSWERED 187 LETTERS IN REGARD TO "FRUIT-A-TIVES"

People In All Parts of Canada Wanted To Know More About These Wonderful Tablets Made From Fruit Juices.

N. JOUBERT, Esq.

"I heartily recommend "Fruit-a-tives" to all who suffer from Constipation and the painful consequences—Piles. I am now over 74 years old and suffered for over 20 years with Constipation and Piles. I tried all kinds of remedies, saw the doctors and took their medicines but nothing cured me. About four years ago, I tried "Fruit-a-tives"—found they were doing me good. Then I procured an additional supply and was much gratified at the wonderful good they did me. After taking four boxes, I felt well—my bowels were regular and the Piles had disappeared.

My wife was troubled for three years with Asthma, and Eczema on the hands, which made her hands almost useless. The doctor gave her several ointments to use, none of which had any effect. He also advised her to use rubber gloves (she wore out three pairs). I persuaded her as a last resort, to try "Fruit-a-tives". The effect was marvellous. Her hands are cured and the Asthma has also left her. We both attribute our present good health to "Fruit-a-tives".

N. JOUBERT, GRANDE LIGNE, P.Q.

Whether it was the fine, honest, straightforward face that inspired confidence or the simple language, which rang true as a silver bell, that made so many people think over this letter, is hard to say. But the fact remains that one hundred and eighty-seven persons have written Mr. Joubert to enquire more fully about "Fruit-a-tives". And this delightful old gentleman who is now 74 years old—happy in his release from pain—grateful for his cure—took the time to answer every inquiry. Take his advice and try "Fruit-a-tives".

50c. a box, 6 for $2.50—trial size, 25c. At dealers or sent postpaid on receipt of price by Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

LIFE INSURANCE

THE pessimist and the prophet of woe have no rightful place in any consideration of the expediency of insuring life. But certain hard facts should be squarely faced by every man of moderate means who has anyone dependent on him. Hundreds of men are yearly rejected for life insurance who would have been accepted had they not delayed their applications until ill health had come upon them. Why do men in good condition take such a long chance of remaining well? It is an impressive fact that out of 8549 holders of policies in a leading life insurance company who died in the past year, only 64 died of old age. The remainder were carried away by disease or accident. Hence the wisdom of insuring early in life. The best years for saving are from 20 to 40, and no man should let that period pass without taking out an insurance policy. For that part of his career an endowment policy, which is likely to mature while he is still living and can secure the proceeds of it himself, is to be preferred.

There will probably always be poor old men, their ranks will be recruited from the successful men of an earlier date, and fortunate is he who has made certain provision by means of endowment insurance in the Sun Life Assurance Company of Canada.

REGIMENT FOR ORILLIA

Now That the Town Is Equipped With Armory

ORILLIA, Aug. 9.— As an outcome of the erection of the armory, a movement is already on foot for the organization of a city regiment in Orillia. It is believed that there would be no great difficulty in raising four or even six companies town, if they were allowed to drill at home, and not required to go into camp at Niagara every year. Each company is supposed to muster forty men, so that the total required would be from 160 to 240. The difficulty in securing officers also would be greatly reduced. The regiment would do its drilling in the armories and on the Oval, during the fall, winter and spring months. It would be an interesting and useful recreation, and splendid exercise, for a lot of our young men.

WESTERN CANADA'S BUMPER WHEAT CROP

Thousands of Men Required---This Year's Harvest Promises to be the Largest in the History of Canada

According to present indications the wheat crop of 1913 will be the greatest ever harvested in Manitoba, Saskatchewan or Alberta, thus requiring the farm laborers of the East to assist in harvesting the world's bread basket.

The Governments of the respective Provinces state that many thousand men will be required for this year's harvest. These will have to be principally recruited from Ontario, and the prosperity of Canada depends on securing labor promptly. The Canadian Pacific, on which Company will fall practically the entire task of transporting the men to the West, is already making special arrangements for this year. Excursions from points in Ontario to Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta will be run and special trains operated, making the trip in about thirty-six hours and avoiding any change of cars or transfers. This will be a day shorter than any other route. Dates, rates and conditions will be announced in a few days. cod

STEAMSHIP COMPANIES TO BE PENALIZED

Immigrants Must Not Be Carried Without the Necessary $25

OTTAWA, Aug 8.—According to a new regulation of the immigration department steamship companies which bring immigrants to Canadian ports without the necessary $25 in their possession will be penalized.

Breach of the regulation has become very common on the St. Lawrence route, and as the companies are supposed to see that the immigrant has sufficient money before he sails, the Government will get after the shipowners.

More than a hundred such immigrants are now detained at Canadian ports. Another practice that has been stopped is that of allowings immigrants on arrival in port to send to relatives in Canada and get sufficient money to pass the immigration authorities.

WOMAN INVOLVED

Mysterious Female Appears in Hasson Case at Toronto.

TORONTO, Aug. 8.—Further inquiry into the Humber River mystery leads the county police to believe that a woman was more or less concerned in the brutal assault on Hugh Hassan, in a lonely bush at midnight last Monday. Evidence has been secured from a reliable source, tending to show that a fight occurred in the woods, and as a result of it Hassan sustained wounds which will cause his death.

Altho no direct clue connecting the woman with the crime has been secured, County Constable George Simpson has received information which places a peculiar aspect on the whole case. The officer is convinced that several other people know more about the affair than they have told, and he hopes to discover shortly just who these interested parties are.

Early Tuesday morning a resident of Swansea, who does not live very far from the lonely woods on the Humber, answered a knock at his door, and on opening it found a strange woman in torn clothing outside. In a broken voice the woman asked for the loan of clothes to get to the city. Noting the look of surprise on the man's face, the woman explained that she was not a resident of Swansea and must get to the city.

When asked how her clothes became torn, the woman stated that she had been out with a man when a fight occurred. The clothes were torn from her before she escaped. The people of the house understood her to say that someone was hurt, and that she had run away.

Hearing of the assault on Hassan the family communicated with County Constable Simpson. He went with a member of the family to the building and every woman who worked there was subjected to scrutiny as she received her pay. But it proved in vain. The woman did not work at the building.

Coupling the story which the woman told with what he already knew of the case Constable Simpson is inclined to believe that Hassan was in the fight referred to. As to what part the old man played the police are unable to say.

A RESTLESS SKULL.

This Ancient Headpiece Is Responsible For Appalling Noises.

A strange ghost story concerning Burton Agnes Hall, a grand old place near Bridlington, is recalled by the engagement of Lieut. Griffith Boynton, R.N., only son of Sir Griffith and Lady Boynton, of Barmston, Yorkshire, and Miss Naomi Nightingale, only child of Mr. and Mrs. H. E. Nightingale, of Cromwell road, Kensington. Burton Agnes is the ancestral seat of the Boyntons, but on the death of the late baronet, Sir Henry, in 1899, the property passed to his only daughter, now Mrs. Wickham-Boynton. Years ago the estate was inherited by three sisters, who, being very wealthy, decided to rebuild their old home.

Inigo Jones was, it is said, the architect, and Rubens is reported to have assisted with the decorations. An absorbing interest was taken in the building by the youngest sister, Anne Griffith, but one day she was brutally assaulted by a tramp and subsequently died. She made her sisters promise that her head should be removed at her death and kept in the house. They forgot to do as she had wished, with the result that the most appalling noises were heard in the house. In their perplexity the two sisters consulted the vicar, telling him of their sister's dying request. He agreed that it ought to be carried out, so the body was unearthed and the head removed to the house. The noises at once ceased.

Various generations from time to time tried to get rid of the head, but always the hideous noises recommenced, and continued till the gruesome relic was brought back. At last Sir Henry Boynton (Mrs. Wickham-Boynton's father) had the head cemented up in the wall of the great hall, behind a beautifully-carved screen which came from Barmston, the home of Sir Matthew Boynton, first baronet, who married Frances Griffith, sister of the murdered Anne, and since the skull has been "interred" the hauntings and manifestations have, it is said, entirely ceased. On the staircase at Burton Agnes is the painting of the sisters, and very quaint they look in ruffs and farthingales.

YOUNG WIFE'S STORY

Woman's Story of Treatment Gains Leniency From Judge.

KINGSTON, Aug. 7.—(Special.)— Mrs. Charlotte Meeks, arrested on a charge of bigamy preferred against her by Stuart Meeks of Rochester, N. Y., had a speedy trial. She was arraigned today before Acting Magistrate Mayor T. J. Rigney, pleaded guilty, was brought before Judge Price, and after taking her statement the judge allowed her to go on suspended sentence.

She told a story of ill-treatment on the part of her husband and said he would not support her. She said that he ran away from her, and that before he did so he gave their baby an overdose of laudanum, and the child died two weeks afterward. He also abused her by burning her with hot irons. At the time she married Patrick J. Brennan in Kingston she did not know where Meeks was and could not get trace of him. She thought he was dead.

Hamilton, Aug. 9.—The locals bested the Petes in yesterday's game by 5-2. But the locals had to hustle all through the contest as the Petes were fighting hard. The [illegible] are a very formidable organization and are always dangerous.

President McCaffery, of the Toronto Club, witnessed the game with a view to looking over the players.

EDWARD WESTON ENDS 1,546 MILE WALK

EDWARD PAYSON WESTON

Arriving on time and with an extra 100 miles to his credit beyond the distance he promised to cover when he set out, Edward Payson Weston, the veteran pedestrian, reached Minneapolis, Minn., from New York and was accorded a wonderful reception.

In just two months he has walked 1,546 miles. He left the metropolis on June 2, saying he would arrive here August 2. He changed his route so that he walked 100 miles more than he originally intended. He was able to do this by hard walking the first part of the way. When he reached Stillwater, Minn., July 29, he was four days ahead of his anticipated time.

A DIPLOMATIC KNOT.

It Wasn't Tied In a Tangle Just For the Fun of the Thing.

Ever since diplomacy was first invented its most eminent practitioners have expended their best efforts in mystifying if not in actually deceiving their rivals. Uber Land und Meer cites an amusing anecdote of diplomatic life in the eighteenth century.

In 1741 Count Bestnshew was sent by the emperor of Russia to Stockholm to put the question of war or peace to the Swedish government. Upon arriving the count made known his mission and then waited patiently for an answer.

Finally when he had almost given up hope of getting a reply he received a long communication from the Swedish minister of war. Eagerly Count Bestushew opened the letter, for he knew that it contained the long expected answer. But to his despair he found it so encumbered with official phrases and formalities that he could make nothing of its meaning. For two hours he struggled in vain to comprehend the confused document. Then he hastened to the minister of war.

"My dear Count Bestushew," said the minister when the count had explained his difficulty, "I have no authority to communicate to you orally the contents of this document. I could not think of it."

"But I have puzzled over this for two hours, and still I can make nothing of it."

"Pray, do not blame yourself, count," said the minister. "You could hardly expect to unravel in two hours a document that took me two days to knit and knot together."

HAD A TART TONGUE.

Northcote, the Painter, Was Not Overpowered by Royalty.

James Northcote, the English portrait painter, said fine things and malicious things almost in the same breath. "He is a bottle of aqua fortis," observed some one to Hazlitt, the first critic of his day, "that corrodes everything it touches."

"Except gold," said Hazlitt. "He never drops upon Sir Joshua or the great masters."

"Well, but is he not overflowing," persisted the other, "with envy, hatred and all uncharitableness? He is as spiteful as a woman—and then his niggardliness. Did he ever give away anything?"

"Yes, his advice," said Hazlitt, "and very unpleasant it is."

This is not the picture of a charming man, and yet Northcote was not without his redeeming virtues. For one thing, he was refreshingly free from the worship of mere prestige in an age when men were careful to apportion respect according to rank and station.

The Prince of Wales, when he was a young man, met the painter and was much pleased with his conversation.

"What do you know of his royal highness?" inquired Sir Joshua Reynolds later.

"Nothing," answered Northcote.

"Nothing, sir! Why, he says he knows you very well."

"Pooh!" said Northcote. "That's only his brag."

The president of the Royal academy smiled. "Bravely said," he muttered, "bravely said!"

Voluminous.

A blue book of 1,086 pages, weighing five pounds ten ounces, and published at the price of $2.10, which works out at 35 cents per pound, was issued the other day in Great Britain. It was the general consolidated index of the thirty-six volumes of reports, appendices, and minutes of the Poor Law Commissioners.

FORTY THOUSAND MEN REQUIRED

Farm Laborers' Excursions—This Year's Wheat Crop Will Be the Largest in the History of Canada.

The wheat crop of 1913 will be the greatest ever harvested in Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta, thus requiring the farm laborers of the East to recruit and assist in harvesting the World's greatest bread basket.

The Governments of the respective Provinces state that forty thousand men will be required for this year's harvest. These will have to be principally recruited from Ontario, and the prosperity of Canada depends on securing labor promptly. The Canadian Pacific, on which Company will fall practically the entire task of transporting the men to the West, is already making special arrangements for this year. Excursions from points in Ontario to Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta will be run and special trains operated, making the trip in about thirty-six hours and avoiding any change of cars or transfers. This will be a day shorter than any other route.

GOLD WATCH FOR MISS ADA DAVIS WHO TOOK HIGH MARKS

Large Gathering at Montgomery's School House for Interesting Event.

Rural Public School Section No. 10, Smith, better known as Montgomery's school house, standing at the side of the road 3 miles this side of Buckhorn, was the scene on Friday night of one of the largest and pleasantest gatherings ever held there. The occasion was the presentation by Mr. J. H. Burnham of the gold watch won for the township of Smith at the recent entrance examination by Miss Ada M. Davis, daughter of John H. Davis, North Smith Warden Garbutt, also Reeve of Smith, occupied the chair and welcomed the large and happy gathering in his usual pleasant way. He understood that there was to be a program after the presentation and would not take up further time than by saying that the public school was a great source of enlightenment and training and that people must do all they could to make it efficient. He then introduced Mr. Burnham, M.P., who called forward Miss Ada Davis and presented her with a fine ladies' double case gold watch which with its smooth polished surface looked very attractive in its purple velvet holder. The revival of interest in education and in our public schools," said the speaker, "should be the object of all those publicly concerned in the advancement of the interests of the people. To the farming population education is now much more important in a practical sense than ever before. Farming is being brought into line as one of the great, indeed the greatest, of our manufacturing industries It is no longer a vague indefinite source of food supply. The weather, the yield, the transportation, the available and probable supply are all watched in a systematic and commercial way from day to day. To enable the farmer to keep up with this marvelous development of both system and supply he has improved methods of farming rural mail, rural parcel post, telephones, etc. The farmer is right in line with all other forms of business and will in the future have to be even a better educated and better trained man than in the past. Heretofore many of the best trained young men and women from the country have gone to the centres where their training was of more use and found a greater scope. Gradually this is all being changed. The opportunities are now developing at home or on the farm. The extremely high cost of living is forcing public attention back on the farm. There will be a new era henceforth in farm life. The problem of farm help is yet to be satisfactorily solved, but that problem is practically the same both in the cities and the country. Everybody will have to lend a hand. In that way the inside as well as the outside work can be done. But the part the public school plays is always the most important. A good school means a bright, intelligent, capable, highly civilized community. A poor school means the reverse Gatherings like this used to serve the same purpose in years gone by. The custom is returning. It cannot come back too soon. We must take greater interest in our public schools. They are the most important link in the whole chain from beginning to end of active general life. The people meet on common ground there. They are not divided by either religion or politics. Popular education is a great, united, hearty, forward movement, or should be. It is not only a mistake to let it fall behind. It is a grave danger. The acquirement of knowledge and training is what makes a superior people. Its neglect, even partially, means an inferior people. Moreover, it best serves the people when all unite to a common end. It promotes solidarity and good-fellowship and power.

Miss Davis made a very pretty response in her speech of thanks for the gift.

Mr. G. C. Wainwright, manager of the Bank of Ottawa, also gave a short address.

ONE YEAR IN INDUSTRIAL SCHOOL FOR E. SHEARER

Sixteen Year Old Prisoner Tells Court it Was He Who Broke Into Manley's Store and Stole Money and Tobacco—His Older Brother Goes Free

"There is nothing in the evidence to convict Joseph Shearer, therefore I discharge him," said Judge Huycke at the conclusion of the Shearer case yesterday afternoon.

"I do not think that the Crown has proved Joseph guilty. Unfortunately Edward has told a different story. He accepts the whole blame maybe to shield his brother, and therefore it makes no conviction on Joseph."

"Joseph Shearer, stand up. I find you not guilty. You have a long list of convictions against you and your career is nothing to boast of. I understand you are at present on ticket of leave on a theft charge of two years ago."

After a few kindly words of advice by the Judge to Edward the 16 year old prisoner, he was sentenced to St. John's Industrial School for a period of on cyear.

EDWARD'S STORY.

Edward Shearer had pleaded guilty on Monday and he told the story of the theft from Manley's grocery store, when called to the stand, yesterday afternoon.

"We went home," said the prisoner, "after making an excuse I went out and went back to Manley's and opened the door with a key I had and going in I rifled the store. I then went home and hid the stuff."

Crown Attorney—How long did it take you to do the job?

Prisoner—Oh, about an hour.

Crown Attorney—Where was Joe?

Prisoner—He was asleep.

Prisoner admitted how he had lied to Detective Newhall in the police station, when he told him how he and Joe had rifled the store. Witness said that Detective Newhall told him that they would let his brother go if he told the truth.

Crown Attorney — Any witness present?

Prisoner—Yes, Meagher was there.

Crown Attorney—Was there anything said about getting money the night of the theft?

Prisoner—Nothing.

Judge Huycke—How did you know this key would fit the door of Manley's store?

Prisoner—I was certain.

During the trial prisoner was asked by the Crown Attorney to show how he managed to store away all the stolen goods in his pockets.

He replied he did not have the same clothes on.

Crown Attorney—Tell us how you spent all this money.

Prisoner—I gave Joe some money and told him he could pay me as soon as he could. Joe asked me where I got all the money, and I told him I got it for selling brooches.

When questioned concerning the brooches, it transpired that the prisoner was selling brooches for a company and was spending the money received for the sale of the brooches.

"I gave Joe the money to get changed in Nixon's and when he asked me where I got it, I told him it was from the sale of the brooches."

Crown Attorney—What made you tell all these lies?

Prisoner—They told me they would let me go if I told the truth.

Crown Attorney—And you told these lies, is that correct?

Trisoner—Yes.

P.C. Meagher in the box corroborated Detective Newhall's story.

Crown Attorney—Was there any promise made?

Witness—None whatever.

Newhall said to Joseph—How about the dollar the bartender changed for you?

Joe denied it and Newhall said to me, "Get the bartender and then Joe said, "never mind, you've got the goods on me."

Mr. Gordon—Why did you try to deceive the prisoner?

Witness—I didn't, its part of the business.

Mr. Gordon—We're you and Newhall trying to carry on the third degree?

Witness—Newhall told Eddie to tell the truth and have the thing settled.

Detective Newhall was recalled to the box.

Crown Attorney—Was there any promise made about letting them go?

Witness—None whatever. He has contradicted every statement he made to-day. I asked Joe about the dollar bill and he refused. When Meagher got up to get the bartender. Shearer admitted changing the dollar.

JOSEPH SHEARER.

Joseph Shearer, the prisoner, was next caled. He told how he had been working at McDonald's.

Mr. Gordon—Did you have anything to do with this theft?

Prisoner—None. I didn't have any part in it at all.

Crown Attorney—How many times have you been before the court?

Joe didn't know how many times he was arrested.

Crown Attorney—You've been in court numerous times since you were 10 years old.

Witness admitted that he was sentenced to two years on a theft charge once before. He said he was only 20 years of age.

Crown Attorney—Why did you leave McDonald's?

Prisoner—It was too hard work and then it's dangerous working there.

Crown Attorney—Where did you get these two nickels that were found in your pocket?

Prisoner—From Eddie.

Crown Attorney—Were you at Manley's shop?

Prisoner—What do you mean?

Shearer admitted being in the vicinity of the shop.

Crown Attorney—Why did you tell Detective Newhall that you got those nickels for selling fish?

Prisoner—I never said it.

Crown Attorney—Will you say that now?

Prisoner— I will, and I never told him such a thing.

Crown Attorney—Eddie told you what he had done on the river?

NORWOOD LOSES VALUED CITIZEN

The Passing of Mr. Richard W. Waters

The village of Norwood lost one of its best known business men and most highly respected citizens in the death of Richard W. Waters, which took place on the afternoon of Wednesday last, 6th inst.

The late Mr. Waters was born in the County of Northumberland, Ont., on Aug. 20th, 1833, and spent the whole of his life in his native province. His early years were spent in Northumberland. Subsequently he he resided for a short time in the township of North Monaghan, removing from there to what was then the town of Peterborough, where he lived for some years. While here he was associated in business with the late James Stevenson. Afterwards he removed to Norwood, where his business connections were for some years with S. J. Griffin, now of North Dakota, and the late P. W. Reynolds. About 25 years ago, in partnership with his son, C. W. Waters, he acquired the general business of the latter, which has since been carried on under the well known firm name of R. W. Waters & Son.

Though Mr. Waters had almost reached the ripe age of 80 years, he was able to take an active part in business until quite recently. For some months, however, failing health has confined him largely to his home, and for the past month he had been unable to leve his room.

In religion the subject of this sketch was a Methodist, and while taking no active part in the activities of his church, yet by his upright, consistent life, and his unfailing loyalty to principle, he manifested all his high character and faith in the things that make for right living.

Politically Mr. Waters was always a strong supporter of the principles of Liberalism, and to the very end of his life he was keenly interested in public affairs. His naturally retiring disposition and devotion to business prevented his ever taking a prominent part in public life, but he served for some years, with credit to himself and profit to the community, on the Norwood Board of Education, in the work of which he was always keely interested.

Mr. Waters married in 1857 Katharine Fleming, daughter of the late James Fleming, of Percy, who five years ago preceded him to the world beyond. Four children survive, Mr. C. W. Waters, of Norwood, Mrs. R. Leea, Peterborough; Mrs. N. Pickard, Port Arthur, and Miss Edith, Norwood.

TEX McLEOD WITH SELLS-FLOTO CIRCUS

During the annual visit of the Sells Floto Circus to this city, its management announces that it will present amongst its other meritorious attractions. Tex McLeod, Champion Trick and Fancy Roper of the world.

Every man, woman and child who can spell horse knows Tex McLeod as an exponent of the mighty horse riding people of the West. he is without a peer, and he gave us a taste of his quality at the great Stampede at Calgary last Autumn, when he won the championship over all comers, carrying with the title the Gold Belt and the first prize of five hundred dollars in cash.

McLeod has an unbeaten record. At Elko, Nevada, July 4th, 1912, he won the silver mounted saddle in the bucking contest for the Championship of the West. At Cheyenne the following August he won first prize and Championship of the World in the Wild Horse race. And as before stated, at Calgary won the Championship and Gold Belt for trick and fancy roping. He will be seen here here at all the performances of the Sells Floto Circus, and has been granted leave of absence to attend the big Stampede at Winnipeg in August. Meantime, if there are any ambitious ropers or riders connected with rival organizations or otherwise, the money of the Sells Floto Circus is behind Tex McLeod, whose management will back him for any amount to meet all comers. 17

BIG CELEBRATION AT HAMILTON

All roads will lead to Hamilton next week when the Centennial Celebration and Industrial Exposition will be held. Hamilton Old Boys from all parts of the continent will be home for the occasion and it promises to be the greatest week the city has ever witnessed since it was founded 100 years ago. An extensive program, covering the entire week, has been arranged for the thousands of old boys and visitors who will be there and it will be a case of dignity and frivolity combined for while all kinds of arrangements have been for amusement, the big industrial show will give visitors an idea of the extensive manufacturing centre that this city has become. The city has assumed a holiday appearance already, the buildings, stores and private residences being gaily decorated for the occasion while the electrical illuminations are beautiful.

The streets in the centre of the city will be thrown open to the big carnival attractions and the program calls for the fun to start at nine o'clock each morning. The hotels and private houses have made special arrangements for the accommodation of the large crowds and it looks as though every person will be able to get a bed and a meal despite the fact that the population of the city will be nearly doubled during the week. The old boys from the West will arrive on Saturday night and the Detroit and Cleveland delegations accompanied by bands will arrive on Sunday. Single fare rates will be given on all railroads and a visit to this city next week will be money well spent. 17

HAMILTON INAUGURATES CENTENNIAL CELEBRATION

Twenty-Five Thousand Visitors Have Arrived in the Mountain City and Streets Present an Air of Festivity—Sir John Gibson Formally Opens the Week of Merry-Making.

HAMILTON, Aug. 11.—(Special.)—For the past five hours Hamilton has been trying to remember what things were like before the storm broke on this the first day of Centennial Week. It can't be done. Last night Hamilton was a city, tonight it is just a merry riot. The mountain city, which for a hundred years has been growing up, is showing what it can do when father and mother are not looking. James street and the Gore are, of course, the centres of celebration.

It is impossible to get away from it. The narrowest streets are the most crowded, and after a few hours on the sidewalk you feel lost unless someone else is treading on your heels or blowing a horn in your ears. It is intoxicating to be in the crowd, jostling and jostled in the midst of a medley of discord that drowns out the band. Before darkness fell you could see that the streets were decorated with banners and bunting, but now it is all lights and joyous, thronging along in groups of two and three and five. No one is alone. Conventions are thrown away, for it is carnival, and it only comes once in a century.

Twenty-five thousand visitors have arrived already and 1500 are on the way; hotel accommodation has been growing scarcer all day, until bed and board are hardly to be had at all. Hamilton hotels were only built to house 14,000.

SAMUEL BARKER, M.P.
President of 1903 Carnival and Old Boys' Reunion

Centennial week was formally opened at 11 this morning, when Sir John Gibson, with a knife of gold, cut the barrier of ribbon which guarded the gate to the armories. Simultaneously all over the city whistles and bells loosed their jargon of sound and the crowds [illegible] along every street felt an [illegible] as each resident and old boy felt that the big week, so long expected, was at last fairly under way.

Nearly all the business houses closed down shortly after 1, and very soon Main street and James street, near the Gore, were almost blocked. Instead of lorries and drays, automobiles held the right of way, and it was a strenuous session for the police traffic squad. Ferris wheels, palaces of fun, and all varieties of amusements were in course of erection in the public squares and at street intersections, and band music seemed to be everywhere.

The armories, where an enormous exhibit of Hamilton-made articles is on view, has not drawn much of a crowd since dark. It is the entrance ways to the animal shows and pleasure devices which are packed, these and the city hall steps, where hundreds pause each moment to rest for awhile, away from the swirl of the curb. In a moment they are back again, tho, for it is as fascinating as a snake's rise. There is no lawlessness. The town is wide open for pleasure, but not for misdemeanor.

False mustaches, wigs and masks are frequent. One man wears a big sun bonnet, another comes a bright colored parasol, a foot in diameter, still a third has featherpuff in each hand with which he tickles the neck of each pretty girl that passes and there are thousands of them. The girls are not mere spectators either, they take the offensive in hundreds of cases, tipping off stiff straw sailors and showering the crowd with confetti. On the first night of Carnival, no one will be still. Now as it draws to midnight, the packed area contracts, but there is no thinning out of the crush.

It is hard to realize that such tumult and abandon is to continue for six days, but so much as a program committee can do has been done, and energetically.

Tomorrow afternoon, at Britannia Park, a two-storey brick house is to be built and decorated within the space of a few hours. Mayor Allan will lay the cornerstone, and the house will be given as a prize to the winner of a guessing competition. Aviation flights will be of daily occurrence. On Thursday evening 20 bands will enliven a military tattoo at the cricket grounds, for which every seat has been sold already. Games and races will figure largely in Friday's program, and the centennial will work itself up to a climax Saturday evening, when King Carnival will hold sway in the centre of the city.

Became Fascinated With Dog.

DENVER, Col., Aug. 11.—A novel contest was started today over the will of Alfred H. Miles, a Colorado pioneer millionaire and nonagenarian, by his grandchildren. The contestants charge that the love for a little dog was instrumental in causing the aged pioneer to give his estate to a brother. They charge that the old man became fascinated with a dog; that he would sit for hours and caress the little animal; that this affection became a mania with him, and that the brother took advantage of this affection and compelled the nonagenarain to execute the will before he would permit him to have the companionship of the animal.

The contestants are Emma Marshall, granddaughter; Eula Garrish, great granddaughter, and William A. Garrish, great grandson.

CODY IS BURIED.

British Aviator's Body Interred With Military Honors.

ALDERSHOT, Aug. 11.—(Can. Press).—The body of F. S. Cody, the Anglo-American aviator who was killed here in a hydro-aeroplane accident on Aug. 7, was buried with military honors in the soldiers' cemetery here this afternoon. Enormous crowds lined the route of the funeral procession, paying a splendid tribute to the popularity of the dead airman.

The coffin was mounted on a gun carriage and covered with the Union Jack. It was followed to the grave by contingents of all arms and the full strength of the royal flying corps. As it passed the various barracks in the camp the troops turned out and stood with bared heads.

The pipers of the famous Black Watch (the 42nd Highlanders) headed the procession, playing a Scottish "lament," while the bands of the other regiments played funeral marches.

The only military feature omitted from the funeral was the firing of volley over the grave.

Sweden Conceded Rights.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 11.—(Can. Press.)—Sweden was today conceded the right to send wood pulp and paper into the U. S. free of duty. The state and treasury departments have decided that the recent decision of the customs court that nations having "most favored nation" treaties with the U. S. were entitled to free wood pulp and paper, because that privilege was granted to Canada, is applicable in principle to Sweden. Claims of other countries not directly parties to the customs court suit are under consideration by the government. Russia will not be given free entry, because of the abrogation of the treaty of commerce and navigation of 1832.

Little Girl Shot.

KINGSTON, Ont., Aug. 11.—(Special.)—While fooling with a revolver a 17-year-old Barnardo Home boy shot and killed a girl from the same home at the residence of David Leacock, North Crosby township. The boy says he was fooling with the revolver, but a message from the scene of the tragedy to Kingston states that the coroner will hold an inquest, as he is not satisfied about the story. The shooting occurred late Saturday night. The little girl who met her death was nine years of age.

Toronto Men Saved.

BROCKVILLE, Aug. 11.—(Special.)—Caught in a squall, a sailboat owned by J. L. Upham, containing Mrs. Upham and her two guests, Douglas Seton Thompson and Wilfrid Izzard of Toronto, capsized on the river near the American shore.

All the occupants could swim, and tho a heavy sea pounded over the craft they managed to cling to it until picked up by a motorboat.

MISS DUNCAN BECOMES A J.P.

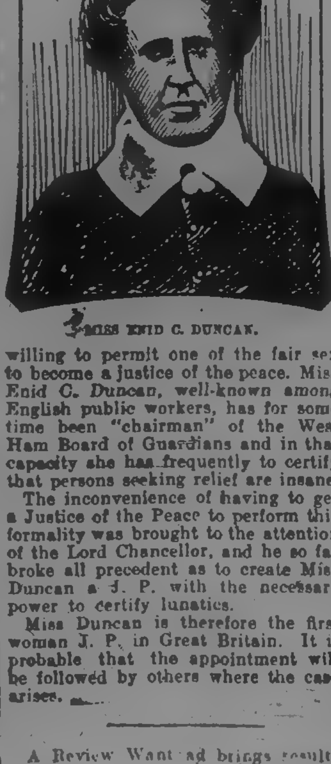
Lord Chancellor Has So Far Modified the Prejudice Against Women In Legal Positions In England as To Give "Chairman" of West Ham Board of Guardians Power To Certify Lunatics.

Britain has been slow to grant legal offices to women, and for years a war has waged over the right of a woman to become a lawyer. Miss Christabel Pankhurst tried and was barred out, and recently a young woman sued the legal profession to force them to admit her to their ranks and allow her to practice as a barrister.

Despite this objection to women lawyers, the British Government seems willing to permit one of the fair sex to become a justice of the peace. Miss Enid C. Duncan, well-known among English public workers, has for some time been "chairman" of the West Ham Board of Guardians and in that capacity she has frequently to certify that persons seeking relief are insane.



MISS ENID C. DUNCAN.

The inconvenience of having to get a Justice of the Peace to perform this formality was brought to the attention of the Lord Chancellor, and he so far broke all precedent as to create Miss Duncan a J. P. with the necessary power to certify lunatics.

Miss Duncan is therefore the first woman J. P. in Great Britain. It is probable that the appointment will be followed by others where the case arises.

PASTOR TO OPEN "SPOONING PARLORS" IN CHURCH.

THE REV JOHN R. GUNN

This is the Rev. John R. Gunn, pastor of the North Baptist Church, New York, who will open "spooning parlors" to bring young men and women together with a view of promoting matrimony. Mr. Gunn will have a tactful chaperon within call, a piano to stir sentimentality, a safe as reminder that marriage means thrift or disaster, expert advice on how to propose and every other wholesome aid that his fellow man may suggest.

DEBATE ON PROPOSED UNSEATING OF SULZER

Report of Frawley Legislative Committee Charging New York State Governor With Diverting Campaign Funds is Adopted by the Legislature—Throngs in Chamber Witness Scene.

ALBANY, N.Y., Aug. 12.—(Can. Press.)—The report of the Frawley legislative committee, charging Gov. Sulzer with having diverted campaign contributions to his own private use was adopted by the legislature early today and a resolution to impeach him for "wilful and corrupt conduct in office and for high crimes and misdemeanors," was offered in the assembly by Majority Leader Levy.

The Frawley committee report and the Levy resolution charge the governor with having falsified under oath his campaign contribution account, diverted some of the funds to his own use for the purchase of stocks, traded executive approval of bills for support of his direct primary measure and having done everything in his power to obstruct the committee's efforts to bring proof of his alleged misconduct to light.

The adoption of the report carries with it a recommendation that Louis A. Sarecky and Frederick L. Colwell, who refused to answer certain questions propounded by the committee's counsel, be held in contempt of the legislature and punished. Sarecky and Colwell are characterized in the report as Governor Sulzer's dummies.

Never in the history of the state has her chief executive been impeached.

After introducing his resolution to impeach, Assemblyman Levy asked that its consideration be postponed until today. This motion was opposed by Minority Leader Hinman, who had championed the governor's cause, and by Assemblyman Sharp, leader of the progressives.

The fight in the senate over the adoption of the report was brief, the session lasting but 45 minutes. The upper house was dark long before the question came to a vote in the crowded assembly chamber. For two hours there a crowd that thronged every niche and cranny of the big chamber stood patiently and silently—save one occasion—waiting for the vote.

The light in the library of the executive mansion was burning low and the rest of the big house was dark when the assembly voted to receive the report. Gov. Sulzer had waited there all evening, contrary to his usual practice of visiting the capitol when the legislature is in session, and heard the news over the telephone. He made no comment thereon.

Before the sun sets today the governor will be impeached, the majority leaders assert.

NEW ZEALAND LEAVES.

Last Courtesies Paid to Battleship at Victoria, B. C.

VICTORIA, Aug. 11.—(Can. Press.)—The last interchange of courtesies between British Columbia and the battle cruiser New Zealand were performed on Saturday on board the warship just before she steamed out on her way to San Francisco.

There were speeches by Sir Richard McBride in handing over a message sent by Premier R. L. Borden on behalf of Canada as a whole, by Lieut.-Gov. Patterson, in presenting a loving cup to the ship in token of its visit to these waters, and by Capt. L. Halsey in response.

Thousands of persons, displaying the carnival spirit, were aboard craft of every conceivable size and shape, following in the wake of the New Zealand as the warship, shortly after 5 o'clock, majestically steamed out of Esquimalt Harbor to the cheers from the massed crews on the U. S. S. West Virginia, H. M. C. S. Rainbow, H.M.S. Shearwater and deafening good-byes from the hundreds of throats of those who lined the waterfront. The New Zealand will visit Halifax in Octobe.

Thirteen Killed by Slide.

COLON, Aug. 11.—(Can. Press.)—Thirteen men were killed today by an unexpected slide at the Portobello quarry, which completely buried a steamshovel in the neighborhood in which they were working. The dead omprise Charles Nyland, and American, and 12 colored powder men, dr[illegible] and pit men.

Dr. Belisario Porras, the president of Panama, sent his condolences to Nyland's widow.

Octogenarian Dead.

KINGSTON, Aug. 11.—(Special.)—Mrs. McCormick, aged 82, is dead. Tomorrow, the day of her funeral, will mark the fifty-fifth anniversary of the day she and her husband moved into their home on Centre street, which they occupied continuously. Sixty-four years ago she was married to her husband, who survives.

Fatal Panic in Movey.

VALENCIA, Spain, Aug. 11.—(Can. Press.)—Forty-nine persons were seriously hurt today at Gandia, a town in the Province of Valencia, near the Mediterranean, as the result of a panic which occurred in a crowded moving picture theatre. A slight outbreak of fire caused the audience to rush blindly towards the exits and of those hurt in the tremendous crush, fourteen are believed tonight to be dying.

Fatally Injured in Runaway.

DUTTON, Aug. 11.—(Special.)—While unloading grain at the mill this morning a barn belonging to Nason D. Graham of Dunwich became frightened and ran away. Mr. Graham, in heading them off, was thrown under the wagon, the wheels passing over his head, breaking his jaw in two places. Little hope is held out for his recovery.

SAWMILL AT OMEMEE BURNS

Omemee, Aug. 12.—Courtney's saw and shingle mill was completely destroyed by fire yesterday afternoon. There is no insurance.

The shingles and lumber consumed were the property of customers.

TENSION RELAXES.

Situation in Mexico City is Considerably Relieved.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 11.—(Can. Press).—Distinct relief was apparent in official circles here today over the course of events in Mexico. The statement of Frederico Gamboa, the new Mexican minister of foreign relations, that he had "great faith in the reasonableness of the judgment of the United States," holding the conviction that the difficulties between the two countries "soon would be adjusted," produced a very favorable impression in administration circles.

President Wilson pointed out during the day to callers what seemed to him conspicuous efforts on the part of some people unknown to him, thru published misrepresentations, to involve the United States in intervention. He reiterated that the attitude of this government toward Mexico in the present situation was one of peace and friendliness solely.

The safe arrival in Mexico City of John Lind, personal representative and officially designated adviser to the American embassy, ended some tense moments in the situation. Administration officials tonight looked forward hopefully to a favorable reception of their efforts to suggest measures of peace in ending the struggle between the contending factions in Mexico.

With the air cleared of rumors of hostility in the Mexican capital to Mr. Lind's presence there, officials were disposed to believe the program of the American Government would be carried out quietly and in such a manner as seemed most expedient to Mr. Lind and the embassy at Mexico City.

Capt. Capehart of the battleship Michigan, which proceeded last Thursday from Vera Cruz to Ciudad del Carmen, as the result of a complaint to the state department by Mrs. Phoebe Hearst, that rebels were threatening American life and property in the region of her ranch near that place, has reported "that American subjects are not in danger; American subjects have not been threatened; and American subjects and foreign subjects have received proper protection from the Mexican authorities."

WEDDING CEREMONY WAS CALLED OFF BY POLICE

PROSPECTIVE BRIDE SWEET SIXTEEN

Her Home is in Peterboro—Now Her Choice is Charged with Perjury.

Cobourg's recent marriage sensation hasn't anything on Port Hope's program of Saturday evening, says the Guide. In fact, this town seems determined not to allow Cobourg to lead in any particular. Of course groom to be, now a prisoner, may not have all the nice things said about him like Mr. Aull, of Cobourg, nor the society ladies are not likely to shower him with bouquets. But we are going to have the Police Court case nevertheless.

It was on Saturday evening last that love's young dream received such a rude jolt. The time was the present, the scene was at the home of Mr. Wooddock, Margaret street. The groom to be was William Henry Franklin Dixon, of Port Hope, engaged on the C.N.R.; the bride was Clara Saddler, of Peterborough. Clara had arrived in that town that day and all arrangements were completed for the ceremony, the marriage to take place at 7.30 o'clock.

The minister was in waiting and the ceremony might have been over had not the groom remained down town a little too long inviting a few of his friends to attend. As it was everything was in readiness and the nuptial knot was all but tied when Chief Gommerson stepped in and brought things to a sudden stop. The Chief had learned that the bride to be was only 16 years of age, and was being married without the knowledge of her father. Not being like the most of the fair ones, she would have liked to add a few years to her age, but it was no use, and while standing under the arch of evergreen and facing the minister, she admitted that sweet sixteen was correct. The groom was dumbfounded, and he threw himself into a chair to brood over his disappointment.

Yesterday a warrant was issued charging Dixon with perjury, in that the said Dixon did not swear to a marriage license that a young girl Clara Saddler was of the age of 16 years. Mr. Chisholm, representing the Crown, asked for a remand until Wednesday, and the same was granted. The prisoner gives his age as 28, but he looks more like 40.

Dixon and the Saddler girl were the principals in a Police Court case here last spring, when the evidence gave the impression that Dixon wished to marry the girl.

Police Chief Thompson was notified of this recent case, and he informed the girl's father, who went to Port Hope to take charge of his daughter.

Want Subsidy for Dry-Dock.

OTTAWA, Aug. 11.—(Can. Press.)—The Amalgamated Drydock and Engineering Company of Vancouver is applying to the department of public works for a subsidy for the construction at Vancouver of a floating drydock to cost $2,500,000. The dock will be capable of accommodating the largest class of vessels now doing business on the Pacific Coast, and as it is necessary the promoters will receive the encouragement of the Dominion Government. The chief engineer of the department of public works will make a report on the plans of the company as soon as they are filed with the department.

Lightning Losses.

GALT, Aug. 11.—(Special.)—William Harkness, a farmer on the West River road, had his barn struck by lightning yesterday and destroyed, together with a large amount of grain and costly implements. His horses were saved, but the pigs and fowl cremated. Loss was $8000, partly insured.

John W. Riddle, 9th concession of Beverly, suffered a loss of several cattle by lightning.

Rebels Hope to Take Hankow.

HANKOW, China, Aug. 11.—(Can. Press.)—An army of 25,000 rebels from the province of Hu-Nan marched yesterday from Yo-Chow with the professed intention of capturing Hankow and proceeding thence to Pekin. A further shipload of northern troops completing a force consisting of probably 8,000 men was sent from Hankow on the way to Sinti in the province of Hu-Peh, where the Hunanese rebels are preparing to make a stand. It is believed here that the northern army will be successful owing to the fact that the Hunanese are largely untrained recruits.

Bad Spot Wrecks Third Auto.

GALT, Aug. 11.—(Special.)—John Haas of Caledonia, one of a party of five autoists driving to Berlin, lies in Galt Hospital with a fractured spine as a result of an upset between Preston and Freeport, where their car encountered a piece or road newly patched with gravel. The machine skidded and rolled over an embankment. The other occupants escaped unhurt. The injured man is a resident of Galt. He is paralyzed from his waist down and has little chance of recovery. Three serious upsets have occurred this season at the spot mentioned, and suits for damages are in prospect.

Skull Fractured by Anchor.

KINGSTON, Aug. 11.—(Special.)—Wm. Bridson, Lachine, was badly injured while working for Fallon Bros. in the construction of the causeway for the new Cataraqui bridge. With other workmen he was engaged lowering the anchor of the dredge when a pin which holds it in place slipped. The anchor fell back and struck Bridson and fractured his skull.

GERMANY, AUSTRIA AND ITALY ARE PREY TO DISSENSIONS

PROGRESS IS SLOW.

Underwood Tariff Bill in U. S. Senate is Hard Fought.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 11.—(Special).—Democratic leaders in the senate are considerably perturbed over the failure to make progress on the tariff bill, and for several days informal conferences have been held with progressive Republicans and regular Republican leaders in the hope that some means to hasten consideration might be found. It was stated tonight, however, that nothing definite had been accomplished.

For the purpose of sounding Republican sentiment in the matter, Democratic leaders have enquired what progress could be made on the tariff, should it be definitely agreed that the senate would not take up the currency bill at the present session. No assurances, it was reported, were given as to a definite time for voting on the tariff, but it was asserted by minority leaders that such an assurance undoubtedly would lead to earlier action on the tariff.

Certain suggestions also have been made as to possible amendments affecting wheat, barley and other agricultural rates, but minority members were not disposed to bargain, because they could receive no assurances of confidential action on amendments of this character.

The informal negotiations gave rise to a rumor that currency legislation would not be insisted upon at the special session, but this was declared to be entirely without foundation in so far as the views of the president and a majority of the Democratic senators were concerned.

Warden Takes No Chances.

KINGSTON, Aug. 11.—(Special.)—The warden of the penitentiary is not inclined to take any chances with the Stony Mountain desperadoes given long terms in the prison for making an escape last fall. For months these four men, accompanied by McNeill, a Woodstock youth implicated in the escape, were kept in close confinement, but just recently McNeill, Brown and Kelly have been taken from the confinement ward, and are working in the shops in the prison. McNeill is working in the shoe shop, while the other two are learning the stone cutting trade. Bonner and Jones are still looked upon as too dangerous to be at large, and are still kept in close confinement.

German Emperor is Alleged to Have Said That He Did Not Want Austria to Rattle With His Sword—Kaiser's Congratulations to King Charles of Roumania Sign of German Policy.

VIENNA, Aug. 11.—A dark cloud has been hanging over the triple alliance for some time, and anxiety is shown in well informed quarters over the development of the dissensions that have arisen between Austria and Germany, and to some extent Italy.

The origin of these differences is betrayed in an utterance attributed to the German Emperor:

"I do not want Austria to rattle with my sword."

Whether he really said this or not, the fact is that the recent course of Austria's policy, particularly her efforts for a revision of the Bucharest treaty, was adopted without the approval of Germany and even with German disapproval.

Emperor William's congratulatory telegram to King Charles and his decorations of Premier Majorko, altho Roumania sided with Servia and Greece, and his making King Constantine a field marshal in the German army, are visible expressions of the new direction which German policy is taking on the Balkan question, all of which is causing great uneasiness in Vienna.

Nothing Else to Do But Recognize Huerta, Says Britain.

LONDON, Aug. 11.—(Can. Press).—The British Government, nettled by the comment of certain American newspapers concerning Great Britain's recognition of President Huerta, declares that the comment is based on a misconception of facts. It also repudiates the insinuation that the influence of powerful financial interests were used in bringing about recognition. In a statement issued today the government says:

"The recognition of President Huerta was the recognition of a provisional president pending an election. It was done on the advice of the British minister to Mexico, as being likely to assist in the restoration of order—an important consideration, in view of the large British interests involved.

"The French and German Governments also recognized President Huerta after a reception by him of the whole diplomatic party, at which a congratulatory speech was made in their behalf by the American ambassador."

DEPUTIES BETTER.

U. S. Regulars at Calumet Will Be Replaced by Sheriffs.

CALUMET, Mich., Aug. 11.—(Can. Press.)—One thousand of the 2,500 troops which have occupied the copper mining district of Northern Michigan are on their way home and their places will be filled by armed deputies. The sheriff has recruited his forces up to about 1,000, and believes he will be able to take care of the strike situation unless there comes a severe clash between strikers and the men returning to work.

The strikers renewed their pickets today around Calumet and Hecla and the Quincy mines, where it was reported work was to be started, but only pumpmen and shaftmen were sent underground, and the pickets did not try to stop them. An attempt will be made to resume actual mining to-morrow.

Killed in Auto Wreck.

MONTREAL, Aug. 11.—(Can. Press.)—Mrs. Ovenden, wife of R. R. Ovenden, secretary of the Cartier Centenary Memorial committee of Montreal, was instantly killed near Knowlton, Que., this afternoon when a 100 horse-power automobile, in which she was riding, turned turtle. Mrs. Ovenden was accompanied by her brother-in-law, Z. V. Martin, a wealthy paint manufacturer of Chicago, Mrs. Martin and their son, who was driving the car.

Mrs. Ovenden's head struck a huge boulder at the roadside, and while the other occupants of the car were badly shaken up they escaped serious injury.

LONDON, Aug. 11.—(Can. Press).—An effort to resurrect British participation in the Panama-Pacific Exposition at San Francisco was made in the house of commons this afternoon by Col. George A. Gibbs, a Unionist member. Col. Gibbs asked Sydney Buxton, president of the board of trade, for his reasons for withholding British official recognition of the exposition. He put the following question:

"In view of the importance attached to the Panama-Pacific Exposition by Americans, will the board of trade reconsider its decision?"

Mr. Buxton referred his questioner to Sir Edward Grey's reply as fully covering the official view of the matter, and held out no promise of reconsideration of the British Government's attitude.

JAPAN IS EMBARRASSED.

Presence of Chinese Rebels in Country Causes Trouble.

TOKIO, Japan, Aug. 11.—(Can. Press).—The Japanese Government is somewhat embarrassed by the presence in Japan of Dr. Sun Yat Sen and Gen. Huang Sing, leaders of the recent Chinese rebellion, both of whom arrived in disguise. The government was at first disposed to refuse them permission to land, but eventually consented to their doing so, in view of the fact that if they were deported to China, where a price was set on their heads, it certainly meant their arrest and death.

It is reported that Dr. Sun Yat Sen does not intend to proceed to the United States, as at first stated, but will try to gather funds to continue the campaign against Provisional President Yuan Shi Kai.

WHAT GERMANY THINKS OF THE SENATE

However Liberals may regard the rejection of the Naval Aid Bill by the Senate, and try to explain away its effect upon the naval world there is no doubt in the mind of the German press that Canada has given the Mother Country a snub.

The Kreuz-Zeitung (Berlin) says: "The Senate of Canada has refused the much discussed and desired three Dreadnoughts for the English fleet and thereby the solution of the question as far as the Dominion is concerned, has been postponed until the bill is brought in afresh."

Another German paper says: "Whatever may be decided upon later, the actual decision of the Canadian Senate means a heavy moral and material loss for the defence of the Empire; for Mr. Borden's promise had been foolishly enough counted on. His offer made an enormous impression upon the whole world. Mr. Churchill pointed out this fact especially in the well-known memorandum of the Admiralty. This impression will not only be destroyed but people will everywhere obtain the conviction that England cannot depend upon such help from he colonies."

So far no reply to these comments have appeared in Canadian Liberal journals, who have claimed all along that the action of the Senate made no difference and that Germany was absolutely passive in the matter.

These German views, while they are mild and good mannered enough at least show that Germany is jealously watching the relations between Canada and Great Britain. Canada as a nation must give the li to the Senate's message to Germany and at an early moment substantiate the promise given through the mouth of the Prime Minister.

PETER ON HOLIDAY

The civic holiday is over, and with the delightful weather and the excellent facilities which Peterborough provides for many and various means of enjoyment, Peter and his wife and little Peter are now looking back upon it, and feeling all the better for a pleasant day off.

The boats were very crowded going to the different points and many turned away disappointed at not being able to find room, but these no doubt found ample compensation in other directions.

One pretty feature of our city life on holidays is to see the many people, fathers and mothers, whole families, and, of course, young men and maidens, marching off with baskets and hampers to the parks and to the riverside haunts, to sit down to feast under the blue canopy of heaven.

Canadians are an open-air people and while they remain so they will keep their minds and bodies clean. In many countries there is a tendency to abuse holidays and make them a time of revelry and excess instead of recreation and pure delight.

Called to Account.

He had a grievance that was deep.
She had most flagrantly deceived him.
He had been robbed of rest and sleep
Her wayward conduct had aggrieved him
For him the world had lost its cheer,
And, filled with fearful agitation,
He sought her door at last to hear
Her explanation.

He stood before her and revealed
The wretchedness that had oppressed him
With words that on his lips congealed
He told the truths that had distressed him.
His cheeks were pale; his throat was dry;
His speech was thick; his tongue was furry.
She heard him through and in reply
Said, "I should worry."

The small boy tiptoed obediently up the stairs. Pausing at the top, he called his mother in guarded but distinct accents and explained as she came into the lower hall:

"I just wanted to know, in case I had to call you, whether this voice would be loud enough to wake grandma!"—Exchange.

FORTY THOUSAND MEN REQUIRED

Farm Laborers' Excursions—This Year's Wheat Crop Will Be the Largest in the History of Canada.

The wheat crop of 1913 will be the greatest ever harvested in Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta, thus requiring the farm laborers of the East to recruit and assist in harvesting the World's greatest bread basket.

The Governments of the respective Provinces state that forty thousand men will be required for this year's harvest. These will have to be principally recruited from Ontario, and the prosperity of Canada depends on securing labor promptly. The Canadian Pacific, on which company will fall practically the entire task of transporting the men to the West, is already making special arrangements for this year. Excursions from points in Ontario to Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta will be run and special trains operated, making the trip in about thirty-six hours and avoiding any change of cars or transfers. This will be a day shorter than any other route.

CATTLE MARKETS

MONTREAL LIVE STOCK.

MONTREAL, Aug. 11.—At the Montreal stock yards, West End Market, receipts of live stock for the week ended Aug. 9 were 1600 cattle, 900 sheep and lambs, 2400 hogs and 1000 calves. For sale today 1160 cattle, 1800 sheep and lambs, 1250 hogs and 525 calves.

There was no important change in the condition of the market for cattle today, but the feeling was easy, owing to the increased offerings of the medium and common class, and the fact that the demand from packers was somewhat limited for all grades, as they carried over from last week a larger stock of dressed beef than usual on account of warm weather. Choice steers sold at high as $7, but the bulk of the trade in choice stock was done at $6.25 to $6.50 per cwt.

Owing to large supply of lambs the tone of the market was weaker and prices showed a decline of 25c per cwt. Local buyers paid $6.75 to $7 for western, and $6.25 to $6.50 for Quebec stock. Sheep were quiet and about steady at $4.50 for ewes. The demand for calves was good and sales of milk-fed stock were made at 5¼c, and grass fed at 3½c per pound.

The feature of the hog trade is the weaker feeling which has developed in the market since this day week, and prices have declined 25 to 30c per cwt, owing to increased receipts.

Butchers' cattle, choice, $6.50 to $6.75; medium, $5 to $6, common, $4 to $4.25; canners, $5 to $5.25; butchers' cattle, choice cows, $5 to $5.25, medium, $4 to $4.50, bulls, $4.25 to $5.50; milkers, choice, $70 to $75 each; common and medium, $60 to $65 each, springers, $50 to $70; sheep, ewes, $4.50; bucks and culls, $4 to $4.25; lambs, $6.25 to $7; hogs, f.o.b., $10.50 to $10.70; calves, $3 to $10.

CHICAGO LIVE STOCK.

CHICAGO, Aug. 11.—Cattle—Receipts 14,500; market, strong; beeves, $7.20 to $9.20, Texas steers, $6.85 to $7.90; stockers and feeders, $5.40 to $7.75; cows and heifers, $3.65 to $8.60, calves, $8.25 to $11.25.

Hogs—Receipts, 35,000; market, steady, light, $8.50 to $9.35, mixed, $8.10 to $9.30; heavy, $8.75 to $9, rough, $7.50 to $8.05; pigs, $4.75 to $5.50, bulk of sales, $8.30 to $8.85.

Sheep—Receipts, 37,000, market, lower, native, $3.80 to $4.85, yearlings, $5.10 to $5.85, lambs, native, $7.25 to $7.40.

LONDON, Aug. 11. (C.A.P.)—Lord Haldane's appellate jurisdiction bill, which already has been approved by the house of lords, and which provides for two additional judges to sit on the judicial committee of the privy council, passed its third reading in the commons last night. The amendment to reduce the number to one was rejected by a large majority.

This curious prize was instituted by a woman named Guzman, who died in 1899 and left the money for founding it in her will. The reason why Mme Guzman excepted the planet Mars is not explained. She may have thought this task too easy of accomplishment to be rewarded with [illegible]

COLD WATER TOO MUCH

Bandit Gave Up to Sheriff After a Long Dip.

PORTLAND, Ore., Aug. 10.—A lone robber who entered the First State Bank of Milwaukee, a suburb of Portland, shortly after noon yesterday and with a revolver induced the cashier, A. L. Bolstead, to permit him to scoop up all the gold within reach of the latter's wicket, was captured later in the woods, some miles distant.

He gave the name of Virgil Perrine and said he was from St. Louis. He is twenty years old.

After fleeing from the bank, with citizens in pursuit, the robber on gaining the woods hid himself by standing submerged to the neck in an encased spring. He remained there for two hours, until the chill of the water drove him from his hiding place into the hands of the sheriff. The robber's loot, about $500 in gold, was found in his pockets, with the exception of $40 he dropped in his flight.

Tuberculosis Among Dogs.

PARIS, Aug. 11.—The French Academy of Medicine is discussing the spreading of tuberculosis by dogs. It is estimated that from 12,000 to 18,000 tubercular dogs are running loose in the Paris streets out of a total dog population of 200,000.

It is found that dogs give tuberculosis to cats. A special study has been made of the presence of dogs in restaurants. A long study of tuberculosis in horses shows that it is extremely rare, with the minimum of transmission to man.

Chinese Government Victorious.

SHANGHAI, Aug. 10.—(Can. Press.)—The government moved strong forces down the river yesterday and today, and landed them north of the foreign settlement. The rebels at Kiangnan have been driven in upon the Wu-Sung forts with insignificant losses. The rebels are extending their defences to Wu-Sung, while the government forces are advancing from four directions.

A number of war junks at Wu-Sung attempted to go over to the government, but all of them except one were burned by the rebels.

It is stated that the government is in control and has restored order at Nanking.

Dutch Seize Rebel Sloop.

WILLEMSTAD, Curacoe, Aug. 10.—(Can. Press.)—The Dutch cruiser Zeeland today detained a sloop from Coro belonging to the Venezuelan revolutionists because of her lack of sailing papers. Those aboard the sloop said former President Castro, leader of the rebels in Venezuela, was not now at Coro but that positive information as to his whereabouts would be given by them for $2000.

CHAPTER LXV.
Old Friends.

Bruxton Sands was as genuinely astonished as a man of deliberateness could be when a clerk entered the private room of his office suite in a Bowling Green skyscraper and told him a lady wished to see him. He was about to instruct the clerk to ask for the lady's card when, glancing over the youth's head, he glimpsed a golden gleam under a big hat with sweeping plumes through the doorway and in an instant was crossing the threshold with both hands extended.

"My dear Doris!" he said. "This is really good of you. Things were getting a bit dull this morning."

Mrs. Missioner smiled in that pervading way that long ago had penetrated to the vary core of the millionaire's inner consciousness. That illuminated Sands' somewhat gloomy sanctuary. He welcomed Mrs. Missioner to a comfortable chair beside his broad desk, swept aside the heap of formidable papers with great golden seals and fluttering ribbons, and leaned back in his chair quite content to wait a century for his visitor to speak again, provided her smile should continue to beam upon him.

"No, it is not about investments," said Mrs. Missioner, noting the restrained inquiry in her admirer's eyes. "I felt I had to talk to somebody. Elinor; and Dorothy, you know, is too amiably responsive to be of any use. Bruxton, what am I to do about that girl?"

The millionaire was visibly perplexed.

"I'm sure I don't know," he said at length. "I suppose something ought to be done."

"Something certainly should be; something must be done," returned Mrs. Missioner. "I cannot bear any longer the idea of her suffering in that dreadful place."

"Well, what are we going to do about it?" asked Sands. "The case has been taken out of our hands, and when I offered to give a bond in any amount for her appearance, this detective urgently requested me to do nothing of the sort." Mr. Sands played nervously with an ivory paper cutter as he spoke, and then looked at Mrs. Missioner. She placed her elbows on the corner of his desk and leaned her chin on her clasped hands.

"Bruxton," said she, "there is something much more extraordinary about this case than appears on the surface, or even below the surface. Why does this Mr.—Mr.—"

"Britz," interpolated Sands.

"Yes; why does he wish to keep Elinor in the Tombs when we all believe—know, in fact, that she is absolutely incapable of doing anything wrong. It is one of the most terrible things I ever heard of. I didn't know it was possible in a city like this in the twentieth century. It sounds like the dark ages."

"Well, you see," said Sands, "in many respects we are not yet out of the dark ages. The police of this town have power that was not exceeded by that of any body of men in the most mediaeval period. True, they are subject to the restrictions of the law in theory. The law says they shall keep suspected persons in cells only for so many hours; that preliminary examinations of prisoners shall be made within such and such a time, and that every accused man or woman is entitled to a speedy trial. That is theory. In practice, it is altogether different. The Central Office detective can, and does, take his own time about submitting to the District Attorney his evidence. The prosecutor in turn takes the case to the Grand Jury at his own convenience. Now and then there is a howl in the press about the law's delay, and whenever that happens, there is an immediate protest from the Bench against the enormous volume of business the courts are compelled to handle. After all, it is up to the public. The people pretend they want prompt justice; but if the judiciary is to be believed, the people do not prove their sincerity by providing enough judges to try cases. As for the District Attorneys, many of them in New York and in other cities seem busier in making explanations and issuing statistics than in prosecuting offenders, and having it over and done with."

"Well, isn't there some way we can help that poor girl?" asked Mrs. Missioner again.

"Can't see any way just now," returned Sands. "As I told you, I was more than willing to give bail for her, but Lieutenant Britz, who says he is just as much convinced of her innocence as you or I, assured me it would be one of the worst things I could do in her behalf. You see, as he rightly remarked, it is not merely a question of setting her free, nor even of having her acquitted. Some acquittals, you can very well understand, are tantamount to convictions. The man unquestionably is right in that respect. Miss Holcomb must regain, not only her liberty, but the ungrudging respect of everyone who knows her, and everyone who has ever hear about her."

"And how is that to be done?" the widow pursued.

"Only by the conviction of the real thief, I guess," said Sands. "Britz tells me he has the case pretty well in hand, and that if no false move is made he will undoubtedly bring the crime home to the criminal. I have consulted counsel; I have even taken the matter up pretty thoroughly with friends, both here and in Albany, and from all I can learn, the detective is justified in his attitude. Wealth, influence, can get her out, but they cannot clear her. You cannot buy the public's conclusions, you know."

Tears rose in Mrs. Missioner's eyes as the realization of her helplessness came to her like a blow. Never before had she known what it was to have a wish denied. Generous impulse had been followed by generous deed. Those she wished to aid she had been able to provide with immediate assistance by virtue of her great wealth, or her great womanliness. She detested playing a part in any way. She was the soul of sincerity, and though so fond of her jewels that the fondness rose at times to passionate heights, she was a woman of unusual simplicity for one in her position.

Sands incidentally became as nervous as a man of his type must always be at the sight of a woman's weeping. Though a bachelor, he knew enough of the sex not to blunder into awkward attempt at consolation. All he did was to sit there twisting the paper cutter in his fingers, and looking uncomfortably out of the window until Mrs. Missioner had time to regain her composure. So great was the tension upon him, however, that when the widow had regained her poise, and proved it by speaking in decisive tones, the ivory blade snapped in his hand with a sound like that of a pistol shot.

"I don't care what the detective says!" exclaimed Mrs. Missioner, as she arose and gathered her furs about her. "I am not going to let Elinor Holcomb think any longer that her friend of years believes her to be a thief. It is unbearable! Yes, the man told me, too, that I must not interfere in the case if I expected him to vindicate my secretary; but I am not going to be governed by anyone to that extent. I am going to see Elinor to-day. I am going straight to that terrible place and assure her that even though I permit her to be kept there, I refuse to entertain for a moment the idea that she has broken any law of God or man!"

"Are you sure this is wise, Doris?" inquired Sands gravely. As he stood beside her, it was difficult to control the impulse to pour out before her the adoration he felt at the sight of her new loveliness. She had never seemed more beautiful than when she was moved by sympathy for the girl who at that moment, doubtless, was wondering if she had forsaken her.

"Wise or not," returned the widow, "I shall do it. Something tells me she is in need of sympathy this very day. Why, Bruxton, how do we know what effect this dreadful incarceration might have upon her? It may warp her entire nature; it may wreck her health. Please do not try to dissuade me. I have made up my mind to see her, and I shall go there at once."

Sands knew Mrs. Missioner, if he did not know women in general, altogether too well to waste time in opposing her when she had declared herself as emphatically as that.

"Your car is downstairs?" he inquired. The widow nodded. "I will go with you," he said, "since you are resolved to pay a visit to such a place. You must not go unattended there."

"Thank you," said Mrs. Missioner sweetly. "I know I can always depend on you. In fact, Bruxton, you are altogether the most dependable man I know."

If anything was needed to wing the usually slow impulses and emotions of Sands, that last remark of hers would have done it. He and the widow went out of the office together, crossed the sidewalk, and were tête-à-tête in the sheltering embrace of Mrs. Missioner's limousine.

It was a short dash for the auto up Broadway, up Centre Street to the Tombs, and it was with little difficulty that Sands obtained for Mrs. Missioner permission to see the prisoner.

"Miss Holcomb will be here immediately," said the turnkey, who had taken Mrs. Missioner's card to the girl's cell, and with a courtesy that surprised the widow in such a place he drew chairs, and without a suspicion of irony, invited the visitors to "make themselves at home."

Elinor came around the corner of the corridor with more animation in her step than it had shown in many a day. She had hardly been able to believe her eyes on reading Mrs. Missioner's name on the card thrust through the grating of her door. [illegible] ago she had made up her mind that the chain of circumstances, or perhaps an enemy, had sown in her kind friend's mind suspicion that she was guilty. As the days rolled on and she received no word from Mrs. Missioner, the conviction grew upon her. Even this very day she had given up the hope of rehabilitating herself in the eyes of her employer. Not that it was an employer she mourned in loss of Mrs. Missioner's confidence. The rich widow was her friend; had been her family's friend, and had been the first to offer her a refuge in the terrible days following discovery of the fact that her kindly, gentle father, after a lifetime of high endeavor, had left her without the provision she knew he always intended to make.

"Dear Mrs. Missioner!" cried Elinor, hastening toward the widow as she read affection and complete belief in her countenance. "You have done many lovely things for me, but this is quite the dearest! It seems hard even to picture you in such a place, and the reality—"

YOUR OWN VOICE.

How You May Hear It as It Sounds to Other Persons' Ears.

Laloy, who appears to have scientifically investigated the matter, assures us that not only does one not see himself as others see him, but that he does not hear himself as others hear him. Some interesting experiments were made by the French savant in this connection.

In order to ascertain whether a man really knew the sound of his own voice, Laloy has been at some pains to determine the facts. His experiments show that if a person record on a phonograph disk a few sentences pronounced by himself, together with others recorded by friends, and causes the machine to reproduce these, it most frequently happens that the man more easily recognizes the voices of his friends than he does his own.

It appears that the differences lies in the quality of the tone. One hears his own voice not only through the air, as do his auditors, but across the solid parts between the organs of speech and those of hearing. The sound thus produced has a different timbre from that conducted to the ear by the air above.

If one entertain any doubt as to this let him try the following experiments: Take the end of a wooden rod between the teeth and pronounce the vowel continuously. Let the other end be taken alternately between the teeth and released by another person who at the same time stops his ears. The latter will find that every time he seizes the rod in his teeth the sound will be stronger than when it reaches the ear through the air above and that it has a different quality. The passage of sound through a solid body augments its intensity and modifies its quality.—Harper's Weekly.

LIFE INSURANCE

THE pessimist and the prophet of woe have no rightful place in any consideration of the expediency of insuring life. But certain hard facts should be squarely faced by every man of moderate means who has anyone dependent on him. Hundreds of men are yearly rejected for life insurance who would have been accepted had they not delayed their applications until ill health had come upon them. Why do men in good condition take such a long chance of remaining well? It is an impressive fact that out of 8549 holders of policies in a leading life insurance company who died in the past year, only 64 died of old age. The remainder were carried away by disease or accident. Hence the wisdom of insuring early in life. The best years for saving are from 20 to 40, and no man should let that period pass without taking out an insurance policy. For that part of his career an endowment policy, which is likely to mature while he is still living and can secure the proceeds of it himself, is to be preferred.

There will probably always be poor old men. their ranks will be recruited from the successful men of an earlier date, and fortunate is he who has made certain provision by means of endowment insurance in the Sun Life Assurance Company of Canada.

PETERBORO' HEALTH ASS'N

The Educational Committee of the Peterborough Health Association desires to thank the Review for the free use of its valued space for the circulation of items of educational value in the battle against tuberculosis. It is a battle in which all the civilized communities of the world are engaged.

Tuberculosis is a peculiar disease in that it is as secret as it is deadly and often gives no sign until it has taken firm hold and got to some extent beyond control.

THE CAUSE.

Professor Koch has proved that the one cause of tuberculosis is a germ; that this germ has to enter and live and multiply in the body to start tuberculosis. This is the one fact around which all practical, intelligent action must revolve.

The condition under which this germ thrives is very well established to-day as also the condition under which it weakens and dies.

Sunlight is its greatest enemy, because a few minutes' exposure to direct rays will kill the germ when it is deposited in clean, dry and well lighted quarters it will soon die, but dark, moist and ill-ventilated places will hold the germ alive and active for long periods. The above is its history outside the body, and experience proves that when the germ enters the human system a similar life-history is found to take place.

WHAT YOU CAN DO.

See that sunlight gets into every room in the house in which you live and that the windows of your sleeping room are kept open at night.

2. Insist on the places in which you work being well ventilated every hour of the day and all day long.

CATECHISM.

Que. 1.—What is tuberculosis?

Ans.—A very common and often fatal disease met with in all parts of the world attacking both man and animals.

Que. 2—Where is it most frequently met with?

Ans.—In the crowded parts of cities where the houses are packed together and the streets are narrow; where the air cannot circulate freely and the sunlight does not enter.

Ask your physician about our two nurses.

HAPPY TIME AT RICE LAKE

RICE LAKE, August 9.—At Rice Lake, near Villiers a gathering of relatives and friends spent a very pleasant day. Amongst the number were: Mrs Andrew Sucaret, Mrs. F. Breckenridge and little daughters, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Steele, son and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Elmhirst, Mr. and Mrs. Alex. Davidson from Peterborough; Mrs. Frank Elmhirst and Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Fotter and daughters.

Also American friends who are here on an extended visit. They are: Mr. and Mrs. James Steele and son, and Mr. and Mrs. John Peters. The former gentleman is a prosperous and wealthy farmer from Billings, Montana, who has not seen the place of his birth for seventeen years, and the latter has not been in his native land for the space of forty years, and no doubt sees great changes in the country since leaving it. He is now living retired on the fruits of his labor in Staunton, Nebraska.

The picnickers camped at Mr. Walter Bryce's cottage at the lake shore, and after being refreshed with the good things provided by the ladies, there was after dinner speeches and songs and reminiscenses of younger days. Through the generosity of Mr. Bryce, who placed his gasoline yacht at the disposal of the crowd, there was a happy time sailing back and forth over the lake. The day was such that the water and scenery could be appreciated in all its beauty. Then after having partaken of the evening meal, all drove to their respective homes, feeling better of having laid business cares aside for a day, and spent a joyful time together, which no doubt will be long remembered by all.

Out of 1,850,000 votes on electoral lists, 1,307,528 cast their votes at the election of September, 1911.

ADDRESS AND CUT GLASS BOWL THE GIFT OF CHOIR

Last Friday evening Miss Ruth Dawson, who has been a valued member of All Saints' Church Choir was presented with an address and and a cut glass berry bowl by the members of the choir.

Miss Dawson's marriage took place to-day, and she will reside in Vancouver.

The following was the address:

To Miss Ruth Dawson,

All Saints' Choir.

Dear Miss Dawson,—It grieves us very much as members of All Saints' Choir, that a time has come when we must sever our pleasant associations with you. While we regret for our own sakes, we feel that you will enjoy your new sphere, and our sincerest wishes for all that is happy, delightful and profitable, go with you.

During the time you have been in the choir you have endeared yourself to us by your cheerfulness and ready response in performing any duties that have been placed upon you. These are qualities that render a person appreciated and valuable and we cannot properly estimate the loss we will sustain by your removal.

In asking you to accept this small gift as a slight token of our regard, we hope that it will signify to you the large circle of friends that regret your departure, but that are still bound to you by golden cords of friendship.

Signed on behalf of All Saints' Choir,

GEO. F. CHANDLER,
Choir Leader.
MRS. C. S. McCLELLAND,
Organist.

SCAFFOLD COLLAPSED; TWO BRICKLAYERS FELL

Pud-lock Gave Way When One of the Men Jumped from roof to the Scaffold—No Serious Injuries Sustained.

George Caffe and Joseph Parks, two bricklayers received bodily injuries yesterday morning, when a scaffold collapsed and they fell to the ground. Their injuries are not serious. First aid was given by several ladies living nearby.

The men had completed the brickwork at a house on Ware street. Parks had been at work at a chimney and when he jumped from the roof to the scaffold, a pud-lock gave way and both men went down with the heavy planks, a distance of over 20 feet.

Fortunately there was no material on the scaffold at the time. Albert Caffe, another bricklayer, was left stranded on the roof.

The injured men were not taken to the hospital. Parks, it is said, figured in a similar accident last summer.

TEMPLE BAND AT FENELON

Whole Town Turned Out to Hear the Music.

Visitors Joined Oddfellows in Memorial Service.

The Temple Band returned to the city Monday at noon after a pleasant week end trip to Fenelon Falls, where the band has a host of friends. Needless to say large crowds greeted the visitors. On Sunday afternoon the band gave a musical program in Kawartha Grove and practically the whole town was present. After the open air service that evening, the band headed a parade of the Oddfellows to the Presbyterian church, where a memorial service was held for one of their members who was drowned last week. The Dead March was played.

Afterwards the band played in the new Methodist Church. On the return trip, during a stop-over in Lindsay, a concert was given on Kent Street and incidentally the members of the band had a walk on the new pavements, which they pronounce very fine. They say they will certainly blow when the streets of Peterboro are paved.

CONCERT TO-NIGHT.

The program for to-night's concert is as follows:

March—Citadel.
Selection—The Rose of Sharon.
Selection—Gems of Scotch Melodies.
Part Song—Happy, Glad and Free, Male Choir.
Selection—Songs of England.
Vocal Selection—A Stranger, (by request.)
Selection—My Guide.
March—The Victory.

POLICE COURT

Wm. Rose, of Park street, appeared before Magistrate Dumble this morning, on the charge of indecent exposure. He pleaded not guilty. Evidence by P.C. Sills was to the effect that the defendant had offered him $2 to allow him his liberty.

He was fined $10 to be paid forthwith or 30 days in jail.

Fancy Writing.

Sir Arthur T. Quiller-Couch, since he accepted the chair of English literature at Cambridge, Eng., has blossomed out as a very witty lecturer. Here is an anecdote wherewith he illustrated the rottenness of fancy or highfalutin' writing. He condemned first the fancy phrases so common in the magazines and popular novels, and then he said that these phrases were as absurd to cultivated ears as the telegram that the babu sent from Bombay to announce the death of his mother. The babu's telegram ran: "Regret to announce that hand which rocked the cradle has kicked the bucket."

SYLVIA TRIES AGAIN

Intrepid Suffragette Leads Forces Against Asquith.

Third Attempt of Miss Pankhurst and Her Army to Raid Downing Street and Capture the Premier's House Is Frustrated by Police and the Leader Herself Is Captured.

LONDON, Aug. 10.—(Can. Press.)—The third attempt of the suffragettes, under command of Sylvia Pankhurst, to take Premier Asquith's house in Downing street by storm failed today when the militant leader was captured by a cordon of police thrown across Whitehall after a stiff fight, in which the police used their clubs.

The trouble began after a mass meeting held under the auspices of the free speech defence committee, which was called to demand the unconditional release of George Lansbury, former Socialist member of the house of commons, who was sentenced July 30 to three months' imprisonment for making inflammatory speeches, but who was released Aug. 2 under the "cat and mouse bill" while on a hunger strike.

Miss Pankhurst had refused an invitation to make a speech at this meeting when informed that she would not be permitted to urge her hearers to march upon Downing street. The free speech speakers today advised the crowd not to attack the premier's residence, but at the close of their meeting Miss Pankhurst, true to her promise made last week, mounted the plinth of the Nelson column and in fiery words ordered her sympathizers to follow her.

Hatless, her hair bound close to her head, the young militant leader started down Whitehall surrounded by several women carrying the Women's Social and Political flag, surmounted by a red liberty cap and preceded by a flying wedge of dockmen and other husky east-enders. The squads of police in Trafalgar square allowed the procession to leave the square, and then fell in behind. The suffragette sympathizers saw the reason for this strategical move when they found a battle line of heavy policemen drawn across Whitehall at the Horse Guards, the office of the inspector-general of corps.

The militants attacked this line with such dash and courage that a few of them penetrated the first cordon, where the fight became so fierce that the police used their clubs. Reserves of police then rushed up and Sylvia Pankhurst and five other women and nine men were arrested and taken to the police station in taxicabs.

Disheartened at the fate of their leader, the mob sullenly dispersed. A number of persons were injured when the police dispersed the mob.

Miss Cook, who carried a suffrage banner during the fight, said tonight that Miss Pankhurst was badly injured during the melee.

Going in for Airships.

PARIS, Aug. 10.—(Can. Press.)—The ministry has given its approval to a scheme for the wide development of the aeroplane to co-operate with the navy. M. Bardin, the minister of marine, will ask parliament when it convenes, for an immediate appropriation of $2,750,000 for this purpose.

It is believed that battleships and large cruisers will be able during a battle, to use aeroplanes to throw explosives as powerful as those now used in torpedoes, and French naval designers therefore are taking into account the necessity for additional overhead protection from aerial torpedoes.

Teamster Killed in Runaway.

CORNWALL, Aug. 10.—(Special.)—A young man named William E. Garlough, aged 24 years and 2 months, met instant death at the west end of the town on Saturday afternoon when the team of horses he was driving took fright and ran away. Garlough was thrown off the wagon and a load of wood he was delivering to David Gibbon, was piled up on top of him.

HE WANTS FAIR PLAY

John Lind Sent to Make Huerta Redeem His Pledges.

Pres. Wilson Explains to Senate That His Special Representative in Mexico Is Instructed to Bring Pressure to Bear on Mexican Ruler to Make Good His Promises of an Election.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 9.—(Can. Press.)—Two hours of conference tonight between President Wilson, Secretary Bryan and the senate foreign relations committee brought about no change in the attitude of the administration toward Mexico.

The president took the senators into his confidence far enough to outline the following:

"That John Lind, his special envoy to Mexico City, does not bear any solution of the present situation, but goes to continue this government's effort to induce Provisional President Huerta to redeem his promises for free and constitutional elections; that under no circumstances does the administration propose to recognize the Huerta government; that Mr. Lind has gone to Mexico city to be the "eyes and ears" of the Washington administration on the ground and to explain the attitude of this government when he has fully familiarized himself with the situation; that by withdrawing Ambassador Wilson and sending Mr. Lind the president planned to have a man on the ground who was in sympathy with the administration here and was in no sense a factor in the situation in Mexico City."

These policies and suggestions of the president and Secretary Bryan came out in general discussion. It was made clear that the purpose of the conference was to establish more frank and intimate relations between the senate and the administration in the development of the Mexican policy, and in the furtherance of this idea the president talked freely and answered many pointed questions.

Senators who expected to be informed of a definite plan or a formal message Mr. Lind might be bearing to the Mexican government, were disappointed. The president told them that upon the arrival of Mr. Lind in Mexico City there would be transmitted thru the charg d'affaires at Mexico City as well as to the foreign governments generally, an explanation of Mr. Lind's mission.

This explanation, as developed at tonight's conference, is expected to be a reaffirmation of the American government's attitude of the last few weeks, favoring efforts to secure a temporary cessation of hostilities in Mexico so that constitutional elections may be held.

It was reported after the conference that Mr. Lind's movements will be left largely to his discretion after he has talked to Wm. Bayard Hale and other friends of the administration familiar with the situation in the Mexican capital.

TREATY IS SIGNED

Peace Pact Between Warring Balkan States Concluded.

BUCHAREST, Aug. 10.—(Can. Press.)—The peace treaty between the Balkan states was signed at 10.30 o'clock this morning.

In honor of the occasion the city was decorated with flags, guns were fired, bells were rung and the bands played.

A solemn Te Deum in the cathedral at noon was attended by King Charles, Queen Elizabeth (Carmen Sylva) and the members of the royal family and the delegates to the peace conference. King Charles conferred high decorations on all the delegates except the Bulgarians, who declined to receive them.

The peace treaty provides that the Roumanian army shall evacuate Bulgarian territory in 15 days after its signature, and the Servian and Greek armies in three days. It also provides for arbitration by Belgium, Holland or Switzerland, in the event of a disagreement over the delimitation of the new fronsier. Bulgaria engages in the treaty to begin demobilization immediately.

Free Man After 34 Years.

THOMASTON, Me., Aug. 10.—Samuel B. Haynes of Detroit walked out of the prison gates, having served his sentence of thirty-four years for the murder of James L. Robbins, a policeman, at Rockland in 1879. At midnight his sister, Mrs. F. H. Rogers of Detroit, telephoned the prisoner that Governor Haines had pardoned him.

"The battle is won," Haynes told Warden Ham, "but I hate to leave."

Outside the prison he held a reception for a big crowd who knew him as a model prisoner.

"I am willing to forgive and forget," he said. "The prison has been a good thing for me, but I feel that I have paid my bill to society. I have been in prison since I was seventeen years old, but I have spent the better part of my life here trying to be useful. There is no failure in such a life as that."

Medicine Dance Banned.

NETT LAKE, Minn., Aug. 10. The grand lodge medicine dance of Chippewa Indians at the Bois Fort Reservation and Nett Lake agency has been put under the ban. This was the decision made by L. F. Michael, United States inspector.

It is the custom of the Indians during the dance to give away practically everything they own. They are thus kept impoverished while the medicine men flourish.

Gambling has also aided in retarding the progress of the Indians and this has been forbidden.

The Indian doctors exert an influence so strong over the members of the band that they will not go to the agency physicians even when seriously ill.

Cool Wave in West.

REGINA, Sask., Aug. 10.—(Can. Press.)—The weather turned cool Saturday, followed by showers Sunday. Maximum temperature today 63, minimum 50, precipitation .23. No damage has been done to crops.

BRANDON, Man., Aug. 10.—(Can. Press.)—With fourteen hours of steady rainfall, crop conditions have been benefited to some extent. Some crops have been reported ripening too fast.

Nest of Postage Stamps.

WAYNESBORO, Pa., Aug. 10.—Pen-Mar's postmaster, John N. Stickell, in searching among old papers found a mouse's nest had been made almost entirely of postage stamps.

In the nest were four young ones. The loss to the postmaster is about $15. He now has had his stamp drawer lined with tin.

The hair grows faster during the summer than in the winter.

CAMPERS DROWNED

Two Toronto Boys Tipped From Canoe at Sparrow Lake.

TORONTO, Aug. 11.—Sparrow Lake was the scene of the drowning of two Toronto boys on Saturday, when they upset a canoe in a squall. Creighton Robinson, aged 23, of 308 Robert street, and Edward Vrohman, aged 14, of 177 Harbord street, were the victims. Both were members of the Massey Camp of the Fred Victor Mission.

In order that Vrohman might visit his mother, who was staying at a cottage on the opposite side of the lake, Robinson offered to take the boy across in a canoe, the two starting out in the canoe shortly before noon on Saturday.

When they were about half way across the lake a heavy squall came up and the young men steered the craft to a small island, situated on the lake not far from where they were. After reaching the island they gathered a number of stones and placed them in the front of the canoe to act as ballast, doing this so they would be able to successfully continue the journey across.

The youths only got a short distance from the island when they were seen to be in distress and a moment later the canoe capsized, both the occupants disappearing.

The double drowning was witnessed from the verandah of the Lakeview Hotel, which is about a mile and a half further down the river. From the hotel a motor boat was at once despatched to the spot where the young men were seen to sink, but a floating paddle was all that remained.

Creighton Robinson, the older of the two victims of the drowning, was the eldest son of J. S. Robinson of 308 Robert street, a department head of the T. Eaton Company's store. The young man was a member of the registration staff at the Toronto General Postoffice, and had been with the postoffice here for the past six years. He was president of the Epworth League of Trinity Methodist church, and also a member of the choir.

The parents of Edward Vrohman, the 14-year-old boy who sank with Robinson, resided at 177 Harbord street.

FOUR ARE SAVED

Motor Boat Party Nearly Lost Lives by Fire.

TORONTO, Aug. 11.—When their motor boat caught fire in the lake just west of the Humber River shortly after 11 o'clock Saturday night four young people had a very narrow escape from being burned to death or drowned. But for the plucky work of the two youths in the boat and a daring rescue by residents of the Lake Shore road two or more fatalities would have resulted. The motor boat party consisted of: Frank F. Reeves, jr., aged 20, College street, Humber Bay; Winnie Harding, aged 19, stop 11, Lake Shore road, Mimico; Thomas Roberts (Skidmore), aged 21, Cockburn avenue, Humber Bay; Gertrude Williams, aged 20, stop 14, Mimico.

The two girls were in a hysterical condition when taken off the launch and lapsed into unconsciousness. They were reported to be much better last night, while the young men have completely recovered.

The accident occurred in the lake half way between the Humber River and Mimico Creek, or almost opposite stop 9 on the Lake Shore road. Roberts was in charge of the launch, which had been rented, and altho he had had considerable experience with gasoline engines, this season was his first in running a marine engine. Reeves also had worked around gasoline engines of different types while in the west, but had never run a motor boat.

After going up and down the river the party decided to take a little ride up the lake past the houses of some friends. They were on the point of turning around and returning to the boathouse at Humber Bay when the engine stopped. Roberts attempted to start it again and failing in this looked around for the trouble.

WOLVES AFTER THEM

So Say Minnesota Couple Who Were Lost in Woods.

ST. PAUL, Minn., Aug. 10.—(Special.)—According to their own story, Mr. and Mrs. Roy Boyd of Minneapolis were in danger of being overtaken by wolves while out camping in Northern Minnesota, near upper Red Lake, recently. They went for a walk thru the woods, lost their way and at night, as they were going in the direction of what they believed to be the camp, they crossed an open space, only to see the gleaming eyes of two wolves staring them in the face.

Mrs. Boyd became frantic, while Mr. Boyd built a fire to keep the dangerous denizens of the northern wilds at a distance. The ruse succeeded, for, altho the wolves paced back and forth all thru the night, they never came nearer than twelve feet.

At daybreak the Boyds made their way back to camp, which was not more than a half mile distant. Mr. Boyd is chief clerk in the Vendome Hotel, Minneapolis.

Queen to Attend Ceremony.

THE HAGUE, Aug. 10.—(Can. Press.)—Queen Wilhelmina of Holland and the prince consort, with Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Carnegie, will be present at the transfer of the Palace of Peace at The Hague from the Carnegie Foundation to the council of the permanent arbitration court on Aug. 28. Four hundred guests have been invited for the ceremony. These include the one hundred and forty judges of the arbitration court, the members of the diplomatic corps and the principal Holland officials.

The president of the Carnegie Foundation, M. von Karnebeck, will make a speech in French formally transferring the palace to the court, and the minister of foreign affairs will make a brief speech of acceptance. After this simple ceremony, enlivened only by a vocal choir, the guests will inspect the palace and its grounds.

Tobacco a Good Antiseptic.

PARIS, Aug. 10.—(Can. Press.)—Tobacco is exceedingly efficacious in the killing of microbes, according to Messrs. Langlais and Sartory, who state their experiments have shown that in five minutes tobacco smoke will kill almost all the microbes in the saliva, thus nearly completely sterilizing the mouth.

One of the experiments carried out by MM. Langlais and Sartory was to place several cigars in water containing many million cholera microbes to the square inch. The tobacco sterilized and destroyed the microbes in twenty-four hours.

New Era in Balkans.

BUCHAREST, Aug. 10.—(Can Press.)—A gala dinner to the peace delegates was given at the royal palace tonight. King Charles in a stirring speech congratulated the representatives of the various states on the conclusion of peace, which, he said, had involved great sacrifices, and hoped that a new era of mutual confidence and prosperity would arise and make all forget the sad past.

Lake Superior drains an area of 85,000 square miles.

MANY BARNS STRUCK

A Disastrous Storm Sweeps Across Western Ontario.

Districts Around Chatham, St. Catharines and Port Colborne Suffer Serious Damage From Electrical Disturbance—Two Fatalities Are Reported From Philadelphia.

ST. CATHARINES, Aug. 10.—(Special.)—The large barn of the farm of Charles Gillion, in Grantham Township, was struck by lightning this morning during the worst electric story that has swept over this district in some time, and was completely destroyed, along with a large amount of hay, implements and stock, the cattle alone being saved. The loss may exceed $6000, partly insured.

The power circuit on the entire system of the Niagara, St. Catharines Railway was broken and cars stalled at various points in the district, with passengers, between 11 o'clock Saturday night and 8 o'clock this morning, an unusual heavy and steady rain precluding any attempts of the passengers to leave the cars. An excursion crowd on a special trip of the steamer Garden City, from Toronto, spent the night on the boat, being unable to reach St. Catharines. The rain will prove highly beneficial to the fruit crop.

Several Barns Struck.

PORT COLBORNE, Aug. 10.—(Special.)—One of the severest electrical storms in years visited this vicinity last night, with rain. The lightning was continuous and two or three barns were struck and burned in the Township of Humberstone, also two valuable cows were killed.

Two men on the steamer Porter coming into the harbor, were knocked senseless on the deck of the steamer but recovered consciousness in a short time.

Farmer Loses Everything.

CHATHAM, Aug. 10.—(Special.)—During the heavy electrical storm that passed over the city yesterday the barns and house of David Fryers of Dover township, were completely destroyed. The lightning struck the barn and destroyed it.

After the workers had departed some of the smouldering embers from the ruins were blown towards the house. Mr. Fryers' house and the house of his hired man were both burned to the ground. Mr. Fryers had just drawn in his last load of grain and all of this year's crops were destroyed.

Two barns were struck by lightning and burned to the ground during Friday night's storm. One of the barns belonged to Ernest Colter. His crops and machinery were an entire loss.

Mrs. Skinner's barn in Dawn township was also levelled to the ground by fire. The barn contained the most of Mrs. Skinner's crops.

Burnt Contents of Barn.

ALVINSTON, Aug. 9.—During the severe electrical storm which passed over this section last night the barn of Dougal McIntyre, two miles east of here, was struck by lightning and with the contents completely destroyed. Loss $3,000, partly covered by insurance.

Philadelphia Storm Swept.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 10.—(Can Press.)—A young woman was killed by lightning, a baby crushed to death by a falling tree, and scores of people were injured by flying debris during a wind, rain and electrical storm which swept over this city today. Trees were uprooted, telegraph, telephone and electric light poles blown down, windows broken, and buildings unroofed by the wind which blew at the rate of sixty miles an hour before the rain.

Agnes Murphy, 20 years of age, was killed by a bolt of lightning when she sought shelter under a tree in Fairmount Park. James McNamee, 1 months old, was in a coach at a cemetery when the wind blew down a tree which crushed him to death.

The roof of a pavilion in Fairmount Park was blown down and six picnickers were so badly injured by falling debris that they had to be removed to a hospital.

BOTTLE IS FOUND

Contains a Message from Ill-Fated "Christmas Ship."

STURGEON BAY, Wis., Aug. 10.—(Special.) A message supposed to have been written by Capt. Charles Nelson of the Rouse Simmons, the "Christmas Ship" which went down with all on board in Lake Michigan last November, has been found by Frank Lauscher, the son of a fisherman.

The message is dated Nov. 23, and reads as follows:

"These lines were written at 10.30 p. m. Schooner Rouse Simmons ready to go down about twenty miles southeast of Twin River Point, between fifteen and twenty miles off shore. All hands lashed to one line. Good-by, Capt Charles Nelson."

Young Lauscher was playing on the beach several miles north of Sturgeon Bay when he found the bottle. The note, written roughly in pencil, was inside.

Local marine men are of the opinion the note is the last word from the ill fated ship which sank during a terrific storm last winter when loaded with Christmas trees from the northern woods and bound for Chicago.

Massey's Body Is Found.

CORNWALL, Aug. 10. (Special.)—Arthur Mossey, who disappeared as completely as tho the earth had opened him swallowed him up, last Monday night, has been located. As was feared he met a watery grave in the St. Lawrence River. Mossey went out for a row on the river and did not return. The boat with his coat and hat were found a couple of days afterwards, and search parties have been out continuously since looking for the body.

It was found on Saturday evening in a bay at Cornwall. In Mossey's pockets were two two dollar bills and a one and eighty-five cents in silver. His watch had stopped at 25 minutes to 12. An inquest was not held. The funeral took place on Sunday afternoon to St. Colombo's Cemetery.

Metal Workers Stay at Work.

BERLIN, Aug. 9.—(Can. Press.)—The German Metal Workers' Association here today rejected a resolution to join the strike of workmen in the shipbuilding yards. The strike was declared at Hamburg on July 16 last, and later was extended to the yards at Kiel and Stettin.

Madrid Spain has a new 800-room hotel with all modern appliances.

IN STATE OF SIEGE

Milan Occupied by Thirty Thousand Soldiers to Quell Strike.

MILAN, Aug. 10.—(Can. Press.)—Today was the seventh day of the general strike here. Altho a state of siege has not been proclaimed, the workmen's quarters are occupied by the military forces and martial law practically is in full force. The troops concentrated here are from Lombardy and Venetia. They have raised the strength of the garrison to 30,000. Strong contingents of infantry, supported by cavalry and artillery, hold the stragetic points and prevent the strikers from reaching the centre of the city.

The movement is changing from an economic to a political one, like that which arose in 1898, and the leaders are encouraging the Separatist ideas, arguing that Lombardy, a most prosperous region, is unjustly being made to support the poorer districts of the south. Pope Pius is discouraging the clergy and Catholics generally from sympathizing with the Separatist agitation.

Today the Milan Street Railway Co succeeded in sending out 98 cars. The normal number daily in operation is 700. The strikers tore up paving stones and piled them on the tracks and also attempted to erect barricades, but they were charged by the cavalry and compelled to disperse. The cars ran thruout the day, escorted by policemen and squads of cavalry.

Numerous acts of vandalism were committed today, such as the tearing down of lamp-posts and the cutting of gaspipes. The authorities, however, are assured of sufficient gas to illuminate the town indefinitely. There is no scarcity of bread. The newspapers continue to appear, the printers having refused to go on strike.

Writing Popular Songs.

Only those who have tried it and failed know the disappointments of the song writer striving to induce a publisher to look at his work. For those who would try here is a tip from one who has made good: "If your song is to make a hit the air must be hard to remember, though catchy and pleasing. If it can be whistled by any one who hears it once or twice it will not sell, and the publisher will reject it."—New York Sun.

Six Attempts at Arson.

BROCKVILLE, Aug. 8.—(Special.)—Annie Curtis, the young woman charged with setting fire to the outbuildings of Jeremiah Flood at McIntosh Mills, was given a preliminary hearing today after which she was committed for trial. The evidence of six witnesses, including Mr. Flood, was taken. The latter swore that six attempts were made last month to destroy his property, but in each case the blaze was detected, and that later the girl confessed to him that she had committed the deed. He also swore he had noticed on the first day she became an employe of his household three months ago she showed signs of mental derrangement.

WESTERN CANADA'S BUMPER WHEAT CROP

Thousands of Men Required—This Year's Harvest Promises to be the Largest in the History of Canada

According to present indications the wheat crop of 1913 will be the greatest ever harvested in Manitoba, Saskatchewan or Alberta, thus requiring the farm laborers of the East to assist in harvesting the world's bread basket.

The Governments of the respective Provinces state that many thousand men will be required for this year's harvest. These will have to be principally recruited from Ontario, and the prosperity of Canada depends on securing labor promptly. The Canadian Pacific, on which Company will fall practically the entire task of transporting the men to the West, is already making special arrangements for this year. Excursions from points in Ontario to Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta will be run and special trains operated, making the trip in about thirty-six hours and avoiding any change of cars or transfers. This will be a day shorter than any other route. Dates, rates and conditions will be announced in a few days.

DRAFTING ROOM WON SILVER CUP FROM M. A. P.

That the Drafting Room is the fastest amateur baseball team in the city was amply proved Saturday afternoon when they defeated the M.A.P. team, composed of the best players in the Mercantile League, by a score of 9—5. The game was played for a challenge cup valued at $25.

Clement and Smith were the opposing pitchers and though Clement's held the Draftsmen to eight hits, while his team got 16, yet errors caused the defeat. Kenneally of the Machine Shop caught for the M. A.P., while Turner did the receiving for the champions. Barrett and Callaghan were also on the M. A. P. line-up and the former contributed some nifty fielding.

Chapdelaine of the White Caps, umpired and to show his "speed" when an indicator was absent he used quarter and half dollar pieces.

PETES WON MORNING GAME BUT LOST IN AFTERNOON

Davey Rowan's pennant chasers had to be content with an even break in the holiday bill of two games, but they made a big bid for both.

Bob Sterling served them up to the Cook crew in the morning contest and won out in a walk. The visitors' only run came in the ninth when Cook's single scored Nefau who had tripled.

Six pitchers worked in the afternoon fray, which finally went to Guelph. Belting and Stark started the performance but gave way to Fitzpatrick and Tracey. The result was that the Petes got to Fitzpatrick and tied the score in the sixth. The visitors shot ahead in the seventh with two runs and again the locals evened up.

Sterling and Kirley then fought it out and while the Guelph hurler stopped the Rowanites, Sterling was not so successful, as he passed Dunn and Wright's three base clout sent him home.

Skipper Jacobson in the role of umpire had a rather warm time dodging volleys of opinions relative to his decisions, his work not being satisfactory to the players or fans.

Penfold, a pitcher secured by the Toronto Club and turned into the Canadian League pastures, was in uniform. He is of sturdy build and appears to have a good assortment of shoots.

BIG CROWD ATTENDED STONEY LAKE REGATTA

Annual Event Carried Out With Splendid Success—The Prize Winners.

The annual regatta of the Stoney Lake Cottagers' Association held yesterday at Juniper Island was undoubtedly one of the most successful ever held. With ideal weather suitable to every event on the program the lengthy list of races under the supervision of Mr. J. S. Knapman, chairman of the Association, was run off without a mishap before a very large crowd of spectators.

Keen interest was evinced in the open sailing, which was won by H. Knapman, for the second time in succession, thereby giving him the silver cup presented by Hon. J. R. Stratton.

In the motor boat race the "Admiral" easily outclassed its opponents.

The presentation of the prizes took place before the dance in the pavilion in the evening. Mr. R. Henderson, the efficient secretary of the Cottagers' Association, filled the chair, and the usual speeches were given. A large number of people stayed for the dance, leaving on the 11 o'clock boat. Music was supplied by the Grand Opera House orchestra. Much credit is due Mr. Knapman and other members of the committee, who worked so faithfully to make the regatta a success.

AN ANECDOTE OF M'KINLEY.

His Gentle Rebuke to a Department Chief's Subordinate.

President McKinley's scrupulous loyalty to his cabinet officers is spoken of as one of his characteristics. It is said that he never went over the heads of his secretaries to consult an assistant, but held each to responsibility for his department.

Of all the events of his administration probably none was a source of more anxiety to him than the decision of the supreme court on the status of the colonies. It was a matter of great moment whether the highest judicial body should uphold the view of the administration that the constitution sanctioned the possession of colonies which were not granted full representation. There were conflicting rumors and forecasts of the color of the decision, and these added to the tension felt at Washington. Shortly before the announcement of the finding of the court a subordinate officer of one of the departments appeared at the White House at an unusual hour and insisted upon seeing the president on the plea of important business. Having been admitted, he came at once to his errand.

"Mr. President, I have some good news for you. I have just learned authoritatively that the decision of the supreme court is to be in your favor." He fairly glowed with the importance of his welcome message.

"Thank you," said Mr. McKinley quietly. "That is good news. But have you informed your chief?"

"No, Mr. President. I thought you ought to be the first to know it."

"Well, Mr. ——, I'm sorry for that. Now, will you please do me the favor to go at once to your chief and give him the information so that he may communicate it to me?"—Silas Harrison in Century.

A Model Soldier.

Britain's model soldier has just died, in the person of Sergt.-Major Hanson. This gallant soldier, who was eighty years of age when he died, served in the Crimea and during the Indian Mutiny, and in the handbook circulated to recruits a sketch of his career is incorporated in order to show the youngsters to what they can aspire if they follow the pattern which he set.

Wonderful Invention From London, England, Coming to Peterboro.

Machine That Cures Diseases to be Shown Working Next Thursday and Tested Free at the Conservatory of Music Hall, Cor. Hunter and Rubidge Sts.

A Chance of a Lifetime For Rheumatic, Paralytic and Deaf Sufferers.

By an announcement in our advertising columns a popular Lecture Demonstration of that wonderful British invention the Verdee, is to be given in Peterborough next Thursday evening at the Conservatory of Music Hall.

Such an unusual attraction is certain to draw a large audience all the more so as the short visit which the Verdee Demonstrator will pay to Peterborough is at the request of many of our citizens, who after reading in the press reports of the remarkable cures recently effected by the Verdee all over Ontario, sent numerous inquiries which have resulted in the Verdee Company consenting to send us here at great expense, their best Lecturer and Demonstrator.

THE VERDEE IS NOT ELECTRICAL and as it contains no electricity it needs no recharging and GIVES NO SHOCKS. So far from giving any shock its action is ALWAYS GENTLE AND PLEASANT. It pours a stream of delightful thrill or pulsation right through any limb, muscle or bodily organ at will—a stream of health and strength-giving vitality, stopping pain in two or three minutes and permanently curing many bodily troubles in a few regular treatments. In most cases the effect of the Verdee seems almost miraculous.

The VERDEE cures in NATURE'S WAY by sending largely increased blood circulation (and so nourishment) to the affected limb, muscle or organ. It cures by stimulating the nerves and blood. As a NERVE TONER it thrills new life and energy into you, and doubles your power and pleasure in living. It gives back even to aged of both sexes much of the vigor and health-joy of youth. It is the best and safest "General Tonic" ever yet devised.

The Verdee is recommended and employed by thousands of Physicians in Great Britain and other countries. In one week 147 Verdees have been sold to MEDICAL MEN in the British Isles alone. Many leading physicians including Dr. Mortimore Granville, Dr. M. F. Pilgrim and others have written valuable works strongly advocating Mechanical Massage for stimulating Blood Circulation and for curative purposes.

The list of names of the thousands of private users of the Verdee, who have cured themselves at home, and write enthusiastically regarding the relief obtained through this marvelous machine would fill the pages of a thick volume.

The Verdee is not recommended as a universal remedy capable of curing all and every disease, it will not replace a limb torn off by violence or reconstruct a part or an organ which has been destroyed, neither will it cure permanently in one single Treatment chronic diseases of long standing, which often require a course of treatments before a permanent cure can be reasonably expected. Yet many sufferers who consider themselves incurable experience a marvellous improvement and relief even after one short treatment of a few minutes' duration and the Verdee is often successful and beneficial when all other methods of treatment have failed, and for many complaints which are seldom cured by Drugs.

Local sufferers should certainly avail themselves of this opportunity to test this remarkable invention and obtain relief free of charge at The Conservatory of Music Hall next Thursday evening.

IMPEACHMENT OF GOVERNOR SULZER

After All Night Session Vote Was 79 to 45 Against Sulzer

Canadian Press Despatch.

ALBANY, N. Y., Aug. 13.—William Sulzer, Governor of New York, was impeached by the Lower House of the Legislature at 6.15 this morning, after an all night session by a a vote of 79 to 45, on charges of having devoted campaign contributions to his private use and having made false statements regarding campaign receipts.

An eleventh hour declaration by the Governor's wife that she had diverted some of the campaign contributions to the purchase of stock because she felt the household needed the money, failed to avert the impeachment. The roll call was accomplished quickly, but one member arising to explain his vote.

ALBANY, Aug. 12.—(Can. Press.)—The Democratic organization, after marking time all day, claimed to have the 76 votes necessary to impeach Gov. Sulzer at tonight's meeting of the assembly, and planned to put thru the Levy resolution, laid over from last night with as little delay as possible. Telegraphic commands to absentees were kept flowing over the wires in a steady stream all day and bore fruit.

While deputy sergeants-at-arms hurried thru Albany with summonses to compel every assemblyman in the city to attend tonight and self-appointed committees met incoming trains, a throng eclipsing any that has stormed the capital in the memory of the oldest attendant, poured thru its stone doorways. Two hours before the time set for calling the assembly to order the first comers had taken their stand outside the railing in the assembly chamber. At 8 o'clock the great doors to the assembly chamber were closed in the face of a grumbling crowd in the corridor. The galleries were packed as seldom before. Hundreds of women were among the crowd.

With 85 votes at their command on the first test of strength, and more coming in every hour of the evening, the majority leaders showed no wavering in their plan to put thru tonight the program of impeachment. The 76 votes necessary to impeach, Mr. Levy said, would be on hand when the Speaker's gavel sounded for order. Once within the assembly chamber they would remain there, it was planned, no matter how prolonged the debate. The possibility of the majority becoming wearied by the announced dilatory tactics of Gov. Sulzer's friends was one that Mr. Levy was inclined to laugh at.

"There will be no limit placed on debate," he said. "This is a matter concerning which every man has a right to be heard."

The assembly was called to order at 10.21.

The first roll call indicated that the majority had the votes to carry out its program to impeach the governor before adjournment. One hundred and twenty-two members answered to their names, as follows: Democrats 85, Republicans 36, Progressives 2.

Of the 85 Democrats present, the majority leader was confident that 78—two more than a bare majority—would vote for the impeachment resolution. The roll call was slow and was succeeded by a call of the absentees, which added to the delay. At 11 o'clock the assembly had been in session nearly an hour and was still waiting, marking time in silence.

SQUAW IS ROBBED

Port Huron Men Loot House on Reserve Near Sarnia.

SARNIA, Aug. 12.—(Special.)—The home of Mrs. George, a squaw living on the Sarnia reserve, was ransacked and robbed to-day by four white men. Detective Action of the provincial police, was notified of the occurrence and was soon on the scene. The culprits had, however, made their escape in a gasoline launch. Last evening four young fellows stopped at the house, which is on the river bank and asked for lodgings. Although they were under the influence of liquor they were taken in and given a supper and a bed.

This morning they borrowed the horse and a rig and drove to town for gasoline, promising the squaw a dollar for the outfit. When they returned they loaded into the launch and were about to depart when the woman asked for her money. Instead of paying up they went up to the house and carried away everything that they could while the woman looked on. It is thought that the quartette are from Port Huron. The authorities on both sides are now looking for the offenders.

He did not know what money Martin had on him, but he wore two one hundred dollar diamond pins. Martin, who was born at Stouffville, and had built up an extensive business, was a man who always minded his own business, mortimer said.

AMBASSADOR LIND IS GIVEN AUDIENCE AS COURTESY

Huerta and His Cabinet Seem Bound Not to Receive United States Envoy in an Ambassadorial Capacity, Although President Huerta Is Said to Be Anxious to Hear Message.

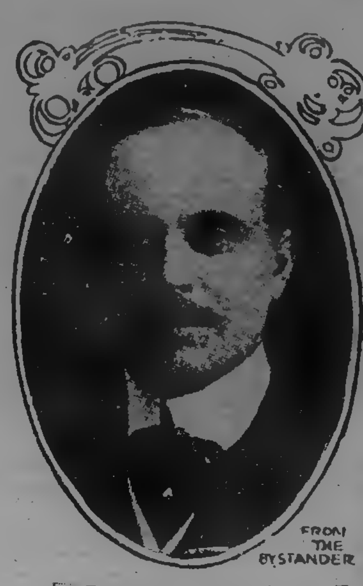
MEXICO CITY, Aug. 12.—(Can. Press.)—The first skirmish in the diplomatic war between Mexico and the United States took place today and was won by John Lind, President Wilson's personal representative, when he was received unofficially by Foreign Minister Frederico Gamboa. Both Mr. Lind and Senor Gamboa insist that no great importance attached to the visit. The Mexican Government is still insistent that it will not deal with Mr. Lind officially nor listen to any suggestion from him as to mediation or to any proposal emanating from his government.

Mr. Lind was presented to Senor Gamboa by Nelson O'Shaughnessy, charge d'affaires of the American embassy, in the character of a private citizen. The conversation between the Mexican cabinet officer and Mr. Lind was entirely informal, both carefully avoiding the subject of politics or the mission which is personally entrusted to Mr. Lind by President Wilson.

The visit of Mr. Lind consumed but a few minutes of Senor Gamboa's time, and few persons knew that it had been made. The time selected for the call was when few visitors were at the foreign office, and a disposition was shown in the department to cloak it with secrecy. No further steps were taken by Mr. Lind today to advance the object of his mission to Mexico, and it is believed that there will be little development in the situation before Thursday. Mr. Lind is in communication with Washington, and it is not improbable that his movements will be governed by instructions from there, based upon the progress he is able to make here.

In view of President Huerta's note of last week, issued thru the acting foreign minister, stating that Mr. Lind would not be received officially unless he brought credentials and also official recognition of the Huerta Government, great significance attaches to his reception by Huerta's cabinet chief, even unofficially. By some persons his reception is taken as an indication of the disposition of President Huerta to learn the character of the message Mr. Lind bears. Officials high and low persist in saying that President Huerta will never receive Mr. Lind, especially as President Wilson's emissary, but there is an unconfirmed rumor in circles that a step already have been taken to bring about a conference between them.

MRS. GEORGE CORNWALLIS-WEST IS LADY RANDOLPH CHURCHILL.



FROM THE BYSTANDER

MR CORNWALLIS-WEST

LADY RANDOLPH CHURCHILL

Mrs. George Cornwallis-West is Lady Randolph Churchill once again.

The President of the Divorce Court, Sir Samuel Evans, granted to her a decree nisi, with costs, against her husband, Mr. George F. M. Cornwallis-West, after a trial lasting ten minutes.

The court was not crowded, as the case was undefended and only formal and undisputed evidence was to be given.

She was nervous and ill at ease, as if performing an irksome and detestable task.

Evidence subsequently was given of the misconduct of the husband with some woman whose name was unknown, and the Judge immediately pronounced the decree.

Mrs. Cornwallis-West, after receiving the decree, announced that hereafter she would be known as Lady Randolph Churchill.

Fire Wipes Out Block.

BELLEVILLE, Aug. 12.—(Special.)—The Curry block, situated in the Village of Frankford, Sydney Township, was destroyed by fire last night. In the block was situated the postoffice and J. McMahon's grocery and furniture stores. The stock was completely destroyed. On the second floor was a large hall used for public gatherings. The loss will be several thousand dollars. The building belonged to Mr. S. Curry and was insured for $3600.

No Accommodation For Sick.

WOODSTOCK MAN SHOT

Wm. Dunster, Jr., Gets Serious Wounds Queerly.

WOODSTOCK, Aug. 12.—(Special.)—With a revolver bullet in his head, William Dunster, jr., lies in the General Hospital here and slight hopes are being held out for his recovery. It appears that yesterday evening about six o'clock Dunster, his wife and eight-year-old daughter were about to sit down to supper in their house, 171 Sydenham street, near his father's residence on Huron street, when the wife and daughter went out in the garden for a few minutes to help a neighbor drive some chickens off the premises.

They had not been out for more than a minute or two when they heard the report of a gun from the direction of the house. On running back they found Dunster lying on the floor with a bullet wound over his right ear from which the blood was pouring. The revolver was beside him. The ambulance was called and the wounded man hurried to the hospital, where his wound was dressed but the bullet was not located.

Shortly afterwards the man regained consciousness and informed his father, William Dunster of Huron street, that an accident had happened while he was cleaning the revolver. From the position of the wound, however, which was too high to allow the bullet to strike the brain an accident seemed unlikely when cleaning the weapon, and the fact that Dunster was not cleaning the gun when his wife and child were with him and he was alone in the room for only a few minutes adds to the mystery of the case.

A consultation was held by doctors over the case and it was decided not to probe for the bullet in the meantime, as it does not appear to be pressing on any vital spot. William Dunster is a painter by trade and has been an enthusiastic member of the local sporting circles. He is the owner of quite a collection of guns and firearms of various kinds in which he takes a deep interest. Dunster was also formerly a member of B company, 22nd Regiment Oxford Rifls.

Rural Delivery Succeeds.

GALT, Aug. 13.—(Special.)—A report made today shows that rural mail delivery inaugurated a year ago today in the county of Waterloo, chosen for experimental purposes by the department is a most pronounced success. A comprehensive system of routes radiates from Galt, the area covered being within a radius of ten miles with a daily mail delivery and collection. A year ago today free mail delivery in the town was inaugurated and is also a complete success.

POLICE MAKE THRILLING ARREST IN NORTH COUNTRY

Constable Markle Walks Into a Camp and Captures James Easterman After Tracing Outlaws Who Have Been Pillaging Parry Sound and District—Another Man In Custody.

TORONTO, Aug. 13.—Word came to Toronto last evening of the breaking up of a dangerous gang of robbers which has been camping in the fastnesses of the Georgian Bay shore, and levying heavy toll from the Parry Sound district. To Constable Markle goes the credit of the capture of one of the offenders, and his experience in that connection contains an unusual spice of adventure.

It involves the tracing of the cache in the depths of an unfrequented part of Parry Island, and the discovery of a camp where a man was cooking his evening meal. After a few brief words, the constable recognized material scattered about as some of the loot from a local hardware store. He arrested his man without hesitation and brought him back to Parry Sound. The partners had evidently taken alarm, and nothing can be learned of their whereabouts.

James Easterman of Bay City, Mich., is the name given by the prisoner and on the strength of the goods in the camp, he was committed for trial before Magistrate Farrell. Four charges of robbery are laid against him.

For some time past Parry Sound residents have been aware of petty thefts in their midst, but the carrying off in the same night of two valuable motor boats, and the pillaging of a general store and a local hardware store, proved the climax.

Constable Farrell set out on the following morning in a launch to seek clues on the water. A little distance down the harbor he came upon one of the stolen boats lying derelict. Examination showed that the gasoline had given out. Further along the other was found with the magneto out of order, and it was evident that both had been hastily abandoned.

A canoe drawn up on the shore in a lonely part of Parry Island attracted his attention, and following an ill-defined path from it, he came upon the camp.

The sunlight glittering on a new revolver beneath a bush aroused his suspicions, and a number of utensils lying about were recognized. The arrest followed and a search instituted for other members of the gang. The constable and his assistants found the ashes of a warm camp fire, but the fugitives had shown clean heels.

In the seizure made at the camp were six revolvers, some of which were loaded, a Winchester rifle and cartridges, a canoe, blankets, kitchen dishes, and small hardware. All the material was afterwards recognized by the storekeepers.

This constitutes the second notable capture by Constable Markle within a brief period. A man overtaken in similar fashion was recently brought to sentence for robbery and he is thought to have operated in conjunction with Eastman, now awaiting trial.

The rugged picturesque character of the Georgian Bay shore at this point seems to offer exceptional opportunities for pilfering, but police pursuit in a speed launch cuts off the means of getaway by water, which is usually relied upon.

A mixture of rainwater, lavender and benzoin is an excellent remedy for a sunburned skin.

The hair should always be brushed out and left free at night, that the air may circulate.

SHE HEARD MUSIC

Helen Keller Put Teeth on Bridge of Violin.

PETOSKEY, Mich., Aug. 12.—Miss Helen Keller, the blind, deaf and dumb prodigy, has heard music for the first time. With her teeth held against the bridge of a violin she caught the vibrations of various notes and they were carried to her brain.

Prof. Franz Kohler of the Berlin Conservatory, former concert meister of the Pittsburg Symphony Orchestra, played for Miss Keller. The first note was sounded on the E string of his violin. Miss Keller was astonished. She held her teeth fairly against the instrument while Kohler played strains from Saint Saens, using both the high and low registers.

"Like the voices of singing angels," Miss Keller communicated to Miss Macey, her teacher. She was exhausted from the excitement.

Miss Macey said today that this was the first musical sound that has reached the brain of Miss Keller, despite reports of her previous knowledge of notes.

Action is Promised.

KINGSTON, Aug. 12.—(Special).—W. J. Driscoll, secretary of the Trades and Labor Council, has received a letter from the acting deputy minister of labor at Ottawa stating that the department will deal with the matter of men working ten hours a day on the causeway being built by Fallon Bros. It states that the fair-wage schedule embodied in the contract calls for a working day of eight hours, except on tugs and dredges. The men can be paid by the month.

Bradford Votes to Bonus Firm.

BRADFORD, Aug. 12.—(Special.)—By an almost unanimous vote, only three voting against, a bylaw was carried here today to grant a bonus of twenty thousand dollars to the Watsons, Limited, manufacturers of wire screens, now doing business in Toronto, but who are removing to Bradford. The establishment of the factory here promises a new era in the life of Bradford. Citizens are jubilant over the result and celebrated with a torch-light procession, bands and bonfires.

CONTRIBUTION FROM FIJI ISLANDS TO BRITISH NAVY

Found Farewell Message.

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont., Aug. 12.—(Special.)—The following note, found at Prospect Point today resulted in an [illegible] search which up till tonight has been fruitless: "August 11th, 1913, 3 p.m. Dear Friends: If you find my body please bury it for I am sitting on bank river ready to go. So good-bye everybody in world. M. E. W."

Steamer Saved Two Men.

KINGSTON, Aug. 12.—(Special.)—Coming over from Charlotte during the night, Captain Max Shaw of the steamer Howard saved the lives of two men off Sodus Point, whose names are unknown. The men were in a sail boat but it was swamped and they were struggling in the water, wearing life preservers.

SUVA, FIJI ISLANDS, Aug. 13.—The Fiji Islands will contribute in future to the maintenance of the Imperial navy.

The Legislative Council, which contains ten official and eight unofficial members, of whom six are elected and two native, nominated by the Governor, has passed a resolution favoring a contribution of one per cent. of the revenue.

On a recent revenue return for the islands the amount that will be contributed will approximate $10,000.

The native population of the Islands is 95,000, immigrant East Indians 17,105, and Europeans about 3,000.

IRONWORKERS' OFFICIAL TO FACE JURY ON NOV. 4

URGES A CONCLAVE

Australian Government Wants Naval Defence Discussed.

LONDON, Aug. 12.—(C. A. P.)—The eagerly awaited announcement of the new government's program was made yesterday, says The Times Sydney correspondent, and provides among other things for an alteration in the electoral law, restoring the postal vote and removing restrictions on the press, an alteration in the arbitration act to prohibit granting of a preference to unions with political connections, and tariff revision in accordance with the report of the interstate commission. Reference was made to Canadian reciprocity. Proposals for developing overseas and especially British markets will be discussed with the high commissioner. A naval conference is being urged on the British Government, meanwhile Rear Admiral Henderson's proposals will be generally adhered to." Provisions for the building of warships locally will be expedited and high professional advice will be obtained immediately regarding sites and plans and cost of works.

In naval bases rifle clubs will receive increased assistance as a scheme of national insurance on contributary basis. Among other proposals are that the postal department should be controlled by commissioners and by co-operation with the states regarding immigration on a basis of Deakin's scheme.

Girl May Be Stolen.

COBALT, Aug. 12.—The failure of searching parties, after combing Burnt Island and dragging around the shores of the little island for an entire day to find 5-year-old Grace Cooper, who disappeared from her mother's camp on Friday of last week, has lent a new aspect to the mysterious disappearance. A rigid police investigation is now demanded, and the theory is advanced that it is probably a case of kidnapping.

The provincial police have sought the assistance of the Dominion department, as the matter is out of their jurisdiction, Burnt Island being in Quebec.

Members of Crew Scared.

KINGSTON, Aug. 12.—(Special.)—The steam barge Navajo, coming from Buffalo heavily laden with pig iron on its way to Brockville, ran into a storm on the lake for several hours. The situation was so serious that the members of the crew donned life preservers and prepared for the worst, but the steam barge weathered the gale and got into Kingston safely.

Business Manager of Union Appears Before Magistrate Jephson at Whitby on a Charge of Having Destroyed a Rope by Putting Acid on It—Gamble Denies Having Seen the Rope.

TORONTO, Aug. 13.—"Altho the evidence has been purely circumstantial, men have been hanged on less evidence than that which has been brought against you."

Stead M. Gamble of Toronto, business agent of the Ironworkers' Union, was at Whitby yesterday committed by Police Magistrate John S. Jephson of Pickering for trial on the technical charge of having destroyed a rope valued at twenty dollars by use of sulphuric acid, and in doing so Magistrate Jephson made the above comment on the evidence.

The trial is to take place in Whitby on Nov. 4 before a high court judge.

The charge had arisen as the result of the alleged actions of Gamble when a strike of the workmen engaged in the construction of a viaduct at Dixie Creek in Pickering Township on the new Toronto-Montreal line of the Canadian Pacific Railway was in progress. The work had proceeded with non-union men, and the crown charges that on June 16 when the works were shut down Gamble poured sulphuric acid on a coil of rope with the intention of injuring, if not causing, the death of non-union men engaged there.

Gamble has been in custody in the Whitby jail since his arrest several weeks ago, but at the conclusion of the hearing yesterday Magistrate Jephson announced that he would grant bail on the furnishing of $1000 cash. At this Frederick A. Koeck of Berlin, father-in-law of the accused, stepped forward with the necessary amount, and as a result Gamble was able to leave Whitby on the train for Toronto last night, accompanied by his wife and his two little boys, aged two and four years. The wife and children were present in the court room thruout the whole of the hearing.

Previous to yesterday's preliminary hearing William Black and Job Cordin had sworn that they saw Gamble handle a rope coil and then throw away a bottle which was later picked up and found to have contained sulphuric acid. L. J. Rogers of the provincial laboratories had also given evidence and stated that he found traces of sulphuric acid on the rope and in the bottle.

At the reopening of the preliminary hearing at Whitby yesterday H. H. Dewart, K.C., of Toronto, appeared for the accused, and Crown Attorney Farewell prosecuted.

When placed on the stand in his own defence Gamble accounted for the time he spent in the vicinity of Dixie, stating that he was accompanied at the time by William McCuaig, who had left Toronto with him.

"I sat down and rolled a cigaret and lit it," he said. "While I was there I saw a little squirrel running about the fence corners. I picked up three or four little stones and threw them at the squirrel. Then I ran to the fence and looked over to see if I had hit the squirrel. McCuaig looked on and saw all that happened."

It is alleged that Gamble was sitting on the coil of rope on which the acid was placed. In this connection his counsel, Mr. Dewart, asked him:

"Did you put anything on that upon which you were sitting?"

"No," was the reply.

"Did you have any sulphuric acid in your possession?"

"No."

"Did you see any sulphuric acid?"

"No."

"Are you in the habit of carrying sulphuric acid?"

"No."

"Then you never saw this bottle said to have contained the sulphuric acid?"

"I did not have it and never saw it."

In being cross-examined by Crown Attorney Farewell Gamble denied having even seen the damaged coil of rope, but was willing to admit that it might have been where he was sitting.

"It may have been there; I would not swear it was not, but I did not see it," he declared.

In his evidence Gamble was corroborated by his companion Wm. McCuaig.

CONCERT IS IN TUNE

Europe Agrees to Lay Heavy Hand on Turkey.

LONDON, Aug. 12.—(Can. Press.)—The concert of Europe is in splendid tune, according to Sir Edward Grey, who, however, hinted in the house of commons this afternoon that it was possible one of the great powers might intervene in Turkey if provoked.

With regard to Thrace and the fortress of Adrianople, Sir Edward Grey bluntly stated that if Turkey did not accept the advice of the powers, action would sooner or later, either by financial distress or armed intervention, bring her to disaster, but he took some of the sting out of this declaration by saying that the European powers would require some time to examine the situation before deciding on the final steps. The foreign secretary concluded:

"I do think that both Turkey and the Balkan allies must not count on the belief that the abstinence of the powers from forcible intervention during the last few months means that under all circumstances any one of the great powers will not intervene if sufficient provocation be given."

Arrested Wealthy Japanese.

FRESNO, Cal., Aug. 12.—(Can. Press.)—H. Iwata, rated as the wealthiest Japanese of Fresno county, was arrested today by U. S. Immigration Inspector Brazie and faces deportation on the ground of being in this country illegally. Iwata owns part of the property in which were housed forty Japanese women who were arrested recently. He owns a business block, a modern Japanese theatre, and is a director in a Japanese land company.

Children Cause Fire.

BELLEVILLE, Aug. 12.—(Special.)—Children playing with matches this morning set fire to Mr. David Thompson's barn in Huntingdon Township, causing destruction to the same. The flames leaped fences and crops in the field, compelling the neighborhood to fight the flames, which spread to adjoining property.

HAMILTON YOUTHFUL AT ONE HUNDRED

The City of Hamilton is gay this week celebrating its one hundredth birthday. Hamiltonians from all parts, many of whom have not seen their native city for years, are making a pilgrimage to the home of their nativity this week in order to shake hands with the old place and wish it many happy returns.

Hamilton, like most large Canadian cities has grown very rapidly from modest beginnings within the last century. Many of its founder's descendents are still living and some reside in the city itself.

The first settler in the district was Robert Land, who at the time of the revolution left New England rather than fight against the King. He left his home in Delaware and started for the frontier of Niagara, and then made his way along until he reached a clearing at the head of Lake Ontario. It was not an inviting spot, but Land was of dauntless pioneer stock and he determined to subdue and not be subdued.

He seems to have lived on this spot for seven years alone and his family had given him up for dead, they, however, followed his trail and at last discovered him living in a clearing on the lake.

The surrounding country was the home of snakes, wolves and bears, and it is said that the present market-place is the exact spot where the wolves were wont to forgather, a fact not to be made light of.

Robert Land could not have lived a very lonely life as there were enough Indians about in those days to keep him company.

But the true founder of the city was George Hamilton. At the time of the war of 1812 and 1814 the site of the city was a village, in 1812 George Hamilton laid out the land into town lots and during the following ten years the city grew very rapidly.

To-day Hamilton is the third city in Ontario and is a centre of shopping, of industries of all kinds and is situated in the finest fruit farming country in Canada. The people of Hamilton are very proud of their city and particularly are they fond of their mountain which overlooks the city and which they would not have removed under any circumstances.

Every one of her sister cities will join in wishing Hamilton many happy returns of her hundredth birthday and at the same time complimenting her upon her youthful appearance. It would be very fitting if each city of Ontario were officially represented at these celebrations.

THE UNREASONABLENESS OF MR. ASQUITH

Mr. Asquith, in replying to another deputation of suffragists said the other day that he was willing to grant votes for women as soon as it was proven that the women of England want the vote.

What an unreasonable old fellow he is! Have not windows been broken, golf links destroyed, pavilions, churches, mansions, railway stations and theatres been burnt down; what more proof does Mr. Asquith want?

Not to mention the noble army of hungry martyrs, the privations of Miss Pankhurst in Paris, and the crowning fatal encounter of Miss Davis with a race horse.

What Mr. Asquith is getting at when he says that the need for women's suffrage is not proven, is beyond all comprehension. What does he want these dear ladies to do? Does he want them to—let him be very careful, for these women are getting beyond constitutional or even sane methods!

EDITORIAL NOTES

The sequel to the runaway marriage at Cobourg ought to be an object lesson to all young ladies, to parents, to selfish, self-confident young men—and also to persons. The minister who married them ought to have had better sense.

The Montreal Star warns its readers against the dangers of canoeing through carelessness and too much audacity. "It is simple madness for anyone not a strong swimmer to venture far from shore in a canoe. It very often happens that the second person in the canoe is a lady dressed according to the modern fashion which is a death trap if the craft is capsized."

"Ottawa has water mains but they don't know where they are." This was the effect of a piece of news the other day, and some people in the south end of the city are wondering if Peterborough cannot find its mains, for they are waiting patiently for city water.

Hamilton is en fete over its centennial it has great reason to be proud of itself, for it is a fine village. Mr. Hamilton, after whom the city was named, would be rather surprised at the growth of the old place, if he could see it to-day.

Kansas Medicine.

He said to a Prohibitionist:

"It is splsslitudlinous on your part to think that prohibition would succeed in cosmopolitan New York. Prohibition would do worse here than in Kansas.

"You know how it does there. There liquor can only be sold as a medicine. As a New York visitor was buying a toothbrush in a Kansas drug store one afternoon a brawny cowboy entered with a four gallon demijohn, pumped his great wicker demijohn on the counter, the druggist looked at him inquiringly and said:

"'Fill her up, Jim. Baby's took bad.'"—Detroit Free Press.

Painfully Mixed.

A very fashionable young man stopped at a florist's one hot summer day to order a box of flowers sent to his lady love. At the same time he also purchased a design for the funeral of a friend. On the card for the box he wrote:

"Hoping this may help you to beat the heat."

The other card bore the one word "Sympathy."

Very soon the girl telephoned "Thank you so much for the flowers. But why did you write 'Sympathy' on the card?"—National Monthly.

Green Things.

It's full of green things growing,
This garden patch of mine,
Where golden sunbeams glisten
And early dewdrops shine.
I've hoed it every morning
And watered it each night
And watched the tiny leaflets
Come peeping into sight.

It's full of green things growing,
My little garden patch,
But I am far the greenest
Of all the verdant batch.
With fond anticipations
I sowed a peck of seeds,
But pulled them as they sprouted
And raised a crop of weeds.

EXPERIENCE OF MOTHERHOOD

Advice to Expectant Mothers

The experience of Motherhood is a trying one to most women and marks distinctly an epoch in their lives. Not one woman in a hundred is prepared or understands how to properly care for herself. Of course nearly every woman nowadays has medical treatment at such times, but many approach the experience with an organism unfitted for the trial of strength, and when it is over her system has received a shock from which it is hard to recover. Following right upon this comes the nervous strain of caring for the child, and a distinct change in the mother results.

There is nothing more charming than a happy and healthy mother of children, and indeed child-birth under the right conditions need be no hazard to health or beauty. The unexplainable thing is that, with all the evidence of shattered nerves and broken health resulting from an unprepared condition, and with ample time in which to prepare, women will persist in going blindly to the trial.

Every woman at this time should rely upon Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, a most valuable tonic and invigorator of the female organism.

In many homes once childless there are now children because of the fact that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound makes women normal, healthy and strong.

The Best Detective Story of the Last Ten Years

"You poor child!" exclaimed Mrs. Missioner, hardly controlling her voice. "What about yourself? If it is distressing to me to come here, it is terrible for you to be here. How can you stand it?"

"One learns to stand many things," she answered, "when fate commands; yet if anyone had told me a few weeks ago that I could so much as retain my reason in a place like this! Now that you are here, it seems far easier. Oh, but it is good of you to come!"

The widow took the girl's hands in her own and patted them softly as she whispered words of encouragement. She could not trust her voice to speak for the first few moments. As she looked at Elinor's slender grace and the deathless honesty in her soft, gray eyes, the horror of the girl's situation came home to her with redoubled force. It was by a mighty effort, and by that alone, that she prevented herself from sweeping the girl into her arms and making a dash with her for the freedom beyond the great steel door. For an instant that impulse almost got the upper hand of her common sense. Had not Sands been there, she might have done something so foolish as to complicate her young friend's position still further in the eyes of all the city's newspapers and their readers. As it was, she increased the tenderness of her caresses, and sought to soothe Elinor's agitation with little love words such as had long been common in their daily intercourse. But this tenderness only recalled to Elinor all her affection, safety, and shelter she had left behind her in Mrs. Missioner's home, and at the thought she broke into uncontrollable sobs.

The millionaire's discomfort was augmented a thousandfold by this scene between the women. He shifted his weight from one foot to the other, crumpled the rim of his derby hat until it bent like the brim of an Alpine, and at length, unable to view the girl's distress with anything like equanimity, he walked to the other end of the reception-room and stood looking through the giant lattice-work at the tide of traffic in Centre Street.

It was not until the widow had restored Elinor's calmness, not until she had assured the trembling prisoner of her love, confidence, and full belief in her innocence a hundred times, not until their emotion had affected even the matron long inured to human woe, that the girl saw Sands. His sturdy bulk, the square set of his shoulders, the uncompromising fidelity in his strong face, gave her a sense of pleasure. Surely her case could not be desperate with two such loyal friends to defend her! For the space of a starflash, she forgot even Fitch, although her lover at that moment was hastening uptown with Britz in quest of the missing thread that should lead to her vindication. Still with one arm around Mrs. Missioner's waist, she extended her hand to Sands, and thanked him in a way more effective than any girlish prettiness for the proof of his faith in her that he had given in coming with Mrs. Missioner to see her.

"Not that it would take much persuasion to make you accompany Doris anywhere," she said with a smile, and she was not at all remorseful when she noted the dark flush of pleasure that spread over his features. "But I cannot help taking comfort in the fact that you have come to see me, and that very evidently it has cost you no struggle to do so. If all of you could only know what these long weeks have been to me, you would understand how deeply the sight of old friends affects me. Here I have been in a world apart. The poor creatures who share this dreadful home with me only make my situation worse, for I can do nothing for them, and yet the sight of their misery distresses me beyond words."

Elinor did not know how much she had been spared by the considerateness of the warden in assigning her to a tier of cells in which the more brutal inmates of the Tombs never were confined. She had only a glance of the nether depths. Grave though the charge against her was, the good old man, whom an accident of politics had placed in control of the prison, had recognized from the first that she was of finer mould than anyone who had been entrusted to his custody in his whole term of office, and he had seen to it that her eyes and ears were not assaulted by the sights and scenes of the blacker depths. Years passed, and Elinor was a woman of much graver maturity ere she knew how much misery she had escaped.

The visit of Mrs. Missioner and Sands did Elinor so much good that, when they went away, it was with a lighter heart she returned to her cell, with renewed courage she steeled herself to await the efforts of the good friends and the devoted lover she knew were working to clear her name of the frightful charge Donnelly and Carson had lodged against her.

Her confidence in Dr. Fitch was not misplaced, for in the short time when Mrs. Missioner in her limousine was speeding back to her home in Millionaires' Row, and Sands, in a brougham, was returning to his office in the Bowling Green building, Fitch and Britz were standing on a Fourth Avenue corner a short distance north of Twenty-third Street, gazing with dismay at a twenty-story skyscraper that stood on the site of the old curio shop to which duty had called the young ambulance surgeon years before.

"You are sure this is the place?" asked the detective.

"Absolutely," said the doctor. "I went over there to get some brandy for the old man when I was working him out of his stupor."

"Well," said the sleuth, "so far as that old curiosity shop is concerned, we're up against it; or, what is worse, we are not up against it. We are confronted by this steel and stone monstrosity, and I guess there's no use wasting time making inquiries there; but there may be a few old-timers with memories along this block, and we'll see what we can find out. You take that side of the street, and I'll take this."

Britz and Fitch went into one shop after another patiently repeating persistent inquiries as to what had become of the veteran curio dealer. Blank stares and equally blank answers were the result until Britz, in a tiny tobacco shop that was the center of all the old-time places huddled together for protection against the encroachment of progress, unearthed a memory incarnate in a man who, Fitch said, might have been the twin brother of the amateur alchemist.

"Yes," said the man, "I remember him, and it's a funny thing to me that anybody who ever saw him could ever forget him. He was the queerest little old duck I ever ran across."

Britz thought if anyone could be queerer than the ancient tobacconist he would have to step out of a page of Dickens.

The incarnate memory recalled that the curio dealer had been taken away a week or two before his shop was torn down to clear the ground for the foundation work of the great skyscraper. No, he didn't go away. He was taken away.

"Anything wrong with him?" asked Britz.

"Well, not exactly what you might call wrong, so to speak," quavered the old tobacco merchant. "I wouldn't go so far as to say there was anything you might exactly call wrong with him, but neither would I undertake to tell you that he was altogether what you might call right," and he touched his forehead significantly.

"Oh!" said Britz, "Ward's or Randall's?"

"Huh," said the old tobacconist, "I don't know what you mean."

"Why," said the detective, "what I mean is did they take him to the Asylum or to the Workhouse?"

"I reckon it wouldn't have been any use to take him to the Workhouse," said the tobacco dealer, "because, so far as I know, he never done no work in all his life, and he was too old a dog to learn the habit by that time. No, I guess they took him to the other place; but what do you want to know for? Are you missing heirs?"

Britz and Fitch laughed.

"No," he said, "my friend here just wants to brush up an old acquaintance." When the two had bought enough cigars to recall faintly the dreams of prosperity that had inspired the old man's youth, they strolled to the Twenty-third Street corner, where they jumped aboard a crosstown car that took them to the Island ferry.

CHAPTER XV.
At Ward's Island.

"It's rather a remarkable coincidence, I'll admit," said Britz to Fitch, as they stood on the deck of the little ferry boat that bore them toward the Island; "but it's possible your little old friend had something to do with the making of the imitation Haharanee diamond. You realize thoroughly, I'm sure, the importance of that link in our chain of evidence. It may be difficult to fasten the responsibility for manufacturing all the other fraudulent diamonds of the necklace upon the guilty person, because diamonds of that size can be imitated in any one of several large cities; but the man who made the fake Maharanee is a past master of his craft; a man so skillful that even the most expert artificers of Europe and America do not pretend they can equal him."

"What makes you think the curio dealer had anything to do with it?" asked Fitch. "How could it be done? I thought the Maharanee was made quite recently?"

"I don't know how long it's been," the detective replied. "It may have been only a few months, and the diamond, it is possible, may have been copied any time within the past year. That big office building has been less than a year in construction, and it's well within the bounds of fact that the curio dealer received the commission for the work twelve months ago, or possibly more."

"Oh," said the physician, 'there's one flaw in your theory. He was not a fakir. All the information I gleaned about him convinced me that he was not engaged in the manufacture of bogus jewels. His grand purpose in life was to make real diamonds."

"Precisely," said Britz. "It is that fact, much more than anything else, that leads me to think he may be in the employ of the persons we are trailing. Doesn't it occur to you that the false Maharanee, in order to deceive Mrs. Missioner and all her friends for so long a time, must have been such a beautiful piece of work that it could not have been intended as an imitation? In other words, didn't the man who made the imitation Maharanee believe he was manufacturing a genuine diamond?"

The physician was struck by the force of the detective's logic. He realized instantly the possibilities of this new clue. He glanced at the Headquarters man with unmistakable admiration for his cleverness, as he said:

"Lieutenant, I owe an apology to at least one member of the force—yourself. For many years I've had the idea that the last thing any policeman required to succeed in his work was real intelligence. I accepted the popular conception of the force, including the Detective Bureau, which is that "the finest" are men of brawn and little else. I now perceive that brain is an essential to a real detective, and I am free to admit that you display not only intelligence, but a high order of intellect."

Britz's features relaxed into his inscrutable smile.

"It's well not to generalize, doctor," he returned. "The Lexow investigations and other legislative probes, as the newspapers are so fond of calling them, have certainly put the force in a bad light in many ways. Then, too, the performances of some of my colleagues are not calculated to inspire the thinking portion of the public with any great confidence in our ability; but we are not all dubs. I'm glad you recognize my endeavor to thresh out this case along logical lines. After all, successful detective work is only applied common sense."

The little boat grated her nose against the Island pier, and the two investigators sprang ashore. As soon as they entered the asylum grounds, their positions were reversed. Fitch became the mentor, Britz the willing pupil, for in that abode of darkened reason were medical men whose hourly association with that phase of existence made them welcome gladly visitors from the outer world—especially members of their own profession. Fitch, as he ran up the steps of the visitors' entrance, was received royally in the office by three or four physicians and surgeons who had known him in his Bellevue days. There was no jealousy of his success among them. He had shot ahead of several of them, and it was pretty well understood among the Island doctors that Lawrence Fitch was rapidly forging to the fore as a fashionable physician. What was more important in their eyes was the fact that he had gained real distinction in his profession. Several minor but helpful discoveries of his had been recorded gratifyingly in the "Lancet," and more than once his name had been mentioned with flattering recognition at meetings of the County Medical Society.

Fitch was now in his element. He grasped warmly the hands held out to him, clapped two or three of his closer cronies on the back, and presented Britz to the little group with a few words of introduction that won respect for the man from Mulberry Street.

"Got a patient here, Larry?" they asked him jokingly.

"No," said Fitch, "not exactly a patient; but it's possible you have a case here I'm a little bit interested in." He recited the history of the curio dealer, with an urgent request that everything in connection with the old man be revealed to him. Britz, accustomed as he was to glean his facts toilsomely, was unmistakably surprised by the readiness with which each of Fitch's friends promised aid, and hastened to put their promise into execution.

One of the younger doctors showed himself familiar with the old diamond maker's case, and seemed thoroughly to understand his delusion.

"He is now in my ward," he said. "He has been there six months; rather unusual case; harmless, but hopeless. Can't rid himself of the idea that diamonds are banked up all around him, and that all he has to do is to make one with his own hands to possess the whole of that wealth in jewels. He does his best to make it, too. Unfortunately the ingredients he demands include several dangerous chemicals, and of course he cannot be trusted to go pounding away with a pestle and mortar when his brain is so far gone that he is likely to forget the combination."

The other medical men looked interested.

"What do you do with him, doctor?" asked Fitch.

"Oh, I substitute harmless things—a little bismuth and sodium phosphate, and a dash of French chalk, and he thinks he has everything he needs. All the stuff he wants that is not dangerous I let him have. He is happy enough mixing and mashing the paste and hammering away all day long. He rolls the mess into dirty little grey balls, and thinks they are diamonds."

Australia's New Bank.

The remarkable record made by the new State Bank in Australia will probably prove an incentive to other countries to follow her example. This bank is apparently encouraging thrift to a national degree. For instance, it has a savings bank department and interest at 3 per cent. per annum is paid on sums from $5 to $1,500. The commonwealth has a population of only four and three-quarters millions of men, women, and children, yet there are more than 1,600,000 separate accounts in the savings banks both federal and state. In other words there is one account for every three of the men, women and children of Australia. The security of the National Bank is the whole of Australia. There is no limited amount of capital. There are more shareholders in the Commonwealth bank than in any other banking institution in the world, for it should be remembered that the shareholders comprise the whole population of the country, and their number is constantly growing. A bank of this character seems certain to prove an immense asset in the development of the country for its investments, loans, and its entire operations will be confined to Australia and will centre on the material progress of that country.

FORTY THOUSAND MEN REQUIRED

Farm Laborers' Excursions—This Year's Wheat Crop Will Be the Largest in the History of Canada.

The wheat crop of 1913 will be the greatest ever harvested in Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta, thus requiring the farm laborers of the East to recruit and assist in harvesting the World's greatest bread basket.

The Governments of the respective Provinces state that forty thousand men will be required for this year's harvest. These will have to be principally recruited from Ontario, and the prosperity of Canada depends on securing labor promptly. The Canadian Pacific, on which Company will fall practically the entire task of transporting the men to the West, is already making special arrangements for this year. Excursions from points in Ontario to Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta will be run, and special trains operated, making the trip in about thirty-six hours and avoiding any change of cars or transfers. This will be a day shorter than any other route.

"Going Trip West," $10.00 to Winnipeg, plus half-cent per mile from Winnipeg up to MacLeod, Calgary or Edmonton.

"Return Trip East," $18.00 to Winnipeg, plus half-cent per mile from all points east of MacLeod, Calgary or Edmonton, to Winnipeg.

THE MAHOGANY MILL.

James Lick Made Good His Boast When Scorned as a Suitor.

The story of "Lick's Folly, or the Mahogany Mill," has to do with the romance of the life of James Lick, the donor of the Lick observatory.

In early life young Lick fell in love with the daughter of a well to do miller for whom he worked. When he made known his love, which was reciprocated by the girl, the miller was angry and is said to have replied:

"Out, you beggar! Dare you think of my daughter, who will inherit my riches? Have you a mill like this? Have you a single penny in your purse?"

To this Lick replied that he had nothing as yet, but one day he would have a mill beside which this one would be a pigsty.

In 1854 the quiet, parsimonious James Lick surprised everybody by building a magnificent flour mill near San Jose. The mill was finished within in solid mahogany, highly polished, and was furnished with the best machinery possible. He made the grounds about the mill very attractive and began early to set out trees both for fruit and ornament.

Lick caused his elegant mill to be photographed without and within and sent the pictures to the miller who had scorned him in his youth.

Nineteen years after Mr. Lick built his mill, Jan. 16, 1873, he surprised the people of San Jose again by giving it to the Paine Memorial society of Boston, half the proceeds of sale to be used for a memorial hall and half to sustain a lecture course.—Exchange.

Moved by Messrs. Morrison and Squire, that the accounts as read, be paid.—Carried.

During a severe electric storm on Friday night or Saturday morning of last week, Mr. Robt. Morrow and family of Dummer, had an experience they will not soon forget. On account of the severity of the storm Mr. Morrow thought it better to be prepared should any of the outbuildings be struck, and therefore rose and dressed. Mrs. Morrow and their one child remained in bed and had both a remarkable experience. The lightening bolt entered the house, shattering a number of window panes and sought out the two beds on which Mrs. Morrow and her child were lying, with the result that both beds were badly wrecked. The mattresses on both beds were rendered almost useless both being torn and scorched by the electric fluid. The miraculous part of the affair was that neither Mrs. Morrow nor her child were hurt by the lightning. Mrs. Morrow says she experienced a tingling sensation accompanied by a ringing in her ears. The next day however, she was as well as usual.

This is certainly one of the strangest freaks of lightning we have ever heard tell of.

At Norwood the lightning was very sharp, but the thunder appeared to be at a considerable distance from here. The rainfall was very light, barely enough rain falling to settle the dust.

On Saturday morning last about eleven o'clock, the grim reaper entered the house of our esteemed townsman, Mr. F. H. Birt, and called to rest the one who, for the past 41 years, has shared his sorrows as well as his joys. Mrs. Birt, who has been in failing health for the past few years and who, for several months has been bed ridden, was ever patient and the end came very peacefully. She fell to sleep and passed to her reward.

Deceased, whose maiden name was Susan Ann Buck, was married to Mr. Birt on November 7th, 1872, and they have ever since resided in Norwood. They had five children, two of which died in infancy. Their eldest daughter, Mary, died a few years ago. Two survive, viz: Miss Annie who resides at home and Mr. Will, of Pense, Sask.

Mrs. Birt was the daughter of the late Thomas Buck of Asphodel. She was born on the 4th day of April 1851, at the homestead, the present home of her brother, Mr. W. T. Buck. Her brothers and sisters surviving her, are W. T. Buck, of Asphodel, H. G. Buck of Norwood, and Mrs. D. Sanders of Toronto.

The funeral will be held on Monday afternoon. Place of interment Norwood cemetery.

GRADUATION GIFTS.

Vanity Bags Are Dainty and Extremely Useful.

Many of your young friends will graduate this year, and you are no doubt wondering what to give them. Why not make them each a vanity bag? Vanity bags are dainty and extremely useful; therefore any girl would be delighted to possess one.

It requires twelve inches of four inch wide ribbon of a plain design. Baste an inch wide hem at each end and embroider a row of brier stitching an inch from the edge on all sides of the ribbon. Fold the ends over and neatly whipstitch the sides together.

Thread narrow satin ribbon through the top to form a drawstring and finish the ends with rosettes of the ribbon. If desired the center of the tiny vanity bag can be decorated with an embroidered monogram or a wreath of forgetmenots and foliage embroidered with pale pink, blue or white silk to match the ribbon used.

This latter makes an especially dainty decoration and is easily done, as the flowers are not padded. A wreath formed of miniature rosebuds, daisies or violets would be equally effective. Within the bag place a handkerchief, tiny mirror, powder puff, cake of powder and a piece of pinked flannel containing black and white pins. This little vanity bag can be placed in the pocket of the evening coat or in the muff and is always ready to aid milady when the occasion demands.

Cotton Blouses Very Simple.

The smartest of summer blouses in cotton materials is a very neat but coquettish affair. If there is any trimming at all it is down the front in a straight untrimmed piece of lace or embroidery. Nearly all of these new waists open in front, and often there is only a group of pin tucks about the opening, with a ruffle that is broad at the neck, becoming narrower as it reaches the bust and vanishing entirely at the waist belt.

BLOUSE OF CREPE DE CHINE AND HAND EMBROIDERY.

The dressiest of the new blouses are beautified with a great deal of hemstitching, the holes coarse and the thread large. The kimono shape is much in evidence, with the yoke running down the entire length of the top of the sleeve or finishing in a rounded or pointed piece just below the armhole. The sleeves vary in length from elbow to full length.

Points for Mothers

Why Daughter May Rebel.

Far be it from a simple soul who merely writes to stir up another family fracas in these days of much domestic disorder. But it does seem as if any young girl who is unbecomingly dressed by her mother this summer would have grounds for rebellion. Most of the styles shown for girls in their teens are so charming that it will be inexcusable if the ugly and unsuitable ones are chosen.

For of course there are some that are both ugly and entirely inappropriate for the jeune fille, though some of our young girls are appallingly blind to the latter fact. The only explanation of the appearance of these girls is that their mothers have abdicated all authority over them. The girls themselves do not seem to realize that they are voluntarily giving up the most charming rôle in the world.

The whole question, however, is receiving its due share of attention in current discussion of manners and morals, so we may be allowed to stick to our muttons, otherwise modes.

The flounced skirt is secure of its position as a leader of youthful fashions in wash materials and is being developed in constantly increasing variety. It may consist of a deep tunic reaching to the knees, with a single flounce below that. There may be three flounces, growing deeper from the belt to the hem or reversing that order and having the shortest one at the bottom and the deepest one at the top.

One charming model seen recently had an eighteen inch tunic with three sixteen inch ruffles below it. The next step may be the solid ruffled skirt—in narrow ruffles—which has always been especially attractive on slim, girlish figures.

There is one feature, however, that is almost essential to bring these flounced skirts up to date. The ruffle or tunic, or whatever it is, must be caught up slightly, generally at the left knee in front, and fastened with a rose or a bunch of flowers. The same accessory is added at the belt, where it is half covered by the loose folds of the corsage.

The skirt often has a band of colored satin ribbon encircling it underneath the shadow lace, for the most attractive of these frocks are of shadow lace or net flouncings and "all overs." They can be made at home or by an ordinary dressmaker, which is another point very much in their favor. Of course the big soft girdle is of wide ribbon or of silk or satin by the yard and always in a color.

Dressing Up.

Mother came down in a pretty afternoon dress, and wee Maud and Billy were still in their rompers. They were nice, clean rompers, to be sure, but still undeniably the everyday garments.

Maud put up a plea for a "best" dress, and mother took her up and put on a modest little gingham dress.

"Now, Maud," she said, "you will have to stay on the porch with mother. You cannot play with brother in the sand pile. Wouldn't you be more comfortable in the rompers?"

"I know I can't play in the best dress," said the small woman, "but I feel comfortable in my soul."

Every woman will know just what Maud meant. We all feel comfortable in our souls when we are freshly and neatly dressed. It is well not to ignore this fact when training the children. When the little girl and boy are old enough to care for it it is well to have a change of clothing just before the homecoming of father. It may be the simplest and plainest thing, but it should be reserved for that time, and it will give the desirable dressed up feeling. No one desires children to think of their clothes, and the romper is surely the ideal play garment. But if we are going to teach the children to be neat and dainty we must begin in childhood. The woman who ignores her clothes is rather an unpleasant creature. We must also be careful not to let the children ignore them too entirely.

One hundred industrial companies, with capital of $15,000,000 were launched in Winnipeg in 1912.

SOME CHANGES IN INCINERATOR AGREEMENT

Will Probably be Accepted by City Council To-night,

It is probable that the agreement between the City and the A.H. Reid Incinerator Company for the building of an incinerator here, will be found satisfactory at a meeting to-night and the agreement will be signed.

Last night, at Council meeting some objection was taken to certain items of the specifications. Following a lengthy discussion, the matter of further consideration of certain points was placed in the hands of the Property Committee, which met this morning. This committee will report to-night.

The specifications call for a 20 ton incinerator, and they provide for extensions of the plant by 100 per cent.

SPINNING ASBESTOS.

A Thread a Hundred Yards Long and Only an Ounce in Weight.

When it leaves the cobbing sheds asbestos is sent to the spinning mills in bags containing about 100 pounds. It is then first carded by a machine somewhat resembling the saw tooth gin seen in cotton mills. This machine separates the tangled fibers, upon the completion of which operation there occurs a final carding on a regular carding machine. Leaving this carding machine the asbestos is combed smoothly and the fibers are laid parallel in a uniform mass.

The next step is to treat this mass in a rotary spinning machine. First the mass is spun into a coarse yarn. Then it is drawn and spun until it becomes fine and quite strong. In case a hard, strong thread is required for certain fabrics the asbestos yarn is placed in a doubling and twisting machine, where two or more of the yarn threads are combined. If the asbestos is to be impregnated with rubber a smooth, hard finished thread is not desirable.

For a long time the problem of spinning asbestos presented many difficulties by reason of the manner in which the threads persisted in slipping past one another. Eventually it was found that, under the microscope, a thread of asbestos displayed a notched surface and that by means of special twisting the spinning could be successfully accomplished. The result is that, after many years of experiment, manufacturers nowadays are able to turn out a single asbestos thread 100 yards in length and not exceeding an ounce in weight.—Exchange.

CORNER GROCERY EPISODE PLAYED TO SMALL AUDIENCE

But Presentation Was Superior to Initial Performance and By-Law is Passed—There Will be no Store

Only a small audience greeted the second presentation of the Corner Grocery Episode, at the Civic Playhouse, last night, but the general opinion was that the return engagement was a little better than the initial performance.

The story of this piece is well known, but can well be repeated. For some time past, the residents west of Park street and from King street to Weller street, have been spending their hard-earned cash in an endeavor to make this section of the city, a thing of beauty. They have built or purchased modern residences and while apparently enjoying life, a cloud arose.

A hustling merchant from the southend, Ralph E. Braund, accepted what any wide-awake citizen would do, an opportunity to purchase a house and lot at the corner of St. Joseph and Charlotte Sts. He decided that a store might be a paying proposition at this corner, so he decided to go ahead with a store.

The residents of the locality didn't want a store and applied to the City Council for a law preventing the same, and after much activity, placed their plea before the Civic Legislators and were turned down, because a sufficient number of the Law Makers failed to say yea. It was reported that one member not present was absent from the city on a fishing trip.

The Lament from the West had, however, touched the heart of one of the Law Makers and he enlisted with the Majority of 9½. The telephone was called into commission and an effort made to have all the Law Makers present on the night of the second chance. The finale is very pretty.

One could readily discern a smile on the countenance of each and every one of the Council Of Ten. Some of the audience smiled too.

Ald. Wm. Langford enters and he also smiles.

Ald. Duffus arises and says, "I move the first reading of a by-law, etc., etc.," after which Mayor Bradburn calls for a vote and the by-law is carried in the first reading.

Again Ald. Duffus arises and says, "I move that the Council go into committee on the second reading."

Ald. Green who has shown signs of uneasiness accepts a nod from the Mayor, he also arises.

"It would appear to me," he says, "that this is a very unusual proceeding. We decided last meeting that we had not the authority to pass this by-law. Now it would appear after a certain amount of getting together, the by-law is brought forth again. It's ill-becoming of this Council to try to put through a by-law like this at this moment. I still think it's wrong; it's not good law and it's certainly not justice. I venture to say that 30 per cent. of the names submitted are those who are not in the very best position to sign."

Ald. Gordon arises. He denies the accusation, that of lobbying. He explains that Ald. Buller had at the time of the first meeting been absent on a fishing expedition and had possibly missed his train. Ald Langford, quite true, had come in late but that was nothing unusual, although he didn't mean that Ald. Langford had contracted the habit of being late for meetings.

"Everything has been done regularly," continues Ald Gordon, "and we now ask for the full vote of the Council.

Ald Buller arises. He also denies the accusation. He was not on a fishing expedition. It had been a matter of his bread and butter. He believed the whole Council had practically pledged themselves to pass the by-law if the people subscribed the money to purchase the property from Mr. Braund. In his opinion the great percentage of the people were in favor of a restricted district.

"This by-law can be changed in three years," he says. "It isn't for all time to come."

Ald. Duffus arises. He favors the passing of the by-law.

Ald Langford says he is in favor of the by-law. He had been summoned from Chemong Park to register his vote.

Ald Green again arises and seeks to show that the passage of the by-law will mean that all teamsters, auto owners, delivery men, will be excluded from the territory.

Ald. Gordon says, that such will not be the case.

The vote is taken and the Law Makers answer as follows;

Ayes— Aldermen Buller, Gillespie, Gordon Duffus, Langford, Anderson McIntyre and Mayor Bradburn.

Nayes— Aldermen Duncan, Green, and Johnston.

"I declare the by-law carried in the second reading," says Ald. Johnston, who has had the chair.

Some more smiles.

Mayor Bradburn ascends the throne.

Ald Buller moves that the by-law be read a third time. Again there is a majority, and the Mayor announces that the by-law is passed. Again, the smiles are noticeable.

The curtain ascends and they live happily ever after.

Warm Weather Dress For the Baby.

When the warm weather months confront us the young mother begins to think about cool clothes for baby, and not the least important of the articles required for the wardrobe is the loose coat to be worn over the long dress, for baby dare not be exposed to drafts at any time.

The needlework shops are showing an attractive variety of long coats made of crepe de chine or albatross. These can be copied with little difficulty.

Purchase a kimono pattern for a baby and stamp the border with scallops. Down the fronts and around the sleeves stamp a dainty flower design. Either forgetmenots, rosebuds or violets are suitable. White silk of a fine quality should be used to embroider the flowers.

First pad the petals, using white darning cotton for the purpose. Make the padding stitches the length of the petals and cover them with silk, making the stitches at right angles with the padding. Buttonhole the scallops with heavier twisted silk, padding them first with the darning cotton.

Tie the fronts together with white ribbon an inch in width.

Printed linen chintzes so much liked for summer house furnishings may be washed indefinitely.

The fashionable voiles with raised dots or figures should always be ironed on the wrong side.

FIERCE ARAB DOGS.

Easy to Put the Big Brutes to Flight if One Knows the Trick.

The village dogs of Arabia are a real danger to strangers, whom they attack on sight without provocation. By strangers I mean any one except their own immediate owners, whether natives or not, writes Lady Ramsay in the Sunday School Times. They are, as a rule, great, powerful brutes, often very handsome, extremely fierce and capable of defending the flocks from wolves and other marauders. I have often been told that when attacked by these ferocious animals the proper thing to do is to sit down quickly on the ground, when they will at once desist.

"But for my part I never had the courage to try this plan and had never seen it done during all my years of travel till last year. We had stopped to rest and eat our lunch in a village oda, and I was looking out from an open balcony and saw an elderly Turk coming along between some houses opposite.

Suddenly two huge dogs, barking furiously, dashed at him from an open gateway. Instantly he dropped to the ground in a sitting position. For a moment I thought he had fallen and expected to see the dogs on top of him. To my astonishment they turned and fled, their tails between their legs.

Before they could return, if they would have done so, a couple of villagers appeared, helped the old fellow to his feet and accompanied him out of the range of my vision.

To make gum arabic water, so often used in starching, take two ounces of white gum arabic crystals and dissolve in half-pint of warm water. Strain through muslin then bottle and cork.

WHETHER by accident or design, it is at the Auteuil Steeplechase race meet that the prettiest models appear in Parisian summer clothes. While it is a day that has not the grand elegance of the Journée des Drags nor the world wide popularity of le Grand Prix, from the point of view of women's clothes, it is the most interesting of the races, and has been for the last decade. Indeed, the prettiest costumes are generally saved for it.

Being, as it is, the next to the last big race of the Paris season, it generally brings out the filmiest type of dresses; they seem doubly attractive in the picturesque setting of the Auteuil pesage. The way cotton dresses are made up for these race meets is most unusual. In America cottons are more generally connected with the useful tub frock. In France, where cotton fabrics are less plentiful, they are made up in the same serious fashion as a nice linen or silk dress, and never get any nearer tubbing than the professional cleaners. By the time a Parisian designer has gotten through with a gauzy cotton, voile or crêpe dress it is a glorified creation that would make its homelier sister, the tub frock, hesitate to bear it company.

Lace and mousseline de soie made up with sheer net is another fabric combination this year that is masquerading as material for afternoon frocks, though it has lost nothing of the evening dress in its cut excepting the train. When you add to this a narrow line of fur around the tunic edge, or a fur stole that has been carried as a protection from the chill summer dampness of the Bois, you have the keynote of the summer afternoon fashionable robe. Vaporous, strangely décolleté, it has made fashionable France laugh and shrug amused shoulders, but scandalized others more conservative, who fear that it may prognosticate a return to the licentious dress of the Directorate. The fact remains always, however, that a well bred woman in questions of extreme style always knows where to stop in the matter of decency of dress, and always will know. Those who are to be pitied are the unfortunate ones who do not possess the sixth sense, and not only transgress the line of decency but of good

Besides, the diaphanous dresses of this summer, those of cupple satin, charmeuse, crêpe meteor and liberty have been as popular as ever, even if they have failed to oust the crêpe and crepon gowns, plain or brocaded. There have been the new combinations of lace and tulle, which are perhaps the most popular of all, and, still newer, tunics or overdresses of lace with wrapped skirts of satin. In this case the satin is seldom seen above the high waist line, unless by folded girdles or pointed tails of the satin that fold over the filmy blouses.

The tight trussed figure now takes on a passé and old fashioned air, and woman looks more and more like a beautiful vase, with gently rounded hips, accentuated by soft drapery folds; slender ankles that are half covered by the scant draperies that are literally wound about the feet, with convenient slashes to allow for walking. The shoulders have resumed their natural curves under the filmy or silken drop tops, the hair is flat and the hats are small, though the ornaments on these commence to be startlingly large in some of the latest models.

The striking gowns seen at the race meets always attract attention, and it is absolutely marvellous that the charming women who wear them can carry them off with such utter lack of consciousness when they are the cynosure of all eyes. One of the most effective gowns snapped by the camera at the Auteuil Steeplechase this year and reproduced here is the dernier cri of fashion. Nothing is lacking. The skirt, made of one piece of material, is draped up in folds and gives just the fashionable curved contour to the lower part of the figure. It is slashed and opened down the front under tiny satin buttons of gray charmeuse, like the gown. The corsage, almost sleeveless and as décolleté as an evening gown, is a soft unlined mass of charmeuse, tulle and lace. A tiny velvet hat posed over a simple hairdressing has the picturesque bridle string of velvet under the chin; the slippers are laced with satin ribbon. Ostensibly a race course gown, to be worn only on special occasions, it nevertheless is an exponent of all that is latest in fashionable trend, and which doubtless will be reproduced later in simpler form.

The mousseline and mousseline de soie dresses seen at this race were smartly topped off by velvet hats, and velvet sunshades bordered with tulle also helped to give the snappy note so desirable in thin fabrics.

In a group of four light dresses snapped by the cameras three are accompanied by velvet hats. Of these one is faced and bordered with straw, one adorned by a white aigrette and the other with a feather fantaisie. The two latter figures wear lace dresses, one a tunic top tied in with a wide sash that has a big butterfly bow at the neck, the other a three flounced skirt, the colored sash knotted at one side of the front. The dress at the right is composed of a long tunic and a lapped and draped skirt of white satin. The fourth figure wears a crepon gown of dull pale blue, with a lace top. A long sable fur scarf is carried and the tulle hat is trimmed with a ribbon bow and aigrettes.

Another gown pictured here has an embroidered tunic of mousseline and lace belted with a silver filigree girdle and graded festoons of silver; a large jewelled clasp is placed in front. There is a wired Medici lace collar about the neck. The slender draped skirt is of white supple satin. A faille silk hat is adorned by a paradise ornament.

The three-flounced skirts have an immense amount of popularity already. A variation from those that encircle the whole skirt is seen in one here, where the flounces, made of mignon plaited tulle, are broken in front by a flat panel of tulle with lace insertions. The bolero is also of tulle and lace, with a loose rolling rever of lace. Hat, rose and shoes are of chestnut brown—the hat of velvet, the rose and shoes of satin.

Black satin, the skirt caught by a jet ornament up in front and draped, is topped off by a white appliqué lace tunic, belted with the satin. The décolleté is outlined with a double lace frill. A white plush hat adorned with a white aigrette is worn with this costume. A rose satin gown has a plaited tulle tunic, the shaped lower edge hemmed with a narrow line of brown fur. The frankly décolleté edges of the corsage are outlined with a lovely lace Medici frill. The hat has a velvet crown and a lace brim.

Venetian lace forms a part of two other gowns seen at Auteuil. One has a tunic of it, the pattern outlined with gold braid in an ochre tint posed transparently over a black satin skirt that is draped up on the front seam. Here, too, a slash makes walking possible, while preserving the correct ultra fashionable silhouette. A single large rose is thrust in the belt. Laced slippers are worn. A large velvet tam shape is caught up at one side with an ornament.

The other gown is of black satin, the skirt folded into the waist line and draped in the usual new lines. It is almost covered with an overskirt shape of white Venetian lace. The filmy corsage is a soft vaporous mass of Venice lace and tulle. At the triangular décolleté there is a cluster of roses.

GUELPH HIT HARD IN THE FIRST AND NINTH

Louis Cook's move in the fifth of yesterday's game in sending Stark to the coop and calling Kirley to the hurling hemp, prevented a dangerous rally by the Petes and Guelph won out by eight to five.

At that the locals came along again in the fifth and tied up the score, but that was their best. Kirley tightened up and the Rowanites placed but two men on the paths for the remaining three innings.

Star Cresswell got away to a bad start, when he was hit for a quartet of runs. He too settled down and held the visitors safe till the sixth, when the Indian catcher hit a hot one down first. The ball sped along and before Fox could recover it from the river, Big Chief was home.

Cresswell continued his good work and it looked like extra innings as both hurlers were going strong. In the ninth, however, the visitors took another batting streak and biffed three runs across. The Petes failed to do anything in their half.

The score:

FIRST GAME IN FOOTBALL SEMI-FINALS ON THURSDAY

The first game in the finals for the Midland League will be played on Thursday afternoon on the Nicholls Oval between Pickering, winners of District No. 1, and the C.G.E. of Peterborough, winners of No. 3. The game will be well worth going to see, as Pickering come with a good reputation having won their district by defeating Bowmanville 3—0, and St. George's, of Oshawa, by 5 to 1. They are also playing three men who were on the Green River team when they won the intermediate championship of Ontario, so it is expected that the locals will have to put forth every effort to uphold the reputation which was gained by winning the Midland League championship three years in succession. As Thursday is the weekly half holiday, it is expected there will be a good crowd to see the struggle. The kick off has to be called for 2 o'clock so as to enable Pickering to catch the 4.33 train home. The C.G.E. team will be chosen from the following players, who are earnestly asked to be at the Oval at 1.30 sharp: Moritty, Evans, Gribb, Hell, Mason, Hesser, Wilson, Twist, French, Fegett, Williams, Gish, Milburn, Mellor.

A Toronto referee will handle both games in these finals.

WHAT A MEMORY!

Some Prodigious Mnemonic Feats of Celebrated Men.

When Porson, the famous Greek scholar was once congratulated on his amazing memory, he answered sadly, "Please don't! My memory is a curse to me rather than blessing; for it compels me to remember everything I would wish to forget."

Of Porson it is said that he never forgot anything he had ever said. Not only could he repeat every line of almost any Greek author, from Homer to Xenophon, but he could give the page and position on the page where it appeared. Once he found a friend, on whom he called, reading Thucydides. "Hallo, Porson!" exclaimed the friend. "I am glad you have come. I was just puzzled by this odd Greek word," mentioning it. Whereupon Porson quoted the entire passage in which the word occurred.

"But how on earth," exclaimed the questioner in amazement, "do you know that the word appears in that passage?" "Well," answered Porson, "it is quite simple, I knew that it only occurred twice in Thucydides — once on the right-hand, and once on the left-hand page of the edition you are reading. As I saw you were reading the left page, I quoted the passage in which it occurs there."

On another occasion, when he was asked whether a certain English word had ever been used by a good authority, he replied without a moment's hesitation. "There is only one instance, and that is in Fisher's funeral sermon on the death of Marguerite of Richmond, and you will find it on the third page on the right-hand side." And there sure enough it was found.

"Macaulay," James Stephen once wrote to Greville, "can repeat all Demosthenes by heart, all Milton, and practically the whole of the Bible, both in English and Greek; besides this, his memory retains passages innumerable of every description of books, which in discussion he pours forth with incredible facility." As a child of eight he repeated every line of "The Lay of the Last Minstrel" after one reading; and on one occasion he kept seasickness at bay by reciting the whole of "Paradise Lost" during a voyage from Holyhead to Dublin.

Thomas Fuller, author of the "Worthies of England," after he had listened to a sermon, was able to recite it, from text to peroration, without a pause or mistake; and on one occasion, after a quick walk from Temple Bar to Cheapside, repeated both forwards and backwards the contents of every sign that he had passed on both sides of the roads. For Ben Johnson it is claimed that he could recite every line he had ever written and entire books that he had read.

But we need not go back to these times to find examples of amazing memories. Browning, even in his old age, after a single reading of a book used to quote page after page as fluently and accurately as if he had the volume in his hand. William Morris used to boast that, if every copy of the "Pickwick Papers" was destroyed he could restore them to the world without a word missing; and Gladstone, when once he was unable to find his translation of the first Book of Homer to lend to a friend, recited every line of it from memory. When this feat was once mentioned to his great rival, Disraeli, the latter remarked nonchalantly, "That is quite simple. I could do the same sort of a thing myself within an hour." Lord Derby's translation of Homer was handed to him. He retired for an hour, and on his return repeated the first book from memory—backwards.

But even such astounding feats as these have been rivalled by many an actor who makes no boast of his performance. Sir Bancroft tells, with a reminiscent shudder, how in his early stage years he once appeared in forty different plays on successive nights; and in the four years of his apprenticeship played no fewer than 346 parts, many of which had to be committed to memory in a few hours—"long hours of the night," to quote his own words, "being often given to copying out my parts by the light of a single candle." And Sir Henry Irving, in the days of his obscure apprenticeship eclipsed even Sir Squire's record by mastering 428 parts in two and a half years.

In His Defense.

"Daughter," called the father from his position at the top of the stairs at the well known hour of 11:55 p. m., "doesn't that young man know how to say good night?"

"Does he?" echoed the young lady in the darkened hall. "Well, I should say he does!"—Ladies' Home Journal.

His Meek Suggestion.

Mrs. Grimly—Is there any way you can break yourself of that habit of talking in your sleep? Mr. Grimly (tremulously, but hopefully)—Do you think it would help any, my dear, if you'd let me talk more when I'm awake?—Puck.

It is only by labor that thought can be made healthy, and only by thought that labor can be made happy.—Ruskin.

LONDON'S ANCIENT TOWER.

A Beefeater and a Yeoman Look Its Gates Every Night.

Strange to say, very few people are aware of an ancient custom which is still kept up at the Tower of London. Just before midnight a beefeater and the chief yeoman porter secure the keys from the governor's house to "lock up." Having received the keys they proceed to the guard room.

"Escort for the keys!" calls out the porter, and a sergeant and six privates turn out.

The procession then marches off, and the sentries they pass issue the usual challenge of "Who goes there?" to which the answer is "Keys."

Arriving at the entrance to the Tower grounds, the lion's gate, the porter locks the gates and the party returns to the guardroom, the sentry challenging as before and receiving the same answer. However, on arrival at the guardroom again the sentry stationed there stamps his foot, at the same time giving the usual challenge.

"Keys," replies the porter.

"Whose keys?" the sentry asks.

"King George's keys."

"Advance King George's keys, and all's well."

The porter then says, "God bless King George," and all present respond with "Amen." The keys are then saluted and returned to the governor's house, where they remain until the next night's ceremony. — Pearson's Weekly.

COLOR BLINDNESS.

It Takes Some Peculiar Twists In the Matter of Heredity.

Professor Bateson in lecturing before the Royal Institution on "Heredity of Sex" related some curious facts which had been discovered as the result of examining several generations of a family in which color blindness appeared.

A color blind woman was very rarely found, and she was always the daughter of a color blind man. Her sons and daughters would be normal and her sons' families would be normal, but if her daughters had sons they would be found to be normal and color blind in equal numbers.

A curious anomaly with reference to color blindness appeared in twin girls. They were exactly alike in appearance, but one girl was color blind and the other not. No explanation of this exception has been found.

Professor Bateson said that there was a popular belief that sons in certain respects took after their mothers and daughters after their fathers. Within a reasonable range of speculation this was so. As to sons taking after their mothers, they saw this in the experience of their own families.—London Cor. New York Times.

Why Clocks Get Out of Order.

The reason why mantelpiece clocks so often get out of order is so obvious that it is strange that attention to it has not been drawn before. A London clockmaker said:

"It is because mantelpieces are rarely level. If a clock meant for a mantelpiece is not placed in an exactly horizontal position it is sure to go wrong. When the clock gains or loses because of its slanting position people regularly move the hands forward or backward, as the case may be, in order to adjust it. Eventually the clock's hands are moved about so much that the mechanism gets out of order and the clock refuses even to tick. Watches and traveling clocks are constructed differently from the stationary clock, and they will go in any position. That is why they are relied upon more than the ornamental mantelpiece clock."—New York Times.

A Born Statesman.

"What's the idea, George?" inquired Mr. Washington. "Why do you chop down this cherry tree? Have you anything against cherry trees?"

"No, sir."

"Maybe you are in favor of deforestation?"

"No, sir."

"Doing this for a moving picture concern?"

"By no means."

"Then why chop down a tree?"

"I just thought of going on the stump," replied the future father of his country. And then Mr. Washington realized that George was a born statesman.—Kansas City Journal.

ENGINEER KENNEDY'S RECOMMENDATIONS IN REGARD TO DISTRIBUTION SERVICE

An Important Report to the Board of Water Commissioners.

The following letter and report from Mr. Wm. Kennedy, engineer, have been received by the Board of Water Commissioners:

T F Matthews, Esq.,
Chairman Water Commissioners.

Herewith enclosed you will find my report re-proposed new pumping main and the skeleton plan, showing the pipe line as described in report goes forward under separate cover.

As directed by your Board, I made my calculations for delivery at the rate of 9 million imp. gallons per day.

Assuming the present 16 inch main together with a new 18 inch main, the gain in pressure at Auburn at the above rate of delivery, will, over the same rate of delivery with two 16 inch mains, be about 4 1-2 lbs. per square inch. If the new main were 20 inches in diameter, the gain would be about 6 1-2 lbs. The gain in pressure at the corner of Smith and Water streets, with the new main, as laid out, will be about nine pounds, or perhaps a little more with 9 million gallons per delivery over two 16 inch pipes.

I think your suggestion for the 18 inch diameter, is good. For delivery of 4 1-2 millions gallons per day with the proposed new main, the loss to the corner of Smith and Water streets would be lowered from say 35 lbs, as at present, to about 8 lbs. or possibly a little less.

WM. KENNEDY.

THE REPORT.

After a careful study of the locations and capacities of the present pumping main, sub-stations and the general pipe distribution throughout the City of Peterborough, I have concluded that the interests of the city will be best served by following generally, the line as contemplated by your late superintendent, Mr. Henderson, for the new main pipe.

I may say that a position of the present pipe system has been laid out, and constructed to suit the then contemplated additional main pipe line, and to depart materially therefrom would necessitate much duplicating of pipes on streets now served. In any case the originally contemplated route is a good one, and particularly so in looking to the future growth of the city. It will, however, be necessary to increase the pipes beyond the originally proposed capacity.

Commencing at the pump house, I recommend an 18 inch diameter pipe on Water street, to meet the proposed extension of George street with a branch connection to one of the present 12 inch pipes at Auburn, thence the new main will continue on George street to Barnaby Ave and there connect with the George street 12 inches; thence on Barnaby Avenue to Wolsely street, thence on Wolsely street; thence on Wolsely street to Aylmer street, connection to be made with the Aylmer street 8 inch pipe. The main to be reduced to 16 inches after the Aylmer street connection, and continue to Stewart street connection, after which it will be further reduced to 14 in dia. and continue on Wolseley to Fairbairn streets, thence on Fairbairn to Smith street, thence on Smith to Monaghan Road, thence south on Monaghan Road to Sherbrooke street. After connection with 5 inch pipe at Sherbrooke, the main to be reduced to 12 inch dia. and continued to Monaghan Road, to be connected with the present 10 inch at about the same junction of Monaghan Road with Chamberlain street. It is understood that the present dead ends of pipes along the line of the new main will be connected with the main when being laid; also that connection branches be provided at cross streets not now supplied with water; also that the entire pipe line be well supplied with valves for cutting off sections when so required.

These are details that can be worked out later.

There is at present a 12 inch pipe on Barnaby Ave which may be allowed to remain if a 14 inch pipe additional be laid parallel with the 12 inch, and both these pipes connected at both ends with the 18 inch pipe, but I recommend that the 12 inch be replaced by an 18 inch pipe, and the 12 inch used elsewhere.

The duplicate main from the pump house to the connection with the the present 12 inch at Auburn should be laid and put into service as quickly as it is reasonably possible to do so. The single main between these points is a weak spot in your otherwise very efficient waterworks system.

I further recommend that the 8 inch connection between Park street and Monaghan Road on Lundy's Lane be made immediately after the completion of the new main to the present 10 inch pipe; also that the 8 inch pipe on Smith street be extended easterly across the bridge to and connect with the present 6 inch pipe on Concession street.

In case of a large fire, either on the south of the C.P.R. Railway main line or east of the river, the weakness of the water supply of these sections of the city would be quickly revealed.

The new main and branch pipes as described in this report are shown in heavy broken lines on the skeleton plan accompanying the report, and are sufficiently clearly laid down not to require further explanation.

WM. KENNEDY, jr.,
M. Can. Soc. C.E.,
Montreal.

CITY CAN PROCURE BETTER QUALITY OF STONE FOR ROADS

New Proposition Gives Rights to Quarry and Crush the Stone Without Cost—The Owners Remove it at From 75c to $1.25 Per Cubic Yard.

A new proposition for a supply of crushed stone was before the City Council last night, but it was decided to hold the by-law of agreement over for further consideration.

Some time ago a quarry was discovered on the property of James Stoddard in Smith, a short distance north of the Hilliard property and subsequent analyses has shown that this stone is of more value for roadwork than the stone now in use, and the cost will be a trifle lower.

Mr. Stoddard and Thos. Mitchell will give the city the right to use this quarry for a term of five years. The city can operate the stone-crusher and crush as great a quantity as they wish without cost.

The agreement provides that the stone, when crushed is to be delivered to the city by Messrs. Stoddard and Mitchell, at rates which vary from 75 cents per cubic yard to $1.25, according to the distance the stone is to be conveyed. In this manner the owners expect to make their revenue.

FIREMEN WERE ACTIVE THROUGHOUT THE NIGHT

The firemen had a rather busy session yesterday afternoon and all last night. At three-fifty p.m. they were called to a fire at the property of Mr. T. E. Bradburn on Boundary street, directly across from King street. A fire was raging along the fence, and the firemen used ten gallons of chemicals. There was about fifty feet of the fence burned.

At 12.20 p.m. the firemen were called to a fire at the old dam between the Quaker Oats and London street. The fire was burning earlier in the evening, but at midnight it assumed dangerous proportions. After an hour's work the blaze was extinguished.

A third alarm was sent in at 4.30 p.m. P.C. Reid discovered a grass fire in Ashburnham on the bank of the river, which was rather dangerous to Wand's planing mill. The firemen arrived at the station at 6.30 completing an all night's work.

TWO MONTHS' NOTICE FOR WATER SERVICES

In the near future the Board of Water Commissioners intend to pass a by-law providing that on streets where the city proposes to construct pavements, property owners must give two months' notice of their desire to have the service laid from the water main.

This notice being given the Board will construct the service to the sidewalk line and charge at the rate of $4 per year gross. When the service is continued and water is used the charges will be according to the schedule.

When two months' notice is not given, and water service is applied for, the property owner will be charged with the entire cost of the work.

BUILDING RESTRICTIONS

As Provided in the By-law Passed by Council Last Night

The by-law placing building restrictions on a certain area, which passed the City Council last night, provides against the erection or use of any building as a livery boarding or sale stable, or stable in which horses are kept for hire, or kept for use with vehicles in conveying passengers or for express purposes, or for a stable for horses for delivery purposes or for a laundry, butcher, shop, store, factory, blacksmith shop, forge, dog kennel, hospital, or infirmary, for horses, dogs, or other animals.

The property will now be purchased from Mr. Braund by the residents.

Took Third Prize

Wm Reid of Peterborough won third prize with Queen May in the event for district harness horses, at the Cobourg Horse Show.

FACES CHARGE OF ABDUCTION

Dixon will Probably Face Charge of Abduction Here.

W. H. F. Dixon, whose escapade in Port Hope with the Saddler girl, was reported yesterday, will probably be brought to Peterborough to face a charge of abduction.

A Good Catch

Mr. Jack Pattie, of Chemong Park, captured a 19-pound lunge while out fishing yesterday morning on Chemong Lake. The fish is on view at Ray's tobacco store.

Touch of Color on White.

The fashionable summer idea is the white costume with a touch of color. It sometimes comes in a border print or embroidery, again as a girdle or collar or as a decorative button. Sometimes the color is seen in the weave, a yarn of bright color intermingling with white.

LAD IS STILL UNCONSCIOUS

Ernest Young, the Victim of Accident at Canoe Works Has Been Unfortunate

FOUR IN FAMILY

And All Have Been Working so That Home Might be Purchased

Ernest Young, who fell from the platform at the factory of the Wm. English Canoe Co. Saturday morning, and was taken to the Nicholls Hospital, suffering from a fracture of the skull, is still unconscious and his condition is critical.

Young, who is only 15 years of age, was assisting other employes to carry a canoe from the second storey, and in some manner fell off the landing.

At that time the boy had not recovered from a severe injury sustained about a week ago, when a drawing knife fell on his leg, inflicting a deep gash about an inch above the knee. He remarked to Mr. English that he was rather unlucky, and at the same time showed Mr. English a long scar on the other leg, the result of an accident while playing with a companion in England.

There are four members of the Young family, father, mother, one daughter and one son. They have not been in Peterborough very long, and their one desire is to provide sufficient money to purchase a home. With that end in view, the parents and children sought employment and have since been working steadily.

The father happened to be walking on Charlotte street Saturday morning and was attracted to the spot, where a crowd had collected, not knowing that it was his son who had been hurt.

SELLS-FLOTO CIRCUS

Even if you do not care to visit the performance of the Sells-Floto Circus when it comes here on Aug. 20th, it is suggested by the management that you go down to the circus lot and listen to Berni's Grant Serenadum, which will give continuous concerts during the afternoon and evening.

This is the largest musical instrument that was ever made portable so that it could be carried on wheels. It was built at a cost of $20,000, and rivals in excellence the great organs of Salt Lake or St. St. Peter's. Its repertoire includes all the popular selections, operatic gems and classic renditions. You will find it near the main entrance of the big tent. The concert is free to all those who care to enjoy it.

Added to this, you might spend a profitable hour examining the mechanism of the huge wagon which convey the circus paraphernalia from town to town. Ask some of the attendants to show you Curtis' Foolproof Wagon—it will demonstrate to you how modern ingenuity protects the laboring man against his own carelessness. After that, you might take a look at the Sells-Floto horses. They are considered the best of their kind.

The price of admission this year is still 25 cents. The seating capacity of the circus has been increased until there are now seats for ten thousand people and there are three rings instead of two as formerly. 25

NO BOY SCOUT CAMP THIS YEAR

But Young Canada Will Be Out In Force In 1914

Members of the Royal Family Are Expected at the Exhibition

Rev. F. J. Sawers has been notified from the Boy Scout headquarters at Toronto that there will be no Boy Scout camp at Toronto Exhibition this year.

A big camp will, however, be held in 1914, when it is expected that some members of the Royal Family will be present.

PETER PARTED WITH HIS CASH

Farm Laborer Came to City with $100 and Celebrated

Peter McCrea of Douro, appeared before Magistrate Dumble this morning on the charge of being drunk. He was assessed $2 to be paid forthwith.

McCrea, who is an old-timer, came in yesterday and proceeded to spend his hard earnings of $100. Luckily he changed his mind and laid the greater part of the gold away with a friend. This morning at Police Court he wanted 10 days to pay his fine, but on the advice of the Police Chief he paid up and left the station with a cheerful good-bye to the officials.

The emphatic and unanimous approval of the British Medical Profession has been accorded the Veedee.

Sufferers from Rheumatism, Sciatica, Lumbago, Neuritis, Neuralgia, Gout, Deafness, Asthma, Bronchitis, Catarrh, Indigestion, etc., can experience Free of Charge at the Conservatory of Music to-morrow night the wonderful relief and improvement obtained from the VEEDEE.

The following are only a few of the numerous cases successfully treated with the VEEDEE on the platform of the Oddfellows' Temple, Hamilton:

CHRONIC RHEUMATISM TWELVE MONTHS.
Mrs. Jack Doolittle, of 618 James street north, suffering from painful rheumatism in the arm for over a year, stated after a short application of the Veedee that the pain had entirely gone and that she could easily raise her arm, the first time she had done so for eight months.

SPRAINED KNEE FOR THREE MONTHS
Mr. George Castle, of 30 Hunter street, who complained of a sprain in his knee, said after treatment that the stiffness and pain had left him and showed that he could now walk on the platform without limping.

DEAFNESS AND NOISES IN HEAD
Mr. William Roberts, Alexander street, who had been deaf for four years with loud noises in the head, was delighted to find that the Veedee had removed the noises, and he stated that he could hear "a lot better."

ACUTE SCIATICA AND LUMBAGO
Mr Thomas Hamilton, of 102 Burton street, who for two years had suffered from these painful forms of rheumatism, testified of experiencing a marvellous improvement after a few minutes' treatment.

WEAK EYES FOR YEARS
Mr J. Pettigrew, of 233 Burton street, complaining of weak eyes and short sight of many year's standing, found that the Veedee brought him greatly improved vision, enabling him to see faces in the audience much more clearly than before.

PARALYZED FOR FOUR YEARS
Trueman Wheaton said that his left side—arm, leg, hand and foot—had been paralyzed and completely helpless for four years. He wore a steel ankle support and walked with a stick. The touch of the Veedee proved almost magical. After a short treatment Mr. Wheaton said he felt warmth in the previously cold, numb limbs, and was conscious of returning power.

PAINFUL NEURALGIA AND TOOTHACHE
Mr. F. H. March, 208 West avenue north, complained of a most painful attack of neuralgia and toothache. He was overjoyed in finding that the Veedee had completely relieved both in three minutes.

ASTHMA AND BRONCHITIS
Mrs. Addison, who has for ten years been a victim of asthma, experienced pain and difficulty in breathing, brief application of the marvellous little instrument brought instant relief.

STAMMERING FOR TWO YEARS
Mr. Rundle, 281 Main street east, who had stammered for two years, showed by talking to his friends that the impediment had almost entirely disappeared after the application of the Veedee.

SHOULD CONTINUE THE TREATMENT
The demonstrator strongly emphasized to the sufferers the need in order to obtain permanent relief, of continuing the treatment.

FREE CONSULTATIONS WILL BE GIVEN AT THE CONSERVATORY OF MUSIC, PETERBOROUGH, ON FRIDAY AND SATURDAY NEXT
By the Veedee Demonstrators, between the hours of 10.30 a.m. and 12 (noon), 2.30 and 6 p.m., and evening from 8 to 9 for the benefit of sufferers desirous of consulting them privately.

H. L. WILSON ASSAILS GREY

Ex-Ambassador Accuses British Secretary of Subterfuge.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 13.—(Can. Press.)—Henry Lane Wilson, the furloughed ambassador to Mexico, issued a statement here today attacking the recent statement accredited to the British foreign office, declaring that Great Britain had recognized the Huerta government as a provisional government only; that its recognition was prompted by a desire to contribute to the restoration of order and also because of Wilson's congratulatory speech on the occasion of the reception of the Mexico City diplomatic corps by Huerta.

Mr. Wilson characterized the statement as at "variance with the traditions of the British foreign office, and with the character it has maintained before the world for two centuries."

"I doubt the genuineness of the statement, as it is a pure subterfuge unworthy of the British foreign office," said Mr. Wilson in a lengthy discussion.

Mr. Wilson said: "If this statement really emanated from the British foreign office, it is at variance with its traditions and with the character which it has maintained before the world for two centuries. I doubt the genuineness of the statement, as it is a pure subterfuge unworthy of the British foreign office. As there existed at the time of this reception only a provisional government, the government of Great Britain could, naturally recognise nothing but a provisional government, which it did in exactly the same manner and practically the same phraseology as all other European governments. That Great Britain was moved to recognition by its desire to assist in the restoration of order is most likely true, and I believe this factor was the determining one with all governments which followed the example of Great Britain, the most of them recognized the Mexican provisional government at a much later date.

GOVERNOR SULZER OF NEW YORK FACES TRIAL

After an All-Night Session the Legislature Votes to Send Governor to Senate to Be Tried on Charge of Diverting Funds—Eleventh Hour Declaration of Wife Accepting Blame Not Believed.

ALBANY, N. Y., Aug. 13.—(Can. Press.)—William Sulzer, governor of New York, was impeached by the lower house of the legislature at 5.15 o'clock this morning after an all-night session by a vote of 79 to 45 on charges of having diverted campaign contributions to his private use and having made under oath false statements as to his campaign receipts.

An eleventh hour declaration on the part of the governor's wife that she had diverted some of his campaign contributions to the purchase of stock, because she felt the household needed money, failed to avert impeachment. The roll call was one of the quickest accomplished since the assembly began the consideration of impeachment proceedings. But one member rose to explain his vote.

Organization leaders who had sparred for time all night in the fear that their program of impeachment would be wrecked by lack of votes, welcomed new-comers to the assembly chamber, summoned from New York during the early hours, and assured of victory by their presence started a rapid fire of legislation with the adoption of the impeachment resolution.

A roll call showed the adoption of the resolution by a vote of 79 to 32. A committee was appointed to acquaint the senate with the assembly on the findings at the meeting of the senate scheduled for 11 o'clock this morning. Majority leaders asserted their belief that with the presentation to the senate of the articles of impeachment, William Sulzer would automatically cease to be governor and Martin H. Glynn, lieutenant-governor, would assume his office and functions as acting governor. Mr. Sulzer's lawyers entertained a different view.

With the adoption of the articles and the appointment of the two committees the assembly sat down to further work. A resolution calling for the appointment of nine managers to conduct on behalf of the lower house the impeachment proceedings was adopted, and Speaker Smith announced its membership.

Shorn of Their Terrors.

In the light of revelations contained in Mrs. Sulzer's declaration to Senator Palmer yesterday afternoon, Governor Sulzer's friends are inclined today to view the ordeal which confronts him with less apprehension than before his impeachment. By her assertion that she diverted part of the campaign contributions sent her husband to private purposes without his knowledge and used them to purchase stocks in Wall street, she has shorn the articles of impeachment of many of their terrors, his friends declare.

Monday, Sept. 22, was this afternoon made a tentative selection for the date of trying Governor Sulzer on the impeachment charges. This selection, subject to change, was reached at a conference among Senator Wagner, president pro tem of the senate, and judges of the court of appeals.

The impeachment has raised a vital question as to whether, under the constitution, the governor will vacate his office pending final adjudication of the impeachment issue by the senate and court of appeals sitting jointly as a trial court. The indications are that he will contest bitterly the theory of the opposition that he becomes automatically barred.

Lieutenant-Governor Martin H. Glynn came into Albany from his summer home at Cedar Hill during the forenoon and went to his newspaper office as usual. He declined to comment on the situation.

The fact that the various state departments and bureaus are divided in their allegiance to the executive and the Democratic organization which is seeking to depose him stimulates interest in the complicated situation. The possibility of two men endeavoring to discharge the functions of the chief executive at the same time suggests conditions that the courts alone would have power to deal with.

LITTLE GRACE COOPER IS FOUND IN THE BUSH ALIVE

BROUGHT UP AS NEGRESS

Sixteen-Year-Old White Girl is Found by Aunt.

MUSKOGEE, Okla., Aug. 14.—Mrs. N. J. Thompson has commenced action in the Muskogee juvenile court to get possession of Viola Brown, sixteen years old, a white girl who has been living with a wealthy negro family in Muskogee for thirteen years. She has discovered that the girl is her niece.

When the girl was three years old, and after the death of her mother, the father, "Cokkie Brown," gave the child to Mrs. Wiley Jones, a negress, to keep until he made a trip to Pennsylvania. He died in the north.

The child has been brought up and educated by her negro foster parents. She and Wiley Jones' son have been sent to Kansas to school, where there is no discrimination between the white and black races.

It is charged that there is grave danger of the girl marrying Jones' son, a negro, and on this ground the removal of the girl is sought from the negro home.

The Joneses, as stated, are wealthy and will resist the taking of the girl, who they declare was given to them by the father.

Coal Oil Can Explodes.

MONTREAL, Aug. 13.—(Can Press.)—Flora Mercier, aged 17, and Lee Colson, 15 months old, were burned to death, and Mrs. Madere and Mrs. Colson, mother and grandmother of the dead child, are in a serious condition in Notre Dame Hospital following the explosion of a coal oil can used in lighting the kitchen fire.

Mrs. Madere poured oil on a smouldering fire. The can exploded, scattering oil and flames thruout the room, setting fire to the women's clothing. The baby also was a victim of the flames and was burned to a crisp in the excitement. Miss Mercier lost her life in an effort to save the others. The tragedy took place at the home of J. A. Colson, assistant superintendent of the Soulanges Canal, Cascade Point, yesterday.

The Japanese government in consequence of these reports has arranged to give police protection to the leaders of the Chinese revolution who have sought asylum in Japan. It declares, however, that it will not permit Japan to be used as headquarters for Chinese plotters.

Child Who Wandered Away on Burnt Island Near Haileybury and Has Been Sought by a Small Army of Searchers Since Last Friday Is Found Caught Between Two Logs.

HAILEYBURY, Aug. 13.—(Special.)—By nothing short of a miracle, little Grace Cooper, the five year old child, who was lost on Burnt Island, which lies in Lake Timiskaming, midway between Ontario and Quebec, and about three miles from Haileybury, since one o'clock on Friday afternoon, was found alive and well at 3.30 this afternoon, five days and three hours after her disappearance. The child was found by C. H. Burton and John McLennan of Haileybury, on the east shore of the island, about two miles from the camp from which she had strayed. Her head was resting on one log and her feet on another, and caught in this position, she had evidently been unable to free herself.

"Will you come with me?" said Mr. Burton, when the rescuers discovered her. "No," replied Grace, "Will I take you to your mother then?" and the child stretched out her arms and cried "Yes."

A search party of eighty-eight men, all familiar with the bush, left Haileybury on the steamer "Meteor," at eight o'clock this morning for the purpose of making an exhaustive search of the island. The whole forenoon was spent in a most systematic search, but when every bush and nook and cranny had been thoroly examined on that side of the island, towards which she had been seen straying, and no trace of the missing child had been seen, practically all hope was abandoned of ever finding the child on the island dead or alive, and the general opinion was that she must have been drowned in the lake.

The south end of the island had been scoured on Sunday by hundreds of people, and it was thought useless to conduct a search in that quarter and the afternoon was devoted to searching the western shore in both directions and to dragging and dynamiting for the body. Meanwhile Messrs. Burton and McLennan had quietly made for the other side of the island on their own account, and in searching around the shore they found little Grace at the foot of a cliff about two feet from the water. A gasoline launch arrived most opportunely just as the child and her rescuers returned to the main party, and she was rushed back to Haileybury for medical attention with all expedition.

Grace looks none the worse for her terrible experience, and Dr. Arnold says that all she requires is careful nursing. How the child reached the other side of the island and was found alive is a mystery. The bush in many places is almost impenetrable to a strong man, and want of food and the wet and cold weather might have caused the death of many a seasoned bushman lost for such a period.

CANADA STANDS WELL

Dominion's Credit in Europe is High, Says Railroad Man.

MONTREAL, Aug. 13.—(Can. Press.)—"Canada stands well in the European financial world and will be able to get all the money she wants," said William Wainwright, vice-president of the G. T. R., on his return from England today. "The British investor, however, will ask higher rates of interest for his money than formerly and will scrutinize more closely the class of securities brought under his notice. Wildcat schemes are barred, but anything gilt-edged will command all the money necessary.

"The Grand Trunk credit stands, as is shown by the manner in which the million and a half sterling notes were taken up, the issue being largely oversubscribed and going to 1½ premium before I left.

"Financial men believe that prospects are much brighter, and that this fall the purse strings will be loosened and money become more plentiful. I found many over there who had invested in lands in the west disappointed with the setback that has taken place. I advised them, however, to stick to their investments, and they will surely realize handsome profits. If the crops are good this year Canada's continued prosperity seems assured."

STARTS OFF WELL

Ex-Premier Fisher of Australia Roasts New Government.

SYDNEY, Australia, Aug. 13.—(C. A. P.)—The first step taken by the opposition in the federal parliament today was the tabling of a motion of censure. The late Premier Fisher submitted a resolution of regret that the prime minister's speech indicated no intention on the part of his government of reducing the cost of living and revising the present tariff. The 'government program,' which he described as oldtime Toryism, would destroy the beneficial effect of existing industrial laws. He regarded the prohibition of preferential treatment of trade unionists as a stab in the back of associated labor.

Objects to Being Left Out.

CORK, Aug. 13.—(Can. Press.) A deputation representative of all the business interests in Cork and Queenstown started for London today to protest against the decision of the postmaster-general to permit the big Cunard line mail steamers to omit Queenstown as a calling port. The decision of the postmaster-general was rendered on the plea of the Cunard line that it is dangerous for such vessels as the Mauretania and Lusitania to enter the harbor, but members of the deputation deny this, and as proof of their contention point out that the White Star line steamer Olympic, which is much larger than the Cunarders mentioned, has no difficulty in calling at Queenstown.

Belgians Get Contract.

POLICE PARTIALLY SOLVE MURDER OF TORONTO MAN

They Are Trying to Trace a Woman and Three Men Who Are Believed to Be Responsible For the Garrotting of William G. Martin, a Milliner's Buyer—Rough Looking Man Entered House.

NEW YORK, Aug. 13.—Three men and a flaxen-haired woman, not more than 23 years old, are being sought by Deputy Police Commissioner Dougherty, for the murder of William G. Martin, a milliner of Toronto, Ont., who was drugged and garroted in a rear room on the first floor of a furnished rooming house at No. 453 West 57th street, Tuesday night.

The chief of the detective bureau is also interested in the whereabouts of a young man described as Frank Beatty, who married Miss Hannah Grieve, an aunt of the milliner.

Beatty and his three sisters, Dougherty learned last night, came to New York from Toronto after the death of the father. Beatty's mother, the deputy commissioner was told, died in this city two months ago, and her body was sent to her birthplace for burial.

"I just met Frank Beatty. His mother is dead and he moved down town," Martin told his friend, Mrs. Anna Barrett, just before he left her home, No. 355 West 58th street, where he had taken a room on Monday evening at 7 o'clock. "Beatty lives around the corner and I will be with him a short time. Then I will come back and go to a show with you and the young ladies." He referred to Miss Bessie Collins and Miss Margaret Graham, buyers, who are staying at the Victoria Hotel.

At 10 o'clock on Tuesday night Martin's body was found lying crosswise on a bed in one of the furnished rooms, first by Theodora Jones, wife of a steamboat engineer. A man and a woman, who a week before paid $4 as an instalment of the $5 demanded for the place, had vanished. Two men who frequently visited the pair.

The police have secured good descriptions of the people who were the last known occupants before the body of Mr. Martin was found. The room was rented on Aug. 5. On that day two people called on Mrs. Theodore Jones and told her they wanted to hire a room. One was an undersized and dandified youth; the other a woman whose hair was so light she might almost be taken for an Albino. The youth introduced himself as Mr. Johnson, said the woman was his brother's wife and that when they had picked out a room the brother would come with their effects later in the day.

They chose the rear parlor on the ground floor. Near night a tall, slender man with black hair and a thin drawn face came with two grips. He said he was Mr. Johnson, husband of the woman who had already installed herself in the room. The dapper youth in the flashy clothes left when the older man came.

Nothing occurred in the rear parlor to break the even tenor of the rooming house until last Thursday night. Then, near midnight, Mrs. Jones, who sleeps in the front parlor, was aroused from sleep by the noise of a fist banging on a door. The bang-bang continued uninterruptedly. Mrs. Jones, going to the wall which separates the front from the back parlor, heard the noise of whispering in the room occupied by the Johnsons. Then she heard Johnson open the door and call:

"Beat it, you. We won't let you in and we don't want you around here."

Mrs. Jones opened her door and saw a stranger leaving the hall, while Johnson peered thru the partly closed door. She demanded of Johnson an explanation of how the man got in the house. Johnson declared he had not admitted him, but the next day, Mrs. Jones notified Johnson that on Monday he would have to give up his room. Monday she saw Johnson and his wife leave the room, but carrying no baggage.

She did not enter the apartment until Tuesday night, when she discovered Mr. Martin's body and notified the police.

Short after 4 o'clock Monday afternoon a young woman and a five-year old girl, who was dressed in white, came to the lodging-house and enquired for the Johnsons.

"Step into the rear room," Mrs. Jones told the visitors. George Needham, 14 years old, who lives with his parents on an upper floor of the house, stood in the vestibule. After a half hour the young woman and child left the house with the woman lodger and her husband. They walked toward Ninth avenue and that was the last time they were seen by members of the Jones household.

"At 7.30 o'clock Tuesday night I saw one of the men enter the room with a friend and lock the door," George Needham said last night. "The first man I think was the one who rented the place. I'd never seen the other man before."

From Mrs. Jones, Deputy Commissioner Dougherty learned that a tall, roughly clad man, who looked like a laborer, also entered the room Monday night. He walked into the hallway without ringing the bell. When challenged by Mrs. Jones he said he had permission to visit his friends.

"Have you the key to the house?" she demanded.

"I have not, but everything is all right," he replied and entered the room.

The detectives today found in the closet in the room a photograph of a chauffeur who was a former roomer at Mrs. Jones' house, with whom Johnson, on one occasion, claimed acquaintance. This chauffeur was identified as Joseph Smith, who lives at Coney Island. Smith said he had formerly occupied the room, and had probably left the picture behind when he moved. He admitted knowing a man named Johnson, who described himself as a writer of vaudeville sketches and who used to call on a pronounced blonde girl rooming at Mrs. Jones' house, known as Miss Rosy.

The police incline to the belief that Martin was lured to the room in West 57th street and refusing to submit to blackmail without a fight, was murdered and robbed.

SERIOUS SITUATION ON VANCOUVER ISLAND

Coal Miners on Strike and Rioting Causes Bloodshed.

Canadian Press Despatch.

VANCOUVER, B. C., Aug. 14.—Rioting at the Extension Mines on Vancouver Island, where a coal miners' strike is in progress, has resulted in bloodshed.

One report says six strike breakers were killed, and another says only one was killed and five wounded. Four hundred men took part in rioting yesterday when the strikers led by a prominent union man on horseback attacked strike breakers. Twenty police were despatched to the scene but were prevented by the rioters from landing and an early squad was roughly handled, the ambulance corps being despatched to the scene. One report says the militia has been ordered to the mines, but Attorney-General Bowser denies this and says this step would be decided at a meeting of the Council to-day.

VANCOUVER, B. C., Aug. 14.—The steamer Princess Alice with 300 militiamen on board from Victoria were due at Nanaimo at an early hour this morning in an endeavor to bring order of the strike riots.

VANCOUVER, Aug. 13.—(Can. Press.) Nanaimo is under martial law today after a night of terror. Saloons are closed and a large number of special officers have been sent from Victoria and Vancouver. The home of Alexander McKinnon at Ladysmith was attacked and the building wrecked. A stick of dynamite with a short fuse attached was thrown thru the window, and McKinnon, calling on his family to escape, snatched it up and attempted to throw it out. The dynamite went off in his hand, blowing off the hand and probably fatally injuring McKinnon. The temperance hotel at Ladysmith was blown up with dynamite after the occupants were driven out.

At midnight the mob bombarded the office of The Nanaimo Herald and were incited to wreck the office. No police were available, and members of the editorial staff armed themselves with chunks of lead. F. H. Shepherd, M.P., attempted to address the miners and secure a twenty-four hours' armistice. His reward was a rock which whizzed past his head. Fifteen people in all, including several policemen, were injured.

The provincial executive at a special session in Victoria this afternoon decided to order several militia companies to Nanaimo. The men are now being assembled and a special train will probably take them north tonight.

Twenty-five special policemen left Vancouver early this morning aboard the steamer Princess Patricia for Nanaimo to assist in quelling the riots there. They reached the coal city at noon, but a mob was waiting for them and drove them back aboard before they could leave the wharf. A crowd of strikers remained on guard until 3.10 o'clock, when the steamer started back for Vancouver. At two o'clock seven special policemen reached Nanaimo from Victoria, but these men were set upon by the mob, robbed of their guns and taken down to the steamer Patricia to be sent back with the others to Vancouver. Two Wellington officers were terribly beaten by the crowd. A city policeman who rushed to their assistance was taken away in a fainting condition to the police station.

Misfortune Dogs Family.

ST. CATHARINES, Aug. 13.—(Special.)—William Edward Bracken, the youth who was drowned while bathing in the Welland Canal Tuesday night, was a nephew of Mrs. Bracken of Toronto, the last of the family of six who all died within a year. The local youth, who was 17 years of age, was taken with cramps, made just one outcry, sank and did not return to the surface.

A short time ago his mother died. His father, Edward Bracken, and five sisters live at 75 Page street.

His uncle, one of the victims of the Toronto mystery, was a native of St. Catharines, but went to Toronto some years ago and [illegible].

CIRCUS TRAIN IS WRECKED

Many Employees of Barnum and Bailey's Circus Are Injured.

OMAHA, Aug. 14.—Thirteen persons, all employes of the Barnum & Bailey circus, whose train was struck at Richfield, Neb., by a Rock Island passenger equipment train returning from the Denver conclave, were brought to the Clarkson hospital in this city, all suffering fatal or serious injuries.

In addition to the 13 taken to the local hospital, 29 other injured were brought to Omaha. Their injuries consisted of bruises and cuts.

The wreck occurred shortly after midnight. The circus train was pulling into the siding at Richfield but had not cleared the main line when the passenger train struck it.

LIVELY RUNAWAY ON HUNTER ST.

Two Ladies Were in Cab But Reached Safety

Hunter street east was the scene of an exciting runaway this morning about 8.30. It seems that the horse of Wheeler's butcher rig, in charge of a young lad named Armstrong, was proceeding towards the city. On nearing Hunter street bridge, a one horse cab, occupied by two ladies, crashed into the delivery outfit as the result of the livery horse shying at the steam roller. The collision frightened the occupants of the cab, and they jumped out. The livery horse bolted, taking with it the top of the butcher rig, and also one of the front wheels. The animal ran across the bridge, where the driver was thrown off, but fortunately was not hurt. The outfit continued its mad rush up Hunter street, and turned on to the lawn next to Bathgate's blacksmith shop, where it jumped the fence. Here the grand climax came, for the outfit became wedged in against the fence, and the horse's efforts to extricate itself were futile. A crowd of men were soon on the scene and the animal and rig cleared. The horse was not injured, but the cab was badly wrecked.

DELAYED AGAIN

Action on Wheat Schedule in U. S. Is Postponed.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 13.—(Can. Press.)—Discussion of the agricultural schedule and the proposed free listing of wheat in particular enlivened the tariff discussion today in the senate, Senator Gronna of North Dakota, proposing in lieu of free wheat a duty of six cents a bushel.

Action on the amendment was deferred owing to prolonged debate, a fact which aroused Democratic leaders to a realization of the necessity for some action to speed up consideration of the measure if possible. To this end a Democratic caucus has been called for tomorrow when plans for expediting the bill will be discussed, and a proposal will be made for an agreement that a recess of congress be taken until Nov. 1 after the passage of the tariff bill in the senate and the currency bill in the house. This, some Democrats assert, would induce Republicans to cut short discussion of the tariff and would also overcome all Democratic opposition to currency legislation at the special session.

Debate on the free listing of wheat came to a climax late in the day when Senator Borah of Idaho, referring to the countervailing duty which the Democrats have proposed, asserted it was the same as Canadian reciprocity passed by the Republicans to the betrayal of the farmers of the country.

"We have heard a great deal of discussion," said Senator Borah, "about the desire of the present incumbent of the White House to enforce his tariff ideas upon congress. I am not going to discuss that. I will only say that if the Republican senators had voted their convictions when Canadian reciprocity passed this body there would not have been ten votes for it on this side of the chamber."

Detective Sam Newhall accomplished what appears to be some good work, when he recovered stolen property and arrested two men this morning.

FIRE FIGHTERS LEAVE FOR THE NORTH COUNTRY

Yesterday the wind changed to the northwest and the bush fires in the north country, supposed to be pretty well extinguished, broke out again. The fire has been raging around Bottle Lake for some time and already five camps have been burned as have also many dams and bridges, all belonging to the Peterboro Lumber Company.

To-day this company sent out 10 men in autos to Ketchecum Lake from where they will paddle about four miles to Bottle Lake. They have with them all fire fighting appliances.

SMOKE AND BLACK FLIES

One result of these fires has been that a pall of smoke has been hanging over Stoney Lake for some time and smoke was also very evident in the city last night.

Another result is that the black flies, which inflict such torture, have arrived in the city and are now to be found doing business in the north end of the city.

MISCHIEVOUS JUVENILES MIGHT HAVE CAUSED WRECK

Tampered With Brake of Freight Car, With Result That Car Was Derailed—A Fine of $5.70 Was Imposed

Five juveniles appeared before Magistrate Dumble at police court this morning on the charge of trespassing on the C.P.R. property and causing a box car to be moved on the Sandstone Brick Company's siding. As result a rail was broken and the car derailed. The boys pleaded guilty. Owing to their youthfulness Magistrate Dumble let them off with a fine of $7.66, and a severe warning.

The offense of pulling the brakes on a freight car or train of a railway company is an indictable one, making the offender liable to life imprisonment. Had the car travelled in the opposite direction a serious wreck might have occurred.

A DOMINION HOUSE

Lord Grey has secured a three years option upon a site in the heart of London with the object of inducing Canadians to interest themselves in the raising of a building which shall be the home of all the different Dominion Government officials now widely distributed over London as well as a centre for Canadian commercial operations.

The Review has received a beautiful souvenir, prepared by Lord Grey, setting forth the scheme and suggesting its adoption by either the Dominion Government or a private syndicate of influential Canadians.

No one who knows anything of London can fail to appreciate the splendid opportunity open to Canada in this vacant site. It is without doubt at once the most central and conspicuous position in the metropolis and if the scheme is carried out Canada will be in a position to claim that she literally occupies the hub of the commercial universe.

London is the heart of the world, and, from that throbbing city pulses the life-blood of the world's commerce, viz., capital. It is the main centre in which arises new commercial projects, and which supplies the initiative necessary for the successful carrying out of great enterprises.

Apart altogether from the Imperial significance of such a building, Canada might well seize this proposition from selfish motives. If we are to grow as a commercial nation there will be an increasing need for our agents to be at the heart of things so that every opportunity to advance our interests can be watched by our representatives and taken advantage of. And for this purpose it is essential that the whole of the Canadian forces in England should be concentrated.

It is peculiar to Britishers that they have ever sought and succeeded in combining the practical and the ideal, and this projected Dominion House is an example of this trait in the British character.

John Bull, in all his projects, no matter how mercenary they may appear, has ever an eye to effect. Imperialism is not a mere matter of stocks and shares, although these are indispensable. The Empire is a materialized vision, the uniting of a race, scattered over the planet, in a bond of mutual affection and of cooperation.

Australia is already raising a substantial House in London as a monument of her loyalty and practical interest in Imperial ideals. If Canada is alive to her world-wide interests, and desires at the same time to visualize her genuine loyalty to the Empire, she has an unique opportunity in the offer of the late Governor-General.

"A DIVIL OF A LAW"

The District Temperance Alliance of Manitoulin which met recently has passed a resolution of gratitude to the Ontario Government in regard to the liquor question, part of which reads:

"We have confidence that what they have promised they will do, and that the power of this province will be back of the laws of our country and that private citizens and officials alike will know that the laws are to be strictly and impartially enforced.

"We further desire to express our hope that, under their administration of the affairs of this province that which they have so generously and, as we believe, so wisely conferred upon us shall be so extended and amplified that from every portion of this province, to the fullest extent permissible under the constitution of our country the trafficking in intoxicating liquor shall be banished.

"In these sentiments all agree regardless of our political affiliations."

To the making of laws there is no end. What Ontario wants in this connection is not so much newly devised laws but to devise means of enforcing existing legislation.

One of the chief difficulties in giving effect to present liquor laws is the isolated position of many country hotels. In many of the northern villages of Ontario there is very little public conscience, and hotelkeepers have liberty rather than license in the carrying on of their business. Some of them no doubt keep within the law, but there is a great temptation to ignore it, and this has led to a great deal of drunkenness among the poorer farmers and miners in these isolated places.

Very gratifying reports are coming in with regard to the new law—stopping the sale of liquor in bottles—especially in the outlying country districts where men have to drive miles in order to obtain intoxicants.

One old Irish woman who was a victim of the whiskey habit, and who had to walk a mile in order to get a fresh supply in her bottle when she realiezd that her free supply was cut off, said: "That's a divil of a law!"

CAPTAIN COOK AT FIJI

(On looking into Nuttall's Encyclopedia)

CAPTAIN COOK AT FIJI

When Captain Cook first sighted
The Islands of Fiji,
The natives were delighted
His white-winged craft to see;
They swarmed like beetles on the shore,
And near went mad with glee!

When Captain Cook first landed
On the Islands of Fiji,
When his little boat was stranded
And the King came down to see,
He eyed the Captain up and down—
And asked him home to tea.

O Captain Cook the rover,
Your tales are dear to me!
Your travels are not over,
You still patrol the sea;
We just discovered o'er again
Those Islands of Fiji!

J. L. MILLIGAN.

EDITORIAL NOTES

"The Duke of Canada" is the climax of emigration. But we must not refuse any respectable Britisher who wants to improve his position even though he be a Duke, so long as he has the necessary twenty-five dollars.

The Fiji Islands is the latest British Colony to wake up to its dependence upon the British navy, and it has decided to contribute one per cent. of its revenue to naval defence.

Fiji is a group of islands in the South Pacific Ocean. They were sighted by Tasman in 1643, though first discovered, properly speaking by Captain Cook in 1773. They came first into prominence in 1858 when the sovereignity was offered to Britain and declined, but in 1874 were handed over as a crown colony. They number over 200 islands; Suva is the capital. Sugar, cotton, vanilla, tea and coffee are cultivated, besides fruit.

EXCERPTS

Going In For Methuselah's Record.

An ambitious new citizen, with the habit of taking literally the every day expressions of Americans, obtained a position as train caller at the Union station.

One day he had just called, "All-l-l aboar-r-rd for Kansas City, Den-ver Salt Lake, New Or-rleans, Chinchin nati, Buffa-lo, Balti-more and Nu York!"

A man ran up to him and almost breathlessly asked, "I want the last train out for Cleveland!"

The perplexed caller exclaimed, "What, you should live so long?"—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

The Limit.

It was an English ship with an English crew and an American passenger list. Two stewards were having a heated altercation and pouring forth anathemas upon each other's heads, when as a crowning insult one said to the other, "Aw, you eats just like a passenger."—Argonaut.

The Culprit.

"Had all my money taken last night. Woke up hearing some one in the room. Reached under the pillow for my revolver, but didn't shoot."

"Why didn't you?"

"I'd be a widower if I had."—London Telegraph.

Most Intensive.

"Do you believe in intensive gardening, Mrs. Hoerake?" asked the visitor.

"Well, rather," said Mrs. Hoerake. "I spent all last winter raising one geranium in a soap box."—Harper's Weekly.

MONTREAL, Aug. 13.—At the C.P.R. live stock market receipts for the week ended Aug. 9 were 1600 cattle, 2300 sheep and lambs, 1900 hogs, and 1100 calves. The offerings this morning were 1100 cattle, 1000 sheep and lambs, 1200 hogs, and 250 calves.

There was some disposition on the part of butchers and packers to operate today and in consequence a more active trade was done in cattle at steady prices. The demand was principally for the best grades, of which the supply was fair; in fact, the quality of the stock now coming forward is commencing to show some improvement. Choice steers sold at $6.50; good at $6 to $6 25; fair, at $5 25 to $5.75, and the lower grades from that down to $4 per cwt. A few choice butchers' cows brought $5 25 to $5.50, but the bulk of the trading was done in a class ranging from $4 50 to $5, with common at $3.50 to $4 per cwt.

Small meats active, but lambs continue weak with prices 25c to 50c cwt. lower, with sales of western stock at $6.50, and Quebec at $5 50 to $6 per cwt. There was no change in sheep, sales being made at $4 to $4.50 per cwt. The demand for calves was good, at prices ranging from $3 to $12 each, as to size and quality.

Hogs were quiet, and prices for selected lots were 20c per cwt. lower, at $10 50, and rough stock sold at $9.50 to $10 per cwt., weighed off cars.

Niagara District Lacks Baskets.

ST. CATHARINES, Aug. 13.—(Special.)—Many growers of the Niagara district are complaining about the scarcity of fruit baskets. The basket factories are working all night and day on orders received in the spring. The decision of the Dominion canners this year not to take certain lines of fruit on account of the big supply ahead has increased the demand for baskets for shipping. When the rush of the late tomatoes begins within a few days the situation is expected to be worse.

FIREBUGS START BLAZE

Twenty-Five Thousand Dollar Conflagration in Orillia.

ORILLIA, Aug. 13.—(Special.)—Fire of incendiary origin which started in the barns and sheds of the Grand Central Hotel, on Mississauga street, about 11.30 o'clock last night, wiped out almost the entire block, back as far as Colborne street, before it was beaten out by the local fire brigade at one o'clock this morning. The damage is estimated at $25,000, the following property being destroyed:

Grand Central barns and sheds; Wm. Swinton's house, part of Bick's packing and cold storage plant; part of the C. Moore estate, J. J. Hartley's stock barns and a valuable horse owned by Samuel Reeves.

This is the second big incendiary fire that Orillia has had since the one three weeks ago, when a man was seen running away from the D. Long Company's foundry, which burned down a few minutes later.

Last night's fire was first noticed in the Grand Central sheds about 11 30 o'clock, and at midnight the whole town was out watching the spectacle and assisting the firemen. The firemen succeeded in confining the fire to the Colborne street block, but Mr. Swinton's house was burned to the ground and nothing was saved.

When making a baked custard, add two tablespoonfuls of breadcrumbs. Delicious with stewed fruit. When making a boiled custard, add a spoonful of corn flour mixed with a little cold milk, and boil in the usual way. This just thickens it and prevents burning.

The Best Detective Story of the Last Ten Years

"Let us have a look at him," said Fitch.

"Sure thing! You won't mind if I don't go with you? I have an amputation on in about ten minutes, and as there is a green nurse helping me, I don't want to take any chances in letting her monkey with the ether cone. So you won't mind, will you, if I ask you to [illegible] yourself? Stay as long as you like."

Britz and Fitch were glad enough [illegible] man without an auditor, and with a brief, "So long!" to his colleague, the doctor piloted the detective through dreary stretches in that home of hopelessness to the ward where the curio dealer was found.

In a sunny corner of the long bleak room, the barrenness of which was relieved slightly by a few boxes and pots of geraniums and fuchsias on the window sill, seated at a bench covered with odd-looking leather, was a little old man the physician and the Headquarters sleuth sought.

In the patient's face was a rapt look that told them he was as far away from his present environment as if he had been in the little dingy curio shop where young Dr. Fitch first had seen him. His pliant hands had been plunged many times into a dough-like lump plastic as a sculptor's clay at one end of the bench. A row of jars at the back of the bench was flanked by a phalanx of vials. An earthen bowl half full of water stood at his right hand. Directly in front of him, scattered in workmanlike confusion, were several palette knives and mixing brushes. Ceaselessly his fingers plucked tiny pellets from the plastic lump, rolled and patted them, dipped them in the bowl of water, coated them with the many-colored contents of the vials and jars, then trundled them upon the board with industry purposeful of performance, but purposeless of achievement.

At times a spectral smile seemed to glow upon his cadaverous features—a faint gleam like the spectre of a corpse-light. The sunlight, refracted from the rows of jars and bottles played queer tricks with the contour of his face and gave his [illegible] a ghostlike appearance. He was a poor little shrivelled remnant of a [illegible] what had begun a dabbler in the occult, and which along normal channels might have been a distinguished scientist. No one looking at him could ever have pictured him as possessed of the greed of gain. Britz, though he made no pretence of being a psychologist, comprehended at a glance the outer vision of the former curiosity shop proprietor conveyed little to his distraught scientific mind. Beyond doubt, the old man, as Fitch had said, had run the shop merely as a means to an end. Fitch and Britz stood looking at him for a few moments before. When at last he glanced up, a shade of perplexity flitted across his face, his fingers halted, but they did not stop in their studious task, and he looked at them inquiringly. With a slight shake of his head he apparently gave up the attempt to puzzle out their identity, and once more bent his eyes on the bench he firmly regarded as the threshhold to Golconda.

"Guess you don't remember me, Mr. Martin," said the doctor. The old man appeared not to hear. Britz and Fitch exchanged glances, and the detective took up the attempt to awaken a response from the aged inmate's mental vacuum.

"Pretty busy man, eh?" said Britz. He had touched the right chord. Any reference to the industry that absorbed his fading senses was sure to arouse the intelligence of the old curio dealer. He nodded briskly, and went on with his work more zealously than before.

"Got to finish a contract on time?" the Headquarters man pursued.

Another vigorous little nod, followed by a swift search of the detective's face on the part of the old man's sunken eyes.

"Rather interesting work you're doing," pursued the detective.

Thereupon Mr. Martin rejoined:

"It is the only work that can interest me. I have given my life to it."

"Find it profitable?" inquired the sleuth.

For an instant those gray fingers paused in their manipulation of the clay pellets.

"Well, it depends on what you call profitable, young man," answered the ward of the State. "There are things more important than monetary gain."

"Oh, yes, I know, I know," said the detective hastily. "I suppose your work is purely scientific?"

"It is more than science," answered Martin. "It is art, philosophy, philanthropy—everything. It is the crystallization of the beautiful. Love is beauty, and beauty is life. All mankind needs is beauty in greater measure and higher degree to attain perfection of happiness."

"And you are engaged in forwarding that theory?"

"Yes," said the old man simply. "I have taken upon myself the task of glorifying every home in the world with the prisoned sunlight of the centuries. Every abode of man, however humble, should be illuminated by the light of diamonds. The diamond is the most exquisite expression of creative love we have. The only trouble is that we have not enough of them. It has remained for me—it has remained for the poor old student of mysteries to find the key to the true jewel wealth of the universe. For thousands of years men have been seeking diamonds in the ground. I take them from the air."

In similar vein he ran on, his words betraying the strange groping of a clouded mind that in its time had been nearer the truth than most men's. There was something extraordinary about the little old fellow's brain. It had not cracked; rather, it had been attenuated by overstrain. It was after a process of patient questioning covering so long a time that it ended in twilight, that Britz led the tireless worker back to days before his arrival in the asylum. The protracted inquiry taxed all the detective's skill in word-handling, for each time he lifted the patient's prostrate intelligence above the horizon of sanity, it was only to see it slip back in a few seconds.

Fitch, scientist though he was, long conversant with the phenomena of the mind as he had been, marvelled at the Headquarters man's adroitness. Long before Britz had finished his task, the doctor, in sheer weariness, dropped into a chair and stayed there in silent attention. But the detective remained on his feet, immutable as the incarnation of will itself, and slowly, cautiously, persistently piloted that darkened intelligence out of its depths back to at least a gloaming of coherent memory. So guided, so aided, and lifted along the difficult backward path, Martin's mind reverted to instances that hung like stalactites from the cavern ceiling of retrospection. It was in a flash of intelligence, briefly eliminated as a twinkle of daylight seen from the recesses of a cave, that the old man recalled the great triumph of his strange craft.

"I have made diamonds, yes," he said in response to a query from the detective, swift and searching as a rapier thrust, and beautiful enough to hang about the neck of a princess; brilliant enough to glorify the hut of a toiler in the fields; but there was one—ah!" His recollection reveled in widening circles until its force was spent. For a long time, his hands motionless again, he sat gazing into the past. Britz, feeling that he was on the edge of an important disclosure, waited patiently. Fitch scarcely breathed.

"I mind me," the one-time curio dealer resumed, "of the one great diamond that came as the grand reward of all my labor. Ah, that was a diamond! But though it was a wonderful achievement, I dishonored myself in the making of it for—" and a faint flush deepened on his parchment face. "I fashioned it for gain!"

Without an instant's warning, he pushed away the bench, dropped his face into his hands and gave way to grief that moved equally the man long hardened to dissection of the body and the veteran crime hunter accustomed to vivisection of the soul. Few things are more terrible than to see an old man weep. It is a dual surrender, for tears are the prerogative of youth and womanhood. Britz and Fitch with difficulty controlled their own emotions just for a moment, for tears streamed over the ashen countenance of the broken amateur alchemist, and his wasted form writhed and rocked in convulsive sobs.

"I have had my punishment," said Martin when at last the tempest had spent itself; "but, oh, the long years—the long years of remorse! Urged by poverty, that enemy of seekers after truth and beauty, I succumbed to the temptation the stranger held out to me. I made the great diamond as he desired—and I gave it to him for his gold!"

The doctor glanced swiftly at the detective and started to speak. Britz raised a warning hand, and Fitch checked his exclamation. Seating himself for the first time the Central Office man—the prober of mysteries—laid his hand encouragingly on the diamond-maker's shoulder, and said:

"There, now; don't let it distress you so much. Other men have done things far worse than that!"

"Nothing could be worse," screamed Martin, springing from the low stool on which he sat and facing his visitors in an agony of abasement. "I sold the delight of my eyes, the light of my life, the star of my soul—the queen of all jewels, the purest, truest, most beautiful diamond the world has ever known!"

"Yes," said the detective, "but don't forget it was yours to sell. You had a right to do as you pleased with it."

"I had no such right," cried the alchemist. "That diamond was the product of my laboring hours. I brought it forth from the air, the sunshine, the silver water, the milk of the moon as an Aphrodite is fashioned of dew and mist. It was not a mere stone; it had thought and sense and soul; it was a microcosm of the marvelous!"

Fitch could not hide his astonishment at the learning and poetry the fearfully agitated old man displayed. Britz himself, had not his thoughts been focused rigorously on his purpose, would have stopped to wonder at them. As it was he struck the iron of the alchemist's remorse at white heat.

"What did the stranger want with it?" demanded the detective.

"I don't know," said Martin. His voice still trembled, his features worked, his hands fluttered and knotted themselves in the intensity of his emotion. "He came to me a stranger; he went away the same, and with him went my queen of jewels, my beautiful, beautiful diamond of diamonds! But I will find him," he shrieked. "For centuries I have been upon his path. He thought all things between us when he lured me into parting with my treasure. He said because he had suggested the outline and color of the stone he had a right to make me give it to him for his money; but it was I I who thrust into the glorious gem the fire from heaven. I penned the sunbursts in the priceless prism, and it is mine! [illegible] by right of creation!"

This outburst excited the old man, but in a little while there was another outburst of his emotions. He fairly shouted:

"I will have him though, I will come up with him yet, and when I do, I will give him back his money and make him return the diamond to me. He thought he left nothing to tell me who he was. He thought I never would be able to find him in this big town. He felt sure the old curiosity dealer would not venture far enough away from his stock to track such a fine gentleman. But he forgot one thing. I have kept it all these years, and through it I will find him yet!"

Abstractedly he thrust his hand into an inner pocket and fished out a bit of cardboard. Excitedly he waved it in front of the detective's eyes. Britz resisted for a moment the impulse to snatch it from his grasp, but he gripped himself sharply. Awaiting developments was one of the detective's strong points. As he expected, the old alchemist was in a state of mind to share his knowledge with anybody. After a few more flourishes, Martin laid in Britz's hand a man's visiting card, face down.

Studiously avoiding any appearance of haste, Britz turned it up and read the single line engraved upon it. Without the tremor of a muscle, and with only one swift significant look he passed the card to Fitch.

The doctor, a little less self-re- steadily at a drawing on the back, gazed earnestly at the inscription on the face, then wonderingly, before the card fluttered from his fingers he read the line aloud.

"Mr. Braxton Sands."

CHAPTER XVI.
The Assistant District Attorney

While Britz was struggling with the tangled threads of contradictory circumstances that constituted the fabric of the diamond mystery, the District Attorney's office was not inactive. With the slow stealthiness of a cat approaching its prey it combined the disconnected fragments of evidence gathered by the police into the semblance of a perfect case, and prepared to present it to a jury. The Grand Jury had indicted Elinor Holcomb, and again she was dragged into the glare of a courtroom, this time to plead to the indictment. There remained only the verdict of a petit jury to open the gates of State Prison for her. Her lawyer was served with the fateful notice of trial, and she was made to realize the great struggle was about to begin.

Assistant District Attorney Mott was taking a last survey of the depositions in the case, mentally picturing the curtain of guilt he would weave before the jury. To his mind the evidence was conclusive. It pointed irresistibly to Miss Holcomb as the thief. Experience had taught him that it was not an easy task to convict a woman on anything but the most direct evidence, yet he felt that the net of circumstances had drawn about her so tightly as to leave her helpless in its meshes. It was a compelling picture of sordidness that the assistant district attorney would draw in the courtroom. The central figure, a young woman, beautiful, accomplished, refined, impoverished in an environment of plenty. In her bosom angry passions of resentment and discontent seethe and boil into fury against the conditions of her existence. She longs for the splendor and social position in which she was reared, and of which she feels she has been robbed. There is one way to break from the ruins of her early prospects. It is a dangerous way.

A Voice Without a Soul.

Tibet's dalai lama was greatly disturbed by the first phonograph he saw. Edmund Candler, when in Lassa with the Younghusband expedition, heard from the Nepalese resident how he had recently brought the uncanny toy as a present from the maharajah of Nepal to the priest king. The dalai lama walked around it uneasily as it blared forth an English band piece and an indelicate Bhutanese song. Then he thought for a long while, and finally said he could not live with this voice without a soul. So it was passed on to somebody else.

RHEUMATISM KEPT HIM IN BED

Suffered Tortures Until "Fruit-a-tives" Cured Him

McMILLAN'S CORNER, ONT.,
SEPT. 30th. 1910

"Your remedy, "Fruit-a-tives" is a perfect panacea for Rheumatism. For years, I suffered distressing pain from Sciatica or Sciatic Rheumatism, being laid up several times a year for days at a time. I went to different doctors who told me there was no use doing anything—it would pass away. They gave me mustard plasters and other remedies that did no good. Plasters took no effect on me—except to blister me and make raw spots. I took many advertised remedies without benefit, but fortunately, about two years ago, I got "Fruit-a-tives" and they cured me.

Since then, I take "Fruit-a-tives" occasionally and keep free of pain. I am satisfied "Fruit-a-tives" cured me of Rheumatism and they will cure anyone who takes them as directed. If this letter would be of value to you, publish it." JOHN B. McDONALD.

John Murray Called From His Work But Found His Boy at Home

To be summoned home from work with the news that his son had been drowned and to learn on arriving there that the victim was not his son, was the experience of Mr. John Murray, Parnell street, yesterday afternoon. When the news of the music and games and dainty refreshed the residents of the south end it was changed to such an extent that the name of the victim was given as Anthony Murray. When this word reached Parnell street, Mr. Murray who is an employe of the C.G.E., was sent for and his joy on seeing his son sitting on the lawn when he arrived can readily be imagined.

As Mr. A. Laidley and his son, Stanley were coming to the village on Saturday evening in a democrat wagon their horse took fright at an automobile, and becoming unmanageable jumped into the ditch, completely overturning the vehicle and throwing the occupants out forcibly. Mr. Laidley was cut and bruised on the head and arm, while Stanley was injured by a bag of potatoes falling on his right leg, making a nasty fracture of the bone at the ankle. Drs. Earle and Thompson attended to the injured men, who were brought to town and later to their home by the driver of the car.

Mr. T. J. Parsons left on Friday evening for Toronto for a few holiday.

Mr. Jos. T. Beatty returned home safe and sound but a little weary on Sunday morning, from Newfoundland, where he had attended the Grand Orange Lodge, as a representative of Victoria County. Mr. Beatty mixed pleasure with business and reports the trip as the leading event of his life—he's a bachelor. He met Mr. Max Saier an old Omemee boy who is making good in that sister colony. Our plan of reception had to be modified when we learned that Joe was to return without a helpmate of the island colony.

Mr. Arthur W. Sanson and his three children of Toronto, Mrs Hill and her three children of Mitchell have been the guests of Mr. and Mrs. T. J. Parsons of George street town.

Mr. John Palmer came up from over the week end.

About 2 o'clock this Monday afternoon fire broke out in the saw and shingle mill of the Messrs. Courtney, on King street. The fire brigade responded as did the bucket brigade, but the only possible assistance that could be rendered was to save the boat-houses and lumber nearby. The mill yard, covered with saw dust and clippings of wood, and the mill itself were as dry as tinder, and burned like matchwood. The building and the machinery are a complete loss, the firm having no insurance. The shingles and lumber consumed were the property of customers. The fire is supposed to have originated from children who were playing about the mill. The loss of this plant to Omemee is a serious blow and the proprietors have the sympathy of all the village.

Mr. and Mrs. George Carey of Toronto and Mr. and Mrs. Walter Carey of Peterboro are visiting at the home of the gentlemen's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Redmond Carey of George street.

Many owners of boat houses were on hand quickly after the fire alarm was sounded to set their craft adrift on the river, but thanks to a favorable wind, the houses and boats were saved.

The village Council met on Monday evening, all the members being present except Councillor Dancey. Reeve Mulligan took the chair and proceeded to business, the first order of which was passing all accrued accounts. An order was passed giving Mr Knight enough tile to carry water along the front of his property from the hill on the public street above. Mr. Sam Fisher was granted half the cost of the tile, to carry the water from the street across his lot. The Council adjourned to meet the first Monday in September.

Mrs Laycock, Miss Grace Parker and Master Freddie Parker of Lindsay, who were the guests of their uncle, Mr. W. H. Kennedy of town, last week, left for the northwest on Monday.

Dr. Simms of Lindsay paid our town an official visit on Monday.

Mr. J. G. Staples of Bethany made a business trip to Omemee on Friday.

Mr. Roy Rogers of Peterboro was in the village last Sunday.

Mr. E. Anderson met with a heavy loss Sunday, when his house and barn and his crop were completely destroyed by fire. Mr. Anderson was absent when the fire started.

It is supposed that the fire began by a spark from the chimney, which lighted on the verandah at the west side of the house. A lot of valuable furniture was destroyed by the fire. Mr. Anderson's hired man, who was sleeping, had to jump from the upstairs window to the burned shed. The biggest part of the implements as well as the livestock were saved. The swamp started on fire from the sparks of the house and barn, but this blaze was prevented from spreading. Mr. Anderson has the building insured.

FIRST DAY IN BIGGER SHOW FAILED TO RATTLE PENFOLD

Petes Cub Hurler Was Steady and Locals Broke Even On the Series.

The last of the four game series between the Petes and Guelph, provided two hours of varied entertainment for the fans yesterday afternoon and all things considered, the engagement was one of the most interesting of the season. The score was 8-4 for Peterborough.

Manager Rowan sent in Penfold, a pitcher who was turned over to the local club by Toronto and the stranger gave a good account of himself. The visitors collected thirteen hits off his delivery, quite a good performance for the afternoon, but they experienced some difficulty in their attempts to convert their bingles into runs by hitting in a row.

In the majority of the frames, Guelph got men on the paths but Penfold remained cool and steady and turned the Cook men back. The first counter would not have been secured had Trout been awake to the situation. His short nap allowed Jack Fryer to make third base and he scored on a lean single to centre.

Brant enlivened the proceedings with a hit to the high fence on which he arrived at the plate. This was in the third. Schaffer's fumble, a steal, a hit by pitcher, Swartz's single and Schaffer's wild throw to the plate made two more, giving the Petes a lead of two. A bombardment in the fifth made four more. Another one came in the sixth.

Most vigorously did the players on both teams object to the decisions of Umpire Jacobson, but that official held the fort. He banished McNeal from the game in the fourth for that gent's very able address on the shortcomings of the human race and particularly amateur umpires.

The score:

PICKED TEAM WON THE GAME

A picked team including "Massie" Huycke, Dick Sheehy, "Bill" O'Brien, Phelan and Giroux visited the Sacred Heart field last night and defeated the southenders 4—0 in a five innings' contest. Two hits were made off Huycke's delivery while Neary held the Stars hitless. Errors caused the defeat.

These teams are slated for another game next Saturday afternoon.

Steamer Runs Ashore.

SAULT STE. MARIE, Mich., Aug. 13.—(Can. Press.)—The steamer Lakeport, upbound with a cargo of cement, ran ashore this morning on Frechett's Point in Mud Lake. Two tugs went to her assistance from the Soo, but returned this afternoon and reported that they were unable to release her. The Lakeport has a few passengers on board, who are in no danger, however.

JUDGE BARHORST DOES HIS DUTY TO RHEUMATIC SUFFERERS

If you suffer from Rheumatism and don't read this advice, then the terrible disease must have robbed you of your power to be fair to yourself. Read it:

"I, John Barhorst, Justice of the Peace of McLean Township, Ft. Loramie Ohio, do certify that after treatment by three doctors without result, I have been cured of a very bad case of Rheumatism by using two bottles of RHEUMA. It is now two years since I used the remedy, and I am still as well as ever. Previous to using RHEUMA I was a cripple, walking with crutches, and I feel it my duty to let other sufferers from Rheumatism know what it will do. The result seems almost miraculous to me. I have advised RHEUMA to at least a dozen persons, and each one speaks as highly of it as I. I will answer anyone suffering from the disease if a two-cent stamp is enclosed."—May 31, 1912.

You can secure a bottle of RHEUMA for only 50 cents at Warner Drug Co., and they say, if not as advertised, money back. It's just as good for Gout, Arthritis, Lumbago and Sciatica.

NORTH SIDE OF TOWNSEND STREET FOR INCINERATOR

Some Ratepayers Object But City Council Feels That the Location is the Best to be Obtained.

That property on the north side of Townend street and lying between Aylmer and George streets, will be the site of the garbage incinerator, which is now assured, as the City Council last night, passed the by-law of agreement with the A. H. Reid Incinerator Company, Toronto.

Speaking of the site, Mayor Bradburn pointed out that there was bound to be complaints no matter where the incinerator was erected. It would not be advantageous to place it in the extreme north or south of the city and it could not be located outside the city in an adjoining township.

His Worship gave notice that a petition of protest with 52 signatures had been placed in his hands. He also asked that the aldermen express their opinions as to the site.

Ald. Buller said he would object to the site if the incinerator was going to be detrimental to the south end. He wanted to be sure.

Ald. Duncan, who, with other members of the Council, has inspected a Reid incinerator in Toronto, replied that there was no odor.

It was stated that at the present time, there were 160 tons of garbage on the property and no complaint had been made.

The contractor desires to have the incinerator in operation by Toronto Fair time, so that he may bring deputations here.

HOW JOHNNY BAYES MET HIS DEATH BY DROWNING

Was Throwing Stones Into River From Street Railway Wharf and Lost His Balance

More particulars are to hand concerning the drowning of John Bayes the four-year old son of Mr. H. Bayes McGill street, who lost his life by falling into the water at the street railway wharf yesterday afternoon. Mr. Manley the grocer on Braidwood Avenue who was the first summoned, told The Review the following story of the affair.

"Shortly after dinner, John Bayes and his sister, Maggie, who is younger than John came in my store and bought some candy. Outside, they were joined by little George Winn, and the three children started toward the end of the car line, to play. I was delivering groceries down south of my store and about half-pats two I was going straight south on Lock street, about two blocks north of Rye's boat house, when I met George Winn running up the road with Maggie Bayes by the hand. The little girl was dripping wet. I asked him what was the matter and he said that Maggie fell in and he got her out, but John was in the water and was too far out for him to catch him. I ran down and saw John floating around on the water about two canoe lengths from the wharf. I found out afterwards that John and Maggie were playing along the side of the wharf toward Rye's and were throwing stones into the water. John lost his balance and fell in. The water is about five feet deep at this point. George Winn started to run toward Hickey's boat-house for help, when he heard a cry, and looking around he saw Maggie Bayes in the water also, though not as far out as John. He ran back and got the little girl out and instead of running to the livery he got excited and ran for our place, which is about three blocks from the wharf.

"I called to Ted. Hotson, who is working on a house nearby and, with the assistance of Mr. Patterson who had charge of the boat-house, we got him out. I ran and telphoned for Dr. Scott, who came immediately, and we all tried to resuscitate the boy, but failed. I think the lad was in the water about five minutes when I got there, and it was about ten minutes later that the doctor was working over him."

The funeral will take place tomorrow afternoon to the Little Lake cemetery.

INSPECTOR DESCENDED ON BAKERIES

Paid Midnight Surprise Visit and Will Report to M.H.O.

Acting under the instructions of the Medical Officer of Health, Sanitary Inspector Spence last night paid a midnight surprise visit to six of the local bakeries to ascertain the actual conditions under which the bread supply of Peterborough is produced.

Mr Spence is not free to disclose the result of his inspections, but states that on the whole, he found operations conducted in a clean and sanitary manner, though some objectionable features will have to be remedied.

These are dealt with in his report to Dr McPherson, M.O.H.

NO COMPLAINT AGAINST MILK

Despite the hot weather and usual summer germs, Peterborough's milk supply is in good condition, according to the report received from the Sanitary Inspector. Other cities are experiencing considerable trouble in regard to their milk supply.

PURCHASE OF PULMOTOR IS SUGGESTED

To the Editor.—I am writing this letter to you in order that I may most quickly bring this important subject to the notice of persons to whom it is of interest, and those whom I wish to interest in it.

There has been invented a new instrument called the Pulmotor, which has accomplished wonderful results in the resuscitation of persons, apparently dead and far beyond help by any other means at our control, due to drowning, electric shock, coal or sewer gas poisoning, strangling, hanging, chloroform, smoke, suicidal poisoning, or any injury preventing the breath from entering the lungs.

This instrument has almost accomplished miracles, having restored persons to consciousness who have been apparently dead for a considerable time.

This matter is of interest to our firemen, to those employed in electric works, in gas mains, in sewer work, to the physicians and all those who by bad fortune may be threatened with drowning, coal gas, or almost any severe accident.

This instrument should be bought by the City Council and placed in the same class as our emergency fire apparatus. It should not be bought or held by any private individual, but kept at a central place, such as the fire hall, subject to immediate call by the firemen, ambulances or any private individual under pressing circumstances.

Every physician, fireman, and all members of first aid clubs, also the head men in each manufacturing establishments, also the men employed on our canals, should be taught to use it.

The cost is two hundred dollars, a small sum to save even one citizen annually.

I notice that last week the city of Brantford invested in one, and surely our city is as progressive as any other.

Yours truly,

E. V. FREDERICK, M.D.

PACING CAMEL WITH SELLS-FLOTO CIRCUS

Few people are aware of the fact that a swift camel can pace faster than the ordinary race horse. The Sells-Floto circus people did not ever know that themselves until one of their men one day last winter hitched "Asia," the baby camel born to the circus two years ago, to an ordinary speeding wagon. It was a comparatively easy task to break the little fellow to harness and as the circus was wintering at Overland Park at Denver, he was jogged around the race-track.

It soon became evident that "Asia" was troubled with speed. In a couple of weeks he could shuffle along beside the fast trotters when they were jogging a pretty fair clip, and one day he was asked to go through the stretch at speed. It is claimed by those who saw the performance that he completed the distance in thirty-six seconds, which is a 2.24 clip. Just exactly what the limit of his speed is, has not been ascertained, because he is only a two-year old colt. He will be seen, however, both in the parade and at each performance of the Sells-Floto circus when he will appear and give an exhibition of his speed on the Hippodrome.

The Sells-Floto circus is billed to visit Peterborough on Wednesday, Aug. 20th. The price of admission still remains 25 cents. And there are seats this year for 10,000.

FOUND FRIEND IN OFFICER WELLER

Peter Provincelle, better known as "Frenchy," who figured in the circus assault case in Lindsay, came to the city last night en route to Ottawa. He was on his way to a hotel when he was recognized by Special Officer Weller, of the C.P.R., who took him to his home and gave him a good square meal and also supplied him with a suit of clothes, as the man was in pretty tough circumstances, both financially and in the clothing line.

He left this morning for Ottawa. Provincelle, had been held as a witness in Lindsay for the past week as result of the McLaughlin assault case, but was discharged as McLaughlin, on his appearance in Court, failed to remember the guilty party.

AUSTRIA AT TORONTO EXHIBITION

The introduction of a steamship service between Canada and Austria by the Canadian Pacific Railway Company has already demonstrated its usefulness by bringing the two countries into closer touch with each other, and the inauguration of Observation cars on the Government railways of that country was the initial step towards cementing the people together. This excellent work has been the means of arousing the enthusiasm and interest of the Austrian Government to a greater degree in an industrial direction, the natural and industrial wealth of the Dominion of Canada appealing to this section of Austria. With a view to the future development of important industries in Canada, the Austrian Government got into touch with the promoters of the forthcoming exhibition at Toronto and through these offices one of the principal exhibits at this annual show will be that of the Austrian Government, which will occupy two hundred yards of space. It will be typical of Austria in every detail, and over fifty firms, employing an aggregate of nearly one hundred thousand people, will be showing their various manufactures, which is further evidence of the desire of the Austrian Government to get into closer relations with this great country of ours.

EXPLORERS WHO CROSSED GREENLAND HAVE HARD TRIP

Captain Koch and His Men Had Several Harrowing Adventures During Their Trip—Dr. Wagener Injured and Capt. Koch Fell Into a Crevasse—Snow Blindness Attacked Men.

COPENHAGEN, Denmark, Aug. 14. (Can. Press.)—The story told by Captain Koch, the Danish explorer, of the crossing of Greenland in company with three hardy companions, shows that the dangers and hardships to be encountered on the great inland ice field have not decreased since Rear-Admiral Robert E. Peary and Dr. Fridtjof Nansen made their journeys over a portion of the same deserted waters.

The Danish leader and three companions, Dr. Wagener, a German; Larsen, a sailor, and Sigurdson, a native of Iceland, were reduced during their journey to eating a pet dog, the only animal left.

After landing from their ship on July 24, 1912, the first mishap encountered by the expedition was the loss of a number of ponies. Shortly afterwards their motorboat disappeared thru the thin ice, and the explorers were obliged to wait until nearly the end of September before the ice was sufficiently thick to carry their sledges and horses. When they were ready to start Dr. Wagener fell, with the result that one of his ribs was broken.

The expedition arrived at about ten miles to the east of Queen Louise Land on Oct. 13, and went into winter quarters there. The shortness of fodder necessitated the slaughter of all the ponies with the exception of five, which were gradually trained to cannibalism by being fed on the flesh of their brothers.

During a sledding trip, Capt. Koch fell forty feet into a crevasse, breaking his right leg. This accident kept him helpless in the hut thruout the winter in a temperature generally 50 degrees below zero.

On April 20, this year, the four men broke camp, and with five sleighs, each drawn by a pony, started on their 750 mile march to the west coast.

During the first forty days violent blizzards raged practically without cessation. The ponies became snowblind and so exhausted that the men were obliged to kill three of them. Later the sun's rays tormented the travelers and burned the skin from their faces which soon had the appearance of raw beef, while the temperature at night was thirty below zero.

Snowshoes were fitted to the feet of the two remaining two ponies and proved of wonderful assistance to them in the loose snow. But for the ponies the expedition would have been in a worse plight.

Unfortunately for the explorers it was found necessary to kill another pony on Jan. 11 this year, because the fodder had given out. The next day the last pony was killed, much to the distress of the members of the expedition, as a few miles further a splendid pasturage was found.

The rations of Capt. Koch and his companions had been, meanwhile, gradually reduced, and on July 13, their provisions were finished.

A howling blizzard came on top of this misfortune, and for thirty-five hours the four men were compelled to take shelter under a projecting rock, where they remained without a morsel of food.

On July [illegible] tried to push on to the coast, [illegible] feasible, but they were so [illegible] with hunger, cold and wet, that they were scarcely able to move. Their only chance for life was to kill the pet dog which had tramped with them for about 800 miles. This was done and its flesh was cooked and eaten. The meal was hardly finished when the explorers sighted a sailing boat in the fiord to the east of Proeven on the west coast of Greenland.

By means of shots and signals, the explorers succeeded in attracting the attention of those on board the vessel, and Pastor Chemnitz, who was on the ship, with the assistance of the crew, soon had the famished and worn out explorers in safety.

EXPLORERS GO FIRST

Peary and Amundsen to Inaugurate Panama Canal.

BUENOS AYRES, Argentina, Aug. 14.—(Can. Press.)—The whaler Fram, commanded by Capt. Dexrud, left here today for Colon with the intention of taking on board there Rear Admiral Robert E. Peary and Capt. Roald Amundsen, the explorers, who will be the first to pass thru the Panama Canal on board ship.

Capt. Amundsen will afterwards proceed in the Fram toward the north pole, and, taking advantage of the arctic currents, will return on board of her to Christiania, Norway, traversing on the way the Spitzbergen Archipelago.

Capt. Dexrud purposes taking lessons, in order to perfect himself in aviation at San Francisco, so that he may be able to make flights in the polar regions. The expedition is expected to take six years for its completion.

THE BRITON REFUSED

U. S. Marshals Failed to Catch Russian Nobleman.

SEATTLE, Wash., Aug. 14. (Can. Press.) A plan to halt the big C.P.R. liner Empress of Russia at sea and take off Prince Stanislaus Sulkowski on a charge of white slavery, carefully worked out by the U. S. marshal's office and the revenue cutter service, failed because the commander of the steamship declined to co-operate.

U. S. District Attorney Cheonover at Los Angeles telegraphed to U. S. District Attorney Riddell at Seattle asking him to effect the arrest of the prince if it were possible.

It was found that the Empress of Russia on her way from Vancouver to Victoria would pass close to the San Juan Islands and that on a previous voyage she had been carried by the tide into American waters. It was planned to have the revenue cutter auxiliary Scout lying in wait off the islands ready to intercept the big liner in American waters and arrest the prince.

When all the other arrangements had been made, Captain Beetham of the Empress was asked to veer across the line. He refused point blank.

Mrs. Freese, mother of Princess Sulkowski and her young daughter passed thru Seattle today on their way to their home in Los Angeles.

Chief Pilot Suspended.

QUEBEC, Aug. 14.—(Can. Press.)—The court of enquiry into the grounding of the steamer Lake Manitoba, on July 28 last on the Island of Orleans, rendered judgment this afternoon, suspending Pilot Adjutor Lachance for the balance of the season. Lachance is the president of the Corporation of Pilots, and was one of the commissioners appointed to enquire into the state of the pilotage of the St. Lawrence last spring.

The court after carefully reviewing the evidence adduced, is of the unanimous opinion that the cause of the accident is entirely due to the negligence of Adjutor Lachance, the pilot, inasmuch as he totally disregarded the rule of the road in porting for a bright light on his port bow and also in not being aware of the exact position of his vessel with regard to the land. The court exonerates the master and officers in charge from all blame.

Gasoline Caught Fire.

SARNIA, Aug. 14.—(Special.)—Shortly after being shunted outside of the gates of the Imperial Oil Works here early this morning a large box car filled with barrels of gasoline, kerosene and other inflammables burst into flames and was utterly destroyed along with much track and other property in the Pere Marquette yards here.

The firemen were called and fought the fierce flames for four hours before they were subdued. Had the fire happened inside the plant it would be hard to estimate the damage that would have resulted. Providentially for the men fighting the fire the gasoline did not explode.

NO DEFINITE STEPS TOWARD SETTLEMENT

Many Strike Breakers Seek Refuge in the Hills.

Canadian Press Despatch.

VANCOUVER, B. C., Aug. 15.—Comparative quietness prevailed in the strike zone yesterday though by the evening a Nanaimo mob chased strike breakers who took refuge in the police station, thereby probably saving life. Parts of Nanaimo are in ruins and many strike breakers are seeking refuge in the hills. No definite steps have as yet been taken towards a settlement.

VICTORIA, B. C., Aug. 14. (Can. Press.)—A basis of settlement of the strike as it affects one colliery, the Vancouver and Nanaimo Coal Company, will be submitted by President Farrington of the U.M.W. of A. to the men tonight. Several days ago the company selected J. H. Hawthornthwaite, a former member of the British Columbia Legislature, as arbitrator in its behalf and agreed to stand by any arrangement he may make. If the men accept this other collieries will probably come into line. No general settlement seems to be in sight tonight.

The militia, comprising detachments from three Victoria regiments, marched into town at 10 o'clock this morning thru streets thronged with solemn, sullen miners. The 500 men from the 5th Regiment, the 88th Fusiliers, and the Royal Canadian Artillery swung along the streets in silence. Each carried rifle and side arms, as well as blankets and their ammunition pouches, and were well prepared for business.

The 500 or more strikers gathered along the streets thru which the troops marched. Two Maxim guns, the carriage holding several hundred rounds of ammunition indicated the serious nature of the militia's mission.

Col. Hall halted his troops on Front street, where the forces commanded the main business section as well as the approach to the wharf. The strikers crowded the sidewalks in the vicinity, and altho some of the miners hurled taunts at the soldiers there was no attempt to openly oppose them.

After preliminary arrangements for feeding the troops had been made by Col. Hall, he sent his men in to breakfast, one company at a time, while other companies were posted across each end of the street approaching the blocks where the troops were massed.

The entire situation is regarded as extremely critical. The strikers are sullen, yet determined, and there have been many hurried conferences and meetings in the U.M.W. of A. Hall since the arrival of the militia. There is an air of mystery about the strikers' headquarters, and indications are that they have not played their trump card yet—whatever that may be. There was no question about them expecting the arrival of the militia, but the strike leaders did not expect the troops to come quite so soon, and in such large numbers.

Ordered Chinese Out.

VANCOUVER, Aug. 14. (Can. Press.)—A telephone message from Ladysmith at noon today stated that a mob of 500 had marched thru the Chinese quarters and ordered all the Celestials to leave town by 6 o'clock. The terrified orientals immediately began packing. Ladysmith shows signs of mob violence and the shattered windows give evidence of the night's outbreak.

The Ladysmith mob, says the message, believe that the steamer is to land militia there and the mob is preparing for this contingency.

Farmer's Boy Drowned.

MINDEN, Aug. 14.—(Special.)—A home boy, Arthur Baker, aged 16, who has lived for over a year with Edmund Harrison, farmer, on Kushog Lake, near Minden, left home Sunday evening, to hunt for cows. Not returning a search was made, resulting in his body being found floating in the lake this morning. He was fully dressed, his hat was lying under a log at the shore and his handkerchief twisted around the limb in the water. He could not swim. Dr. Pogue, coroner, has ordered an inquest to be held in the courtroom tomorrow evening.

Man's Skeleton Found.

MARKDALE, Aub. 14.—While in search of stray cattle, John McFadden came across the skeleton of a man in a swamp, a mile from Markdale. The body had on a suit of blue serge with striped vest, gray overcoat, guernsey and wool shirt, black felt hat, pair good laced boots, not much worn.

HASSAN IS DEAD

Aged Victim of Assault Dies of His Injuries.

TORONTO, Aug. 15.—Brutally beaten while sleeping in a lonely bush on the banks of the Humber River about a week ago, Hugh Hassan, aged 65, 14 Edwin avenue, West Toronto, died in the Western Hospital yesterday morning as the result of his injuries. His murderer is still at large, and it is likely that the provincial detectives will be asked to take up the case.

The county police so far have failed to unearth any clue which would be of material assistance in running to earth Hassan's assailant. There is now no doubt but that Hassan was attacked by an unknown man.

Hassan's own statement, made while quite rational, proved conclusively that he had been assaulted, but by whom he was unable to say. The victim, however, said that he knew his assailant to be a short stout man.

While conscious for an hour or so before his death and during other times since he has been in the hospital Hassan was questioned about the case. His last impressions of anything clear was when he turned into bed at 7.30 on the night in question. Someone else was in the tent with him that night, and it was evidently a man, to judge by his rambling utterances in the hospital.

Hassan may have been a victim of a mistake and been beaten by a man who mistook him for someone else. While conscious Hassan had said:

"He came into my tent about nine o'clock and pulled the clothes off me. I grabbed him about the legs, but I could not reach my ax. I threw up my hands and he struck me with a club." Hassan's wrist was broken, indicating he had thrown up his hands to ward off a blow."

But while in the hospital Hassan seemed to believe that he was in his tent with someone else. He frequently gave them directions and told them where to get the wood for the fire.

The Hassan mystery deepens, but there is one clue in the hands of the county police which may lead to developments of a startling nature.

An inquest was opened at the morgue last night by Coroner Dr. R. J. Wilson and adjourned until the 19th. The son testified that he had visited his father at the hospital and on each occasion his father had told him that a stout man had struck him. The son stated that his father had had several ribs broken in July by being crushed.

MAY BE MURDERED

Waiter on Steamer Kingston Found With Wound on Head.

KINGSTON, Ont., Aug. 14. (Special).—Was there foul play in connection with the death of J. A. Williamson, employed as a waiter in the steamer Kingston? He had been missing since Sunday. This morning his body was found near the wharf at Prescott. The crew of the steamer Kingston brought the news here this afternoon. When pulled out of the water a wound was found in Williamson's forehead, as if he had been struck with some instrument, and as a result of the circumstances surrounding the case an inquest has been ordered.

Sunday afternoon last while the steamer Kingston was at Prescott a coloured man, Albert Royle, was drowned when he undertook to win a bet that he could swim out as far as one of the crew could throw a stick. Royle got a stick and threw it some distance farther. While endeavoring to get it, he threw up his hands and sank in view of several hundred people on the wharf and the steamer Kingston. Williamson was left at Prescott to look after the remains when they were found. They were found on Tuesday.

Monday Williamson suddenly disappeared, but on Tuesday a hat was found on the wharf which was identified as belonging to the missing man. This morning his body was found a short distance out from the wharf. Williamson, so it is stated, was given some money to pay the expenses in connection with Royle's body but did not have a very large sum. The fact that he had a wound on his head led some to believe that he had been assaulted and robbed and then thrown into the river. The deputies went to Seeberville to get two strikers who had forced the line of guards at the Champion Mine of the Copper Range Consolidated Company. Later when deputies went to Seeberville to arrest them the strikers gathered and attacked the peace officers with bottles and revolvers.

INSURING HIGHWAYMEN.

Odd Cases of Policies Issued in the Early History of Lloyd's.

In the history of business and commerce there is no more romantic chapter than that which concerns Lloyd's, that great English organization of brokers and underwriters, which conducts all the maritime insurance of the world, and, as a side line, so to speak, accepts all sorts of freak insurance against almost any conceivable risk—against twins, bad weather, appendicitis or other illness; earthquakes and what-not.

Curiously enough, these queer insurances played an important part in the early history of Lloyd's, which was so named after Edward Lloyd, a man who kept in Tower street, toward the close of the 17th century, a coffee house which was the great meeting place at that time for persons interested in shipping and matters connected with shipping.

Lloyd was a man of great enterprise, and he was really the originator of the great system of maritime and commercial intelligence which had been so developed that to-day Lloyd's agents are to be found on every coast in the world. Day by day they report by electric cable and wireless telegraphy the passing or arrival of vessels in their particular corner of the globe, and it is thus that the world, through the medium of Lloyd's, is able to keep in touch with the movements of every ship.

As an illustration of the gambling in speculative insurance which was carried on at Lloyd's coffee house, it might be mentioned that the lives of highwaymen who had fallen within the clutches of the law, or were likely to do so, were frequently insured. One insurance is still recorded of the possibilities of the execution of two Jacobite Scotch peers after the 1745 rebellion at a premium of one and one-half per cent. The chance of war with France was insured against at a premium of $50 and a dissolution of Parliament at a premium of $75. Travelers might insure their return from foreign countries at various rates.

There is preserved at Lloyd's what is believed to be the oldest marine insurance policy in existence, dated January 20, 1680. It was issued to Richard May "upon goods and merchandise, and also upon the good ship Golden Fleece, 250 tons (Gasper Hicks, master), from Lisbon to Venice, at the rate of four pounds per cent."

HAWKINS AT MONTREAL

Bisley Winner's Reception Was Upset by Uncertainty.

MONTREAL, Aug. 14.—(Can. Press.)—"When I left for England I thought I would be lucky to get in the first hundred. When I found myself in the first hundred I thought I'd try and get a little higher."

That is Private Hawkins' story of how he won the King's prize.

It was a regrettable feature of Private Hawkins' arrival in Montreal tonight on his way home from Bisley that no one knew for a certainty when or to what station he would come. One crowd gathered at the Windsor street station, and another at the Place Viger. It was at the latter place the Bisley hero made his appearance. A number of the members of the local militia bodies and the Montreal Rifle Club had been permitted to pass thru the gates to the platform and these thronged at once around a slim figure in khaki uniform, shook hands with him, patted him on the back, photographed him and jostled one another to get a better view of the straight, trim young fellow with the clean cut, bronzed face.

As the party passed thru the gates a cheer went up from the great crowd gathered in the concourse, continuing until Private Hawkins had passed thru the station to the automobile waiting for him. The welcome, while quite impromptu, was hearty.

At 9 o'clock, after attending a dinner arranged on the spur of the moment, Private Hawkins was permitted to depart to see his wife, who came to Montreal to greet him.

Private Hawkins will remain in Montreal until Saturday morning, when he will leave for Toronto.

BULLETS FLY IN DERRY

Police Have Hard Job Suppressing Street Fights.

LONDONDERRY, Ireland, Aug. 14.—(Can. Press.)—The police again today were constantly employed in suppressing street fighting between Nationalists and Orangemen. Numerous charges were made by the police, who used their clubs freely. An elderly man named Armstrong was shot dead during the fighting, which began at a political celebration on Tuesday. Mr. Armstrong was looking out of an upper window of his home when he was shot. His brother says he saw four constables pursued by a mob load their carbines and fire, but the police strenuously deny having done so. The mob was so dense and the confusion so great that it is difficult to tell what happened. According to many persons, however, the police fired over the heads of the mob, the members of which replied with revolver shots. Several persons were removed to hospitals suffering from wounds. Among them was a constable.

Early today the magistrates held a meeting and decided among other precautionary measures to have all the taverns in the disturbed district closed at 7 o'clock this evening. Late tonight it was decided to requisition troops. Quiet had been restored at midnight.

Two Prisoners Escaped.

CHATHAM, Aug. 14. (Special.)—Two prisoners named Steadman and Labadie, the latter a mere youth, escaped from the county jail yesterday afternoon. Altho the search for them has been kept up ever since they are still at large. It is supposed that they are hiding in the outskirts of the city.

Both prisoners were doing time for theft, Steadman having been sentenced from South Buxton and Labadie from Wallaceburg. Warder Davidson had them working in the yard when they ran away. They were followed some distance but eluded their pursuers.

NEW YORK DETECTIVES ON TRIAL OF MURDERERS

Theory of Murder of William G. Martin of Toronto While in American Metropolis Is That He Had Planned to Meet New Found Acquaintances and They Laid Trap to Get Money.

NEW YORK, Aug. 14.—William Mortimer left for Toronto tonight with the body of William Grieve Martin, the milliner, who was murdered in a rooming house here, presumably, on Monday night. John Martin, the dead man's father, is ill at the home of Mrs. Hannah Barrett, No. 355 West 58th street, utterly prostrated by the death of his son and the mystery and scandal attaching thereto.

With the murder unsolved the police department hopes that one of Martin's friends will yet come forward with a exact story of Martin's movements during his visit to New York in July last. It is believed that he then met the missing woman known as "Mrs. Johnson" and when he encountered her again went with her to the room in which he was found dead.

Painful as it must be to his family, the police theory tonight is when Martin was here in July he was buying fall stock for his millinery store, but he knew he was to return shortly as buyer for a wholesale firm of Toronto. The detectives reason that, meeting blond and attractive "Mrs. Johnson," Martin fell a victim to her charms and told her he would return plentifully supplied with money.

This woman and her companions—the dark, sallow man and the undersized and overdressed youth who posed as his brother, are thought to have rented the room in West Fifty-seventh street close to the neighborhood of Mrs. Hannah Barrett at No. 355 West Fifty-eighth street, where Martin always stayed on his visits. They timed their appearance in the Jones rooming house to coincide with the date of Martin's return. That Martin was determined to see the charmer on his second visit and that by her he was lured to the room where his murder was accomplished is part of the policy theory.

Martin was busy buying bonnets all day Monday. He intended to return to Toronto early Tuesday morning. He broke a theatre engagement with Mrs. Barrett and the two young women buyers who had accompanied him from Canada that night, on the pretext that he had just seen an old friend, Frank Beattie, and wanted to go with Beattie to visit his two sisters.

"Martin and I were here together in July," Mortimer told Chief of Detectives Dougherty today, "but we did not meet any women. Martin was not the sort of a man to make the chance acquaintance of women. I cannot believe that a woman had anything to do with this."

Frank Beattie, who was named by Martin to his friend Mrs. Barrett, in whose home he was stopping, as the old friend he had seen on the afternoon of Monday, and whom he was to meet that evening, appeared at police headquarters today with his brother, Robert Beattie. He said he lived at No. 1444 Longfellow avenue, Bronx; that he had known Martin many years ago in Stouffville, Ont., but that he had not seen Martin in 16 years.

Beattie convinced Dougherty that he had not met Martin on Monday, nor did he know that Martin was in town. The other Beattie brothers, Hugh and William A., also denied having seen Martin in many years.

The police arrested in Hoboken, N. J., a woman who had been janitress of the rooming house at No. 447 West 53rd street, when Mrs. Theodore Jones was landlady there and when the Mrs. Rose, whom one of the missing Johnsons claim to have known, was a lodger.

One of the two men calling themselves Johnson, who, with a decidedly blonde girl, hired the room in which Martin was slain, recalled to Mrs. Jones' mind that while she had the lodging house at No. 447 West 53rd street, he had been a frequent caller on Mrs. Rose. Tho Mrs. Rose is not believed to have had any knowledge of the killing of Martin, Deputy Commissioner Dougherty believes that if he can find her she can tell him something about the two Johnsons and the woman who posed as the wife of one of them.

The janitress is expected to give the information which will lead to the discovery of this Mrs. Rose.

BOYS NEARLY DROWN

Queenston Lads Try for a Record on the River.

NIAGARA FALLS, N. Y., Aug. 14.—(Special.)—Arved Johnson and Pitt Williams, two Queenston boys, had a narrow escape from drowning in the lower river this afternoon while attempting to make a record for farthest upstream from Queenston bridge in a rowboat. By taking advantage of currents they succeeded in reaching a point about two miles above Lewiston on the American side, and when they rounded a point to land, their boat was caught in a strong current and they were carried out to midstream. At this point the water is very rough and the boat come near upsetting several times. They floated around in eddy currents for half an hour before the boat started down stream. Both were frightened by their experience, but they are satisfied that the game was worth the candle, for they succeeded in accomplishing something that no other man so far as is known has done.

Failed to Stop Him.

SARNIA, Aug. 14.—(Special.)—A special plainclothes policeman, who has been assigned to the duty of seeing that the speed limit laws are observed, attempted to stop a motor cyclist last evening. The cyclist was driving at a high rate of speed and refused to obey the order to stop. The policeman fired in the air two shots from his revolver in an effort to make the cyclist stop, but even then was unsuccessful, and he escaped.

RENEGADE POLITICS

Mr. Arthur Hawkes' article in the Nineteenth Century and After, on the Canadian naval issue, has been well advertised by the Liberal press. It is a lengthy article, and like all that Mr. Hawkes writes it is a forceful and sometimes eloquent presentation of his case. It is nevertheless a strange document to come from one who did good work in the fight against reciprocity only two years ago. If anyone could possibly know as much about Mr. Hawkes' private political motives as Mr. Hawkes knows about Mr. Borden's, there might be an explanation of Mr. Hawkes' desertion of the Government. Mr. Hawkes gives no explanation that explains, unless it be in the unconscious revelation of an egotism so extraordinary as to be almost sufficient to explain anything.

In argument Mr. Hawkes relies almost solely upon the assertive method, and the lofty manner in which he ignores the existence of a Canadian body of opinion differing from his own, his contempt for the authorities of Whitehall, and the extent and certainty of his prophetic vision are temporarily overpowering. He speaks of the "course which history has marked out for the Empire" as though he had his finger on a map of the future. And for a sometime opponent of the reciprocity pact he has a remarkable faith in the Empire's being able to take care of itself. It is all very exhilarating, but it leaves several essentials untouched.

Leaving the future, which is hidden from most of us, it is pertinent to ask Mr. Hawkes where and when history endorses his view? The "let alone" policy associated with Victorian liberalism was avowedly anti-imperial. It bore no resemblance to the policies that made the American Union through Hamilton, or saved it through Lincoln. The German Empire and modern Italy were the work of statesmen as also were the federations of Canada, Australia and South Africa. As with these, so with our own great Empire.

It was not made with the mountains, it is not one with the deep,
Men and not gods devised it, men and not gods must keep.

Whether intentionally, or only through faults of rhetoric, Mr. Hawkes implies that he is in favor of Independence, and he pours contempt upon those who think of resisting the tendency. If he did not definitely mention them, it might be supposed that he was oblivious of the hundreds of thousands of immigrants, a large proportion of whom if they are not antagonistic are apathetic towards the sentiment of Empire. Whether or not he proposes supinely to let this element increase in influence, and make no attempt to give them a lead towards assuming their Imperial obligations he leaves in baffling uncertainty. Why Canada should be degraded because her navel defence is directed from "Whitehall" (as it always has been) and not degraded by having her diplomacy directed from thereabouts, and how she can self-respectingly owe allegiance to the throne are not explained. The fact is that in some quarters the idea of Canadian autonomy has run to a cult. It has no bearing on things as they are. Naval strategy is not a matter of lining up vessels along our shores, but in getting after the enemy wherever he is. The first duty of the navy is not defense of the land, but defence of our sea communications.

Mr Hawkes refers to the "Whitehall idea" of Empire, as though it were something antagonistic to our ideas of Empire. It is hardly surprising if Englishmen that know what Empire has cost should be reluctant to entertain the idea of disintegration. But what has Canada asked since 1840 and been denied in the way of extended self-government? And what have we done with our freedom? We have in certain quarters so used or so abused it as to talk of neutrality in time of war, and to quote the Declaration of Independence in our Parliament. Was the latter an ebulition of bad temper merely? It constituted the "friction" that was Sir George Ross's pitiable excuse for killing the Navy Bill.

Mr. Hawkes knows of only one Canadian opinion worthy of mention. "In Canada," he says, "it cannot be—the Empire first and Canada second. Imperial patriotism begins at home, and home is where your children learn to lisp their mother's name." Mr. Hawkes dates his article from Beech Avenue, Toronto, which is no doubt his home, and on which he is no doubt assessed for local improvements. Does Mr. Hawkes never consider Toronto before Beech Avenue, or Ontario before Toronto, or again Canada before Ontario. He knows that our children will not learn to lisp their mother's name in rural Quebec or among the Galicians of Saskatchewan with Beech Avenue accent. Mr. Hawkes says a great deal about what people who are not of his way of thinking do not and cannot understand. But if he does not understand a patriotism that looks to Canada as part of the Empire—to a Canada that is immeasurably the more lovable because of the Imperial embrace, he has something to learn that many Canadians can teach him.

SULZER

"The best to be said about Sulzer is that he might have been worse," is the comment of "Colliers" on the latest Tammany scandals in New York.

"He might have kept peace with Tammany. Tammany could have gone on with its graft, and Sulzer could have avoided the exposures that have followed his break with Murphy. But let no one hope that New York State will ever be delivered from Tammany by anybody with Sulzer's fiber. Between the two, Murphy has much more character than Sulzer—character in the sense of stability and substance. How weak and impossible a creature Sulzer is, the public will never know, for his flabbiness is so artless and unconcealed that newspaper men have a weakness for him, and aside from (occasionally) a subtle verbal wink, so to speak, never speak ill of him. As artlessly as a child, he will ask newspapermen to print something nice about him, to circulate a rumor that Sulzer is spoken of for Vice President. Moreover, he is far from a wicked man. His weaknesses don't flow from love of money or love of the approval of those who have money, which is the prevailing type of undesirability among public men. He is vain, a ranter and poseur, as a political principle exists. Politics according to his perfectly sincere and candid conception is an occupation in which you make a decent living and Sulzer doesn't care for more—by doing favors for people, by placating this group and that group and the next group and never offending any group, unless to curry favor with a mathematically large group to make a grand-stand play as in the case of the present Tammany assault on Tammany. Politics is a better way of making a living than most, because it carries with it pomp and pose, strutting and brag, and these Sulzer likes better than money. New York will never get direct primaries nor any other incident of good government through Sulzer."

EDITORIAL NOTES

The Guelph Herald has been pointing out a remarkable coincidence in editorials. It publishes in parallel columns two articles, one printed in the Guelph Mercury (Liberal) the other in the Stratford Beacon, (Liberal). The remarkable thing about these articles is that they are exactly alike, even to a punctuation mark!

The Guelph Herald, which is a Conservative paper, and is therefore void of offence, suggests that this is an unique instance of telepathy. We would like to know what other Peterborough papers think on this point.

Tea made with boiling milk instead of water and allowed to stand for four minutes before being poured off the leaves is excellent for invalids and most nourishing.

WESTERN CANADA'S BUMPER WHEAT CROP

Thousands of Men Required—This Year's Harvest Promises to be the Largest in the History of Canada

According to present indications the wheat crop of 1913 will be the greatest ever harvested in Manitoba, Saskatchewan or Alberta, thus requiring the farm laborers of the East to assist in harvesting the world's bread basket.

The Governments of the respective Provinces state that many thousand men will be required for this year's harvest. These will have to be principally recruited from Ontario, and the prosperity of Canada depends on securing labor promptly. The Canadian Pacific, on which Company will fall practically the entire task of transporting the men to the West, is already making special arrangements for this year. Excursions from points in Ontario to Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta will be run and special trains operated, making the trip in about thirty-six hours and avoiding any change of cars or transfers. This will be a day shorter than any other route. Dates, rates and conditions will be announced in a few days.

THE GAME OF WAR.

Some of the Things That Are Forbidden by Civilized Nations.

It is not generally realized that the game of war is hedged round by as many restrictions as a boxing contest under Queensberry rules. These regulations, which are under the sanction of all the civilized countries of the world, are designed to insure fair play for the combatants.

When it is intended to bombard a place due notice should be given, so that all women and children may be removed to a place of safety, and every care must be taken to spare churches and hospitals, as well as all charitable or educational buildings.

All chaplains, doctors and nurses are protected in every possible way and are not to be taken prisoners or in any way injured.

Any soldier robbing or mutilating an enemy is liable to be shot without trial, and death is the penalty for wounding or killing a disabled man.

The bodies of the enemy are to be carefully searched before burial, and any articles found on them which might lead to their identification are to be sent to the proper quarters.

Explosive bullets must not be used, and quarter must be given to the enemy whether he asks for it or not. In an attack on the enemy there must be no concealment of the distinctive signs of the regiments, and the use of poisons for polluting drinking water is strictly forbidden.—London Answers.

The Best Detective Story of the Last Ten Years

The diamond necklace, valued at half a million dollars, looms as the beacon out of her perplexity. She yields to the temptation, but, with the inexperience of the amateur, fails to cover her tracks. The evidence gathered by the detectives points in only one direction and the prosecutor feels certain the twelve good men and true will not shirk the stern duty that justice calls on them to perform.

The evidence massed in Mott's mind seemed to bulge with the weight of Elinor's guilt. And yet, the prosecutor felt there was something strangely lacking in the structure; something that made it appear hollow and unreal. No other reasonable explanation of the disappearance of Mrs. Missioner's necklace offered itself, and still it was hard to conceive Miss Holcomb as the thief. Mott knew that the same uncertainty in the minds of the jurors would inevitably result in a verdict of acquittal. The benefit of any reasonable doubt as to her guilt must go to her, and he realized he had yet to eliminate that last slim possibility of a verdict favorable to the prisoner. Were it an ordinary larceny case he would be content to offer the testimony at hand and leave the verdict to the conscience of the jurors. But this trial would fill thousands of newspapers columns. The press of the entire country was on the alert for it. It means much to a struggling assistant to obtain a conviction in so famous a case. To lose, he feared, would reflect on his own competence.

The entrance of Britz brought the prosecutor out of his absorption.

"Just the man I wanted to see," he greeted.

"And I'm equally glad to find you in," the detective returned. His eyes lingered on the documents piled on the desk, and then sought the face of the assistant. "Haven't got the case quite clear in your mind?" he questioned.

"I've got the evidence down pat," Mott responded. "It seems complete; and yet, somehow, I feel that it is not entirely convincing. I want to get something to clinch it. It's a pretty tough proposition at best to get a conviction on circumstantial evidence when the defendant is a woman of good appearance, and I don't want to slip up on this case. We haven't got much time left. The case is on the calendar for next Monday."

"That's what I came to see you about," informed Britz. "I want to get you to adjourn the trial a month."

"Another adjournment!" burst forth Mott in irritation. "We've put the case off twice without gaining anything. What do you expect to get in the next four weeks?"

"Conclusive evidence of Miss Holcomb's innocence," solemnly announced Britz. Mott eyed him incredulously.

"You really don't believe her innocent?" he asked.

"I do," came the swift retort.

"Is that just a guess, or is it based on evidence?"

"It is the inference I draw from facts that I have discovered."

"New facts?" anxiously inquired the prosecutor.

"Yes."

"Then, for Heaven's sake, tell me what they are," demanded Mott.

"I haven't got them in shape to offer yet," Britz returned. "But the case is shaping itself rapidly and within a month—perhaps in a week—I'll have the real thief under arrest."

"I think your judgment is astray in this matter," the prosecutor opined, "but, of course, I don't know what you've got up your sleeve. We've worked together on too many cases for me to treat flippantly anything you say. But we can't keep that girl in jail forever. If she's innocent she ought to be freed. If she's guilty she ought to be relieved of the awful suspense she must be suffering now."

Britz squirmed uneasily in his seat.

"I hate to see her over there in the Tombs," he said, "but it is best to make the guilty man believe we are concentrating our efforts against the girl. There are still so many hurdles to jump before this race is over that I don't want to have him throw any more in our way. As long as he remains in fancied security he'll stay inactive. That's the way I want him to remain."

"Who do you think did the trick?" suddenly questioned Mott.

"Sands, Griswold, or the Indian servant," came from the detective's hesitant lips.

The prosecutor's hands went above his head in a despairing gesture.

"Holy smoke!" he burst forth vehemently. "Is that as far as you've arrived? Three suspects, and you've no idea which one you want! What sort of weak stuff is in your possession that you don't know whom you're after?"

"The circle is narrowing very quickly," Britz observed. "In the next few days I'll know who committed the robbery, how it was committed, and where the jewels were taken. But I have got to have the necessary time."

"All right," agreed the prosecutor. He called a clerk and directed him to inform Miss Holcomb's lawyer that the case had been withdrawn from the calendar for a month.

"Thank you," murmured the detective. "You'll see the wisdom of the move pretty soon."

"I don't want to send an innocent woman to jail," drawled Mott, "but I'll be hanged if I see how you're going to convince anyone that she didn't take those jewels. That tell-tale diamond in her room is more eloquent than all the theories you can propound. However, Britz, go ahead and do your worst," he laughed.

The detective was reaching for his hat when Donnelly and Carson burst into the room. Donnelly's face was flushed with the news of a great discovery. Carson was smiling approvingly on his partner.

"We've got the motive for the crime," the two men shouted in one breath.

Britz assumed an attitude of eager interest. The prosecutor looked significantly at him.

"What have you discovered?" he asked.

"That man Fitch is mixed up in the case just as I always thought," Donnelly informed him. "She stole those diamonds for his sake. It's another case of the girl turning thief to help her lover."

Meaning glances darted between Britz and the assistant district attorney.

"Well," drawled Donnelly, as if to prolong the suspense, "we've run the whole thing down and we have it here in black and white." His fingers [illegible] three or four letters which he flaunted temptingly before the eyes of the prosecutor. "They confirm our suspicion that Fitch is at the bottom of the whole case. Rather, that he's the man 'higher up.'"

Mott gathered the contents of the missive in three or four sweeping glances. An exultant smile lit his face as he handed them to Britz. He perused them closely, as if weighing their import while noting their contents. His impassive face masked the emotions they aroused in him, and he returned them to the assistant district attorney with an air of indifference.

"These letters are conclusive," Mott pronounced.

"Conclusive of what?" demanded Britz.

"That Miss Holcomb was the tool of her fiance and that the two have combined to enlist your sympathy."

"I guess it wasn't a bad bit of detective work to get those letters," Donnelly smiled.

"I guess not," agreed Carson, anxious to justify his partner's little outburst of self-adulation.

Britz turned to them abruptly. Their flippant tones irritated him. His nature revolted at the ill-bred rejoicing over the prospective degradation of a woman.

"How did you get the letters?" he asked abruptly.

Donnelly, ready to burst with the important evidence he had gathered, needed no urging to impart the desired information.

"I had Dr. Fitch shadowed from the day he appeared at Headquarters to inquire about Miss Holcomb," he said. "That's how I got on that he was negotiating with a real estate agent. Luckily, the agent was a friend of mine, and he informed me that Fitch had purchased and paid for a site on which to build a modern sanitorium. Yes, sir, he put up $30,000 for the ground; and the buildings and furnishings, I learned, are to cost nearly a quarter of a million. It wasn't easy to get the agent to turn over Fitch's letters, but I told him he'd have to produce them before the grand jury under a subpoena, so he handed them over."

"Have you tried to learn where he got the money?" Britz demanded.

Donnelly smiled a blighting smile.

"It's plain enough where he got the money," he replied. "The individual stones of the necklace would bring all the money he needed for the deal."

"But have you tried to make sure that he sold the diamonds?" Britz persisted.

"I'll get all that without much trouble," was the confident reply.

"Well, go ahead anw get it," Britz ordered.

When the two detectives left the room Mott found it impossible to restrain his gratification.

"I guess you'll admit you're on the wrong lay?" he jeered. "You've bewildered yourself with your own zeal. This is the sort of stuff I want," he declared, fingering the letters. "You've been led astray. Now get on the right trail and accomplish something."

An attendant entered with a card. The prosecutor glanced at it and passed it over to the detective.

"He's an old friend," Mott remarked. "We were in college together."

A dark flush suffused Britz's countenance and deepened his yellow ivory complexion to a dull grey. He fixed a look of anxious interrogation on Mott, as if doubtful of the wisdom of admitting the visitor into this back room of the temple of justice.

"I know he's one of your suspects," the prosecutor laughed, at the same time pressing a button which sounded a buzzer in the reception room. "Yes, he's one of the figures in this comedy of errors you're playing, but I'll not inform him that, in your eyes, he's one of the possible thieves. You may go ahead suspecting whom you will without interference on my part."

The swinging door opened, and Griswold sauntered into the room. The cordial smile he bestowed on Mott faded to superciliousness when he beheld Britz. He glanced at the detective as if resentful of his presence.

"I presume you can guess why I called," he said familiarly to the prosecutor.

"It requires no mind-reader to fathom the object of your visit," Mott laughed back.

"Mrs. Missioner is on the verge of nervous prostration," Griswold informed. "She asked me to inquire about the progress of the case. Do you know, she can't get herself to believe Elinor guilty. Sands is inclined to agree with her to the extent of offering to go on Miss Holcomb's bond."

"Why doesn't he do so?" inquired the prosecutor.

"Because Mrs. Missioner objects," Griswold replied. "She believes that the swiftest way to clear Elinor is to permit her to remain in the Tombs. I confess I cannot see the force of her argument, but she is evidently acting under what she believes to be competent advice."

Britz's eyes travelled up and down Griswold's form, taking in the jaunty cut of his clothing, his drooping reddish blond moustache, his pale, watery eyes and narrow forehead, in which three long veins pulsed under the transparent skin. Griswold's bland smile carried no suggestion of his inner nature. Its geniality was plainly forced and lost what ingratiating qualities it was meant to convey. The furtive glances he darted at the detective did not go unobserved by Britz. It was as if Griswold was trying to take the measure of the police lieutenant, and Britz, conscious of the mental effort of the other man, drew within himself, presenting an impenetrable exterior to his silent questioner.

"What's doing in this case, anyhow?" suddenly flashed Griswold.

"Looks kind of bad for Miss Holcomb," returned Mott.

"I'm sorry," commented Griswold. "I hate to believe her guilty of such base ingratitude. But sentiment must clear the way for facts, and if the evidence points to her, I don't see how I can get away from the unpleasant conclusion that she stole the gems. But really, I do wish this nasty mess were over and done with. I hope there'll be no further delay in bringing the case to trial."

Britz cushioned his head against the back of the chair in the attitude of an indifferent listener to the conversation between the other men. If he had any views on the subject under discussion, he gave no audible indication of them.

"The case has been adjourned for a month," Mott said.

A flash of disappointment darkened Griswold's features.

"This interminable delay is exceedingly annoying to Mrs. Missioner," he commented. "The uncertainty as to the outcome of the case is upsetting all her plans. She is anxious to have the whole thing over, and I agree with her that the case ought to be wound up at once."

"Why are you in a hurry to bring the case to trial?" suddenly flashed Britz. The blunt query aroused Griswold to a recognition of the peculiar position into which he had thrust himself.

"Of course, I have no right to inject my wishes into a criminal prosecution," he hastened to explain. "But I am deeply concerned for Mrs. Missioner, and I only echo her expressed desire when I request a speedy termination of the intolerable situation in which she finds herself."

"The intricacies of the case necessitate further delay," Mott remarked.

"Intricacies!" repeated Griswold. "Why, the case is simplicity itself! All the circumstances point in one direction, and circumstances never lie."

"No, but the inferences drawn from them are frequently incorrect," Britz amended.

"You don't mean to hint that you believe Miss Holcomb innocent?" flashed Griswold.

"I'm not hinting at anything," the detective flared back. "I only mean that if she's guilty we want more time to fasten the guilt on her."

The detective's tone carried a menace that Griswold understood. To urge haste in bringing Elinor to trial the society man realized, would result in an unpleasant verbal encounter with Britz. And, above all other things, Griswold detested unpleasant outbursts of temper.

"By the way, have you discovered any new evidence?" he asked in a tone of unconcern.

Mott's hand went unconsciously to the letters. One by one he handed them to Griswold for perusal.

"It looks as if we were now getting to the bottom of the case," the society man commented. He turned, with a frank expression of gratification, to Britz. "I see now why further delay is necessary," he said. "Dr. Fitch appears to furnish the motive for the theft. I never have thought Miss Holcomb capable of it without outside prompting."

An affirmative nod from the detective signified his aquiescence in the other's words.

"May I inform Mrs. Missioner of the contents of the letters?" he asked.

"You may," agreed Mott.

"I guess Sands won't be so anxious to go on Miss Holcomb's bond after he learns the latest developments in the case," Griswold remarked. "Prudence will temper his sympathy."

"This man, Sands," suddenly queried Mott, "seems to be an accepted suitor of Mrs. Missioner, doesn't he?"

A wave of red mounted to Griswold's forehead. An angry twitch of the corners of his mouth revealed that the prosecutor had touched a tender spot.

"He seems to divide his time between pursuing Mrs. Missioner and dropping his inherited millions in Wall Street," Griswold replied. "I understand he's been hard hit in the Street, and that his fortune is dwindling at a rapid rate."

Inherited Sin.

A little boy of four years of age, on noticing for the first time a lock of gray hair on his father's head, asked:

"Papa, why are some of your hairs gray?"

Thinking to drive home a moral lesson, the father answered:

"Papa has a new gray hair every time his little boy is naughty."

The child seemed lost in thought, but, after a pause, said, gravely:

"Then grandpa must have had awful naughty boys."—Philadelphia Press.

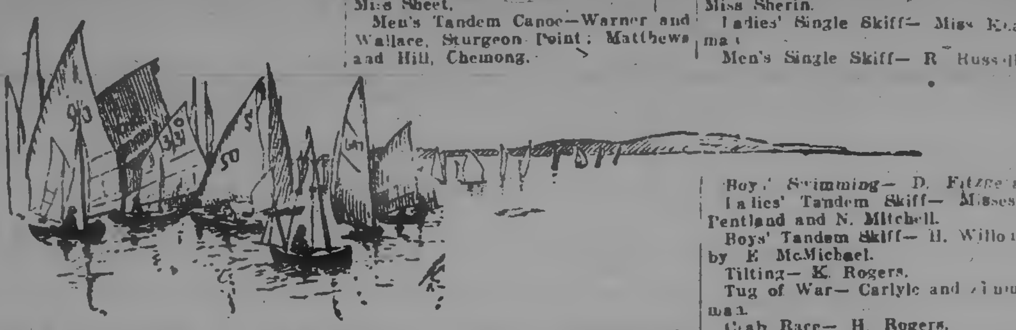
PRIZE WINNERS AT CHEMONG AND CROWE'S LDG. REGATTAS

Pleasant Weather and Strong Competition in the Numerous Events.

A very large crowd attended the Chemong annual regatta yesterday afternoon. During the morning quite a number of people came in from Stoney Lake and Sturgeon Point. A number of the events were keenly contested and the entries were fairly large.

The regatta committee was composed of J. E. Patte, chairman; P. F. Hill and H. S. Matthews, secretary-treasurer.

Considerable anxiety was caused in the afternoon to the sail crews who commenced to feel that they would not have wind enough to start in the sailing races. However, the wind came around and a good race was pulled off.



Mr. Boyd of Bobcaygeon was the only starter in the motor boat race.

In the evening the presentation of the prizes took place, after which followed the annual dance, which proved to be a better success than ever. The 57th Band supplied the music for the occasion. A large number of Peterboro people attended the dance.

For the second time in one week the war canoe crew of St. Paul's succeeded in carrying off another cup. The Bridgenorth crew defeated them last year, but the winners came back strong this year and as a result, the Northern boys went down to defeat. The winning crew were composed of the following:— C. Brown, stroke; A. Brown; J. Davidson; B. Blanchard, W. Garbutt, H. Wyman, D. Loucks, B. Davidson, F. E. Ellis, H. Fastie, H. Keegan, J. Lillico, and H. B. Cowan, captain.

AT CROWE'S LANDING

The seventh annual regatta of the Upper Stoney Lake Cottagers and Campers' Association was held on Wednesday afternoon at Crowe's Landing opposite Belvedere summer resort. The day was bright and fine, and a large gathering was present.

In the sailing event, Mr. E. O'xley was the only contestant, but in the rowing races there were four competitors, and honors were carried off Mr. Mr. Ross Cameron.

The following is a list of prize winners:

Open Sailing— E. O'xley.

Dinghy Race— Ross Cameron.

Boys' Tandem Canoe— L. Waters, R. Tackenbam.

Ladies' Tandem Canoe — Misses Stock and Cook.

In the evening the prizes were presented at the conclusion of which Miss Pearl Brock, of Toronto rendered very acceptably two solos after which the floor was given up to the young folk, who thoroughly enjoyed themselves till the "wee sma hours." This brought a most enjoyable and successful day's sport to a close.

ANOTHER LANDMARK PASSES IN REMOVAL OF BRIDGE AT FOOT OF LONDON STREET

The removal of the structure of the old power dam that crossed the river at the end of London street and spanned the water a few yards above the new dam of the Hydraulic Power Co., marks the passing of the last landmark of former activities at that point on the river. It had stood for many long years; surviving many vicissitudes, and during many of which it furnished power to large lumber mills and kindred industries. For the last ten years it has gradually fallen into a state of wreck, and its removal does away with an unsightly mass of debris. While gone it will not be forgotten, for a few feet under the surface of the water remains the old stone filled piers and connecting supports that so long made a stand against the flood of the current.

It was the third dam built at this point on the river. In the year 1826 the government decided to have erected at Peterborough a grist and saw mill, which necessitated the construction of a dam to utilize power from the river. This dam was put down a few hundred feet above the site so long in use and joined the shore of the river on the west side about where the stables of the Dickson Co. stood. In time of very low water the foundation timbers of this dam can be seen, for as they are covered by the water they will remain intact for scores of years yet. The dam and mill, when completed were offered for sale by the government and bought by Mr. John Hall and Mr. M. Lee, who ran it (the mill) in partnership for several years.

By the year 1838 the square timber and spars business began to assume considerable proportions. Timber was felled and squared during the winter months, and brought down the river from the lakes above in rafts, guided by huge oars or sweeps, at either end. It was quite a sight to see these rafts make the run of the many dams on the river. By 1852 the sawn timber industry had come into prominence, though the cost of getting lumber to a market was considerable. The second dam was built by Mr. Samuel Dickson, who also erected large saw mills, and these after many years service and repairs and changes, were demolished when the Hydraulic Power Co. took possession of the power privilege, and erected the substantial concrete dam that now serves the company's power houses.

The timber interest reached its highest point during the years 1862-66, the demand for sawn lumber from the States being very large during the war of the rebellion—1860-1864. At one time six large mills were in operation, several running day and night. The output of sawn lumber from this neighborhood during the season of 1866 was over 50,650,600 ft. the estimated value being placed at $600,000. It will cause a pang of regret to builders of these days to learn that a fair average price for the best pine lumber, one inch thick and ten inches wide, was $12.00 per 1,000 ft.

NOT BURGLAR AFTER ALL

The trials of the man whose wife and family are away at the summer camp—who can number them?

Last night, about ten o'clock, a well-known citizen, living on Boswell Ave., returned to his house to find— he had locked himself out! Not a single down stairs window was open, only one upstairs, and the problem was how to reach it.

Enquiries among the neighbors eventually brought a ladder, which, when placed against the side of the house, led other neighbors and passers-by to suspect a burglary. But they were quite satisfied that everything was all right when the locked-out hubby showed his face, and told the suspicious ones that he had played the best joke of the season on himself!

FREE RIDE TO STORE OPENING

CALGARY, ALTA., Aug. 15— The entire street car system of Calgary has been hired by the Hudson's Bay Company for the afternoon of Monday Aug. 18, the day when their mammoth new Calgary store is to be formally opened by the Hon. G. H. Bulyea, lieutenant governor of Alberta.

The sixty five cars of the Street railway system will be owned by the company for four hours on that day and the entire population of Calgary will be invited to ride free between the hours of two and six o'clock in the afternoon.

The officials of the company however fully expect that the store will be inspected on the opening day by 90 per cent of the women of Calgary and that thousands of men also will be present at the ceremonies.

GET IN THE SUNSHINE.

Then Profit by the Shadows In Which You Have Lingered.

If you are in a hurry don't get behind a lame man. "Hitch your chariot to a star." Beware of the sneerer and the scoffer. Seek the man who believes in things that are good and who is trying to make everything else better by deeds and words.

Come into the sunshine for a little while. It is a good world after all. You have had hard luck, ill health and hard blows, but open your ledger and see if the credit doesn't overbalance the debit side.

Be frank with yourself and see how much of the debits can be charged to your own fault—a lack of foresight, trusting the untrustworthy, overreaching selfishness, stupidity, extravagance, failure to learn by experience or refusal to profit by advice.

Take a few precious moments for self examination. Don't mourn because some one who started in life with fewer advantages than you had has done so much better. Think of those you have left behind in the race. Yours must be a hopeless case if you are last in line.

Happiness is from within, not from without. No greater happiness can be found than that which comes from the sweet content of right thinking, right living and a good conscience. Try it. See how warm and inviting its sunshine is.—John A. Sleicher in Leslie's.

PEACH CROP AT GRIMSBY

One of the Best for Some Years the Review is Informed.

Mr. M. B. Tufford, a prominent business man of Grimsby, who is in the city on business, reports that the peach crop in the district of Grimsby is one of the best they have had for some years. With the heavy rain of last week, the fruit crop will be highly satisfactory.

A KITCHEN SHOWER

A very enjoyable evening was spent at the home of Mr. James Bestard Wednesday, when a kitchen shower was given in honor of Miss Lottie Kennedy, a bride to be. About forty young people were present and and a large number of useful kitchen utensils was given by her friends. The evening was spent in music and games and dainty refreshments of ice cream and cake were served by the hostess.

It was also a farewell to Miss Lena Bestard who left to-day at noon for Rochester, N.Y., after a pleasant vacation of two months with her parents. The gathering was brought to a close by the singing of "For They Are Jolly, Good Fellows," and "Auld Lang Syne."

UNION BANK OF CANADA

Quebecers Honored by Directors of the Bank.

At a meeting of the Directors of the Union Bank of Canada held in Toronto on Monday, August 11th, 1913, the Directors manifested their interest in the birthplace and for some forty-six years the Head Office of the Institution in the City of Quebec, by electing two of their confreres from that city, Mr. William Price, Vice-President of the Bank, Honorary President, in succession to the late Honorable John Sharples, and Mr. George H. Thomson, Vice-President to replace Mr. William Price. No better selection could have been made, as these two gentlemen have been identified with the institution for a very long time, and have always manifested great interest in its welfare.

At this meeting the following resolution was passed by the Directors:

The Directors of the Union Bank of Canada desire to place on record the sense of the very great loss bank has sustained in the death of their late esteemed Honorary President, the Hon. John Sharples, M.L.C., whose great interest in the welfare of the institution has been so keenly manifested throughout the whole term of his long connection with the Bank, in the various capacities of Director, Vice-President, President and, since the Head Office of the Bank was transferred from the City of Quebec to the City of Winnipeg, Honorary President.

The Directors desire to respectfully convey to Mrs. Sharples their very sincere and heartfelt sympathy in the loss which she has sustained through the death of a loving and kind husband, and request the Secretary of the Bank to forward a copy of this resolution to her.

NEW C.P.R. STEAMERS

The appearance of the new C.P.R. steamer "St. George" at St. John and Halifax created quite a stir the other day. It is a new acquisition by the railway corporation and is now an important link in the new rapid service the C.P.R. is preparing between the two points mentioned. The new vessel has accommodation for eleven hundred people with triple turbines capable of giving a speed of twenty-four knots an hour, and its appointments are superior to many of the Atlantic steamers plying between Montreal and Liverpool. She is the product of Cammel Laird and Co. and is one of the speediest ever turned out at Birkenhead. The vessel is splendidly equipped for the comfort of passengers with its spacious drawing, dining and smoke rooms, finished in the most up-to-date fashion. The third class accommodation is in general excellence superior to many of the first cabin of the ocean liners, while on the upper deck there are eight royal state rooms, which, when the boat was travelling between England and Ireland, were occupied by many famous men of title. By the inauguration of this service the C.P.R. will be able to reduce the time between Montreal and Halifax by nearly three hours.

MONAGHAN RESIDENTS WITNESS OPENING OF NEW WHARF AT WHITFIELD'S

Congratulatory Speeches are made after which the Ladies' Served a Sumptuous Meal.

The townships of North and South Monaghan had a gala day yesterday when they opened the new wharf at Whitfield's, at the end of the concession dividing the two townships. There were present the Warden of Northumberland and Durham; Col. McNaughton, the County Clerk and Reeve of Cavan, Reeve Waterman of South Monaghan; Reeve Howden of North Monaghan; Warden Garbutt of Peterborough County, Mayor Bradburn, E. A. Peck, M.L.A., M. Elliott, county clerk of Peterborough and J. H. Burnham, M. P.

It seems that this wharf has been long a request from the people of North and South Monaghan and some years ago a requisition was taken around and signed, but when the money was got it was placed on a wharf at the end of the concession just above where [illegible] Park [illegible].

Reeve Howden was a very acceptable chairman. He opened the proceedings by calling upon Mr. Burnham to speak.

Mr. Burnham said that the wharf was due primarily to the demand made by the township council of North Monaghan and voiced by Reeve Howden.

"Whenever the public can be benefitted by public work I am in favor of it," declared Mr. Burnham. "That has always been my policy and always will be. We cannot do too much to facilitate trade and the transportation of both goods and people."

"I am persuaded," continued the speaker "that this pavilion was too much neglected in the past and the money earned by these very people here, and paid as taxes into the public treasury, has gone for public works largely for the benefit of other people. We must get our share and as long as I have anything to say about it, we will.

"The wharf here looked like a difficult undertaking but when the townships and counties agreed to build the approaches, so that all the government had to do was to do the work upon the property, the problem was solved. Luckily, the approaches through the swamps are found to be on rock and this whole project will likely be permanent, and easy to keep in repair."

Mr. Burnham further remarked that it would be necessary to place a pavilion for the benefit of the ladies coming to and from market. This feature was also to be added at Reeve Waterman's request, to the South Monaghan wharf, known as Smithson's wharf. Superintendent McClellan promised to have this work completed at once.

"Reeve Waterman is always alive to the interests of his people and also put in a good word for this wharf," said the speaker. "I do not claim any credit for the work. These things ought to be done, and what we ought to do, we should do without trying to make capital out of it."

Mr. E. A. Peck said that he appreciated the work that had been done and he was glad to see such a large turnout, especially of the ladies. He understood there was to be a picnic and that the baskets were already loaded on the tables. This feature appealed to every one present, but speaking on more serious things, he could say he was entirely in sympathy with work of this description.

Warden Hickson of Northumberland warmly congratulated the people on the success of their efforts. He understood the County of Peterborough as well as the townships had made a grant towards the work. It had been suggested that Northumberland do the same and possibly they would.

Reeve Waterman spoke highly of the work done by Mr. Moncrief, who had charge of the work of building the approaches and the railings. The work had been well done.

Warden Garbutt warmly congratulated the people of the success of their efforts and said he agreed with Mr. Burnham that the government could not do too much of that sort of thing.

Mayor Bradburn said that wharves of this description meant good business for both the city and the country. He was very glad indeed to be present and he thanked Mr. Burnham for the invitation which he had extended to him. He would always be pleased to take part in functions of this kind. The work had been well done and those in charge were to be warmly congratulated.

Reeve Shaw, County Clerk Elliott, Mr. Moncrief, Col. McNaughton and others spoke after which Mr. Burnham informed the ladies that when tea was over the government boat would take them for a sail down the river.

Superintendent McClellan was called for and he made a very neat speech in which he said he was always glad to do the work but the members were the only people who could get the money. He would see to it that the pavilions asked for would be erected without delay. Where pavilions were needed, they would be erected at the members' request, in order to protect the people from the weather. But this did not mean that pavilions would be erected everywhere. The townships of North and South Monaghan had agreed to look after the pavilions and protect it from damage or injury.

He was very pleased to see so many ladies present and he was sure that nothing would give the gathering greater pleasure than to partake of their hospitality. He would see to it that the invitation extended by Mr. Burnham for a sail on the government boat was carried out to their satisfaction.

After a sumptuous repast, the tables being laid in the open air on the bank of the river, the ladies proceeded down the river for the sail. They were loud in their praises of the neatness and cleanness of the Bessie Butler. The little steamer when she first started off, had all that the law would allow to be aboard.

Mr. Sexsmith, M.P., Mr. Kendry, ex-M.P. and Mr. Bradburn, ex-M.P., were unable to be present.

INVESTIGATION TO BE MADE

Superintendent G. W. Bennett Hopes To Clear Rivers.

TORONTO, Aug. 15.—Within a few months the large pulp and paper mills at Iroquois Falls on the Abitibi River will be calling for pulpwood. Mr. George W. Bennett, Superintendent of Colonization, is investigating a scheme to clear the Driftwood and Mount Joy Rivers, connecting the Abitibi waters with the waters surrounding Porcupine and Cochrane for the purpose of providing a new line of navigation to the mills, and also enable settlers to float their logs down these rivers instead of transporting them to the railway.

Through years of disuse these rivers have become clogged with forest debris, driftwood and brule, and Mr. Bennett thinks great benefit would come to the settlers if the waste material was broken up. He left for the north yesterday to investigate the practicability of this and will report to Hon. J. O. Reaume, Minister of Public Works.

Dallas is said to need twenty thousand harvest hands this year.

FORTY THOUSAND MEN REQUIRED

Farm Laborers' Excursions—This Year's Wheat Crop Will Be the Largest in the History of Canada.

The wheat crop of 1913 will be the greatest ever harvested in Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta, thus requiring the farm laborers of the East to recruit and assist in harvesting the World's great bread basket.

The Governments of the respective Provinces state that forty thousand men will be required for this year's harvest. These will have to be principally recruited from Ontario, and the prosperity of Canada depends on securing labor promptly. The Canadian Pacific, on which Company will fall practically the entire task of transporting the men to the West, is already making special arrangements for this year. Excursions from points in Ontario to Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta will be run and special trains operated, making the trip in about thirty-six hours and avoiding any change of cars or transfers. This will be a day shorter than any other route.

The Red Spot on the Water

A Story of the Borderland of Immortality

By F. A. MITCHEL

The day of witches, vampires, fairies and the like is over. We read of the Lorelei of the Rhine and peruse such poems as Keats' "La Belle Dame Sans Merci" (the beautiful woman without mercy) or Heine's water fay, not because we believe either the woman or the fairy to have existed, but because of the sensations aroused by the weird pictures drawn.

Nevertheless there is a class of people among us who are not disposed to break down the barriers between the natural or the supernatural. And have we not societies for psychical research, composed of earnest and many of them extremely intelligent persons, who make it their business to gather information about supernatural appearances?

Personally I am neither convinced nor unconvinced as to the feasibility of such investigations, though I have had an experience calculated to throw me on the affirmative side. That experience I will give just as it occurred or, rather, as it communicated itself through my senses, leaving each reader to make for himself or herself an explanation to fit the case.

During the spring I worked hard in order to get ahead with my office duties that I might enjoy a vacation during the summer. Nevertheless when I left home about the 1st of July I never felt better in my life. I mention this because the state of one's health is an important factor in coming to an explanation of such happenings as the one that came to me. It is a well known fact that persons suffering from bodily ills are more apt to see ghosts than persons in good health.

The scene of my outing was on the coast of New Hampshire. I stayed at a hotel where there were a great many young ladies and but few young men. I thought at first that I would be in clover, but since I knew no one to introduce me I was obliged to see them going about in each other's company ignoring me completely.

I was told afterward that there was scarcely any of them but would have been glad to meet a marriageable man, and I considered myself a fair specimen of a bachelor. Why I should have been so completely ostracized I don't know. I am of opinion that it was the spirit of clique so strong in these girls that it overpowered their natural disposition to mate.

After trying in vain to break through the shell that kept me away from them I undertook to amuse myself in other ways. I was fond of boating and spent a part of my time on the water. I took long walks. I did not bathe, for the water was too cold.

A few miles up the shore from my hotel was a cliff a hundred feet high. A path led around its edge, fenced by a rail over which one could look down. Immediately below was a flat rock surface against which the waves rolled, then deflected, pushed off in another direction, surged in through a cleft, then out again. All day long this process continued, and as I watched it I could not but wonder why. And why was I there looking down upon it? All was query, no answer.

Nevertheless the place was fascinating to me, and I went there often. One evening, when at twilight the great globe of the moon was rising out of the water, I thought I would like to go to the cliff and see it as it would appear under the different light. The young ladies of the hotel were walking in couples and platoons, with their arms around each other's waist, back and forth on the piazza, and as they saw me start off, evidently for a moonlight walk, I thought I could detect wistfulness in the faces of some who saw me depart. If any of them would have liked to be my companion she was obliged to restrain her desire, for she had not been introduced, and even if she had I did not belong to the set of her associates and she would have been shocked at herself to become intimate with any other.

The distance to the cliff was about three miles, and when I had traversed it I approached the rail cautiously, put a hand on it, then stood looking over. The moon was exactly in position to cast its rays into the recess in the rocks below. Slowly a wave, resembling for all the world a leviathan of the sea, would sluggishly lumber in, roll against the rock, seem astonished at having been stopped, swim over to a perpendicular surface on the other side, glance and move on into the cleft.

But what is that red spot on the water beside the rock? Is it an afghan, a shawl or some other wrap that has fallen from the cliff, or has it been washed in from some boat out on the ocean? So intent on it was I that I leaned over as far as I dare to get a better view of it. When a wave passing the place where it floated was in shadow the red spot was not visible; then when the moon struck full upon it it was like blood.

I was suddenly conscious of the presence of some one beside me. Why I know not, for I heard no sound, not a footstep nor even a person breathing. I drew back and turned my head. There, leaning upon the rail in the same position as I, was a young girl.

It occurred to me that she must be one of a party that had come—probably from the hotel where I was stopping—for a moonlight walk. I looked quickly over my shoulder for her companions, but saw no one. There were only the rocks here and there covered with verdure, the trees standing back, the path winding on eastward, the girl beside me, all bathed in the soft light of the moon. I was embarrassed at this being standing so near me at such an hour without the slightest appearance of reserve. I was trying to think of some remark, some question that would not sound brusque, when she broke the silence:

"Isn't it beautiful?"

"Beautiful, but somehow just now there seems something awful about it. What is that red thing floating below? In certain lights it looks like blood."

"It is blood! Come away. It affects you unpleasantly."

She turned and walked back a short distance from the verge of the cliff. What could I do but follow her? She sat down on a rock surface that formed a convenient seat and such position as to make room for me beside her. Wonderingly I asked:

"Are you from the hotel where I am staying?"

"No," she said, but offered no word as to where she came from.

"I cannot imagine," I continued, "any of those young ladies coming here alone and at this hour."

"There is not sufficient to tempt them to break through the conventional forms that bind them. Perhaps it is well that they do not. I stayed at one of the hotels hereabout one season and was bound by the same code as they are bound. I pined for freedom. I came here alone. I have been coming ever since."

"Why?"

"I cannot keep away."

There was silence between us for a few moments while I wondered. Presently I asked:

"And why can you not keep away?"

"Something happened. If I were to tell you what it is it would shock you. It would have shocked me had I known that it was to happen. For a brief space it filled me with horror. Then"—

She paused.

"No," she continued. "I am not here to increase your burden of life. I know that you have been looking forward for months to your outing and now that it has come you are disappointed. You see about you that companionship which would enable you to enjoy every moment of it, but between you and me it is that hedge of conventionality which you find impossible. I know what it is, for I was once fettered by it myself. Now it is nothing to me. I can go where I like, express what I feel. I am disenthralled. And to prove it I will tell you that tonight I come here to meet you."

"To meet me!"

"Yes. You do not know me, but I know you. Often I have seen you leaning over the rail looking down into the chasm. Every thought that passed through your brain vibrated in my being. You are nearer the line that divides the finite from the infinite than one mortal in millions, and when you look over the cliff down upon that scene, the sluggish waves following one another in never ending succession, you feel within you that which is akin to the infinite."

She paused while I looked at her in wonder, then added:

"And why have I come to you tonight—I who have seen you so often here? Why have I made myself known to you? I will tell you, and I am not ashamed to tell you, for I am absolutely pure. It is because I love you."

I have a dim remembrance of her rising and going to the cliff, of my following her and leaning on the rail beside her and looking down into the chasm. Then I was alone. The scene below was beautiful as before, and the red spot was gone.

I stood gazing on the water where it had been, now limpid, like the rest, while an awe crept over me. Then I cast glances about me for my companion and shuddered at the vacancy she had left. Then I was seized with a desire to get away from the place as quickly as possible.

I walked back to the hotel filled with emotions of which it would be impossible to afford the slightest inkling. All I can say is that they were such as I had never experienced before.

At the hotel I found no one to tell me anything about the cliff, but on one of my walks, stopping at a house for a cup of water, an old man told me there had been a special reason for placing the rail at the verge of the abyss. Years ago, when the region first became a summer resort, a farmer saw a girl standing there. He turned away his glance, and when he looked again she had disappeared. Going to the cliff, he looked down and saw what he at first supposed to be a red shawl floating on the water. Upon investigation it was discovered that the girl he had seen had fallen over the cliff, had struck the rock surface below and bounded off into the water. It was her blood that appeared to him like a red garment.

Until writing this I have kept my secret. First, I have shrunk from revealing it; secondly, I have not dared to do so for fear of being considered of unbalanced mind. I have never since visited the cliff, nor would I do so for the world. That which prevents me is having felt, while looking over it when the apparition led me back to it after telling that she loved me, an almost uncontrollable desire to throw myself down into the chasm.

While I do not pretend to assert that my experience may not have been the result of a temporary mental aberration, I cannot refrain from thinking that some mortals may have in them certain leanings toward the infinite to which the great mass of humanity are strangers.

THE "CITY OF HOMER."

Reminders of the Ancient Architectural Glory of Smyrna.

Architecturally Smyrna must have degenerated since the ancient days, for we are told that then the streets were broad and handsome, well paved and running at right angles with each other. There were a number of squares and porticoes and public libraries, a museum, a stadium in which Olympic games were celebrated with great enthusiasm, a grand music hall or Odeon, a Homerion and many temples, of which the most famous was that of the Olympian Jupiter, in which the reigning emperor was practically the god worshiped.

The ancient Smyrniotes were inordinately proud of their city. They called it the "First of Asia," though the Ephesians violently disputed this claim. The inhabitants also called their city the "City of Homer," who they claimed had been born and brought up beside their sacred river Meles.

They put his image upon a coin, which they called a homerion, a name given to one of their temples. Enormous fragments yet remain showing what tremendous buildings once occupied the broad plateau on the summit of the acropolis, and as one rebuilds in imagination these wonderful piles he can easily forgive the Smyrniotes of old for their grandiloquent praise of their city and its beautiful crown.—Christian Herald.

The Only Safe Course.

There is a supreme court justice in New York city who is locally noted for his severity. If he can prevent it no guilty man shall escape, and in his court very few of them do.

Last fall a man was on trial before him for forgery. The prosecution, so it seemed to most of the spectators, failed to make out a very good case. Nevertheless the jury came in with a verdict of guilty.

Later the foreman of the jury was talking about the case with a friend who had heard some of the testimony.

"We weren't certain that we ought to convict either," said the foreman, in explanation, "but after listening to his honor's charge, all of us realized that if we acquitted that fellow we'd be guilty of contempt of court."—Saturday Evening Post.

Dangerous Dust.

Dust is more dangerous than draft. The dust of the house is more dangerous that the dust of the street. It is in dry, windy weather that colds, influenza, bronchitis, tonsilitis and consumption are caught. For every speck of dust is an aeroplane with an army of disease germs as passengers. Sunlight destroys them; they thrive in darkness. The broom and duster of the housewife stir them up from their breeding places in dark recesses, and the open windows of the dusting hour blow them all about the house.—New York World.

Testing.

"Why do you put your finger on that paint? Don't you see the sign 'Fresh Paint?'"

"Yes," replied the man with eccentric ideas. "But I can't keep from testing it and thinking what a convenience it would be if fresh eggs could be tested the same way."—Washington Star.

The Danger of Imitations.

An Ohio druggist writes to "The Practical Druggist," a prominent New York Drug Journal, as follows: "Please furnish formula for Castoria. All the formulas I have worked with are either ineffective or disagreeable to administer."

To this "The Practical Druggist" replies: "We do not supply formulas for proprietary articles. We couldn't if we wanted to. His experience with imitative formulas is not surprising, but just what is to be expected. When Castoria is wanted, why not supply the genuine. If you make a substitute, it is not fair or right to label it Castoria. We can give you all sorts of laxative preparations for Children, but not Castoria, and we think a mother who asks for Castoria would not feel kindly toward you if you gave her your own product under such a name."

Synthetic Leather.

A revolution in leather production within the next decade is the prediction of Prof. H. R. Procter, lately of Leeds University. This is to be brought about through the process of synthetic tanning of Dr. Stiasny, which, if it does not upset all old methods, is regarded as sure to bring important new ones that must greatly change leather making.

LIFE INSURANCE

THE pessimist and the prophet of woe have no rightful place in any consideration of the expediency of insuring life. But certain hard facts should be squarely faced by every man of moderate means who has anyone dependent on him. Hundreds of men are yearly rejected for life insurance who would have been accepted had they not delayed their applications until ill health had come upon them. Why do men in good condition take such a long chance of remaining well? It is an impressive fact that out of 8549 holders of policies in a leading life insurance company who died in the past year, only 64 died of old age. The remainder were carried away by disease or accident. Hence the wisdom of insuring early in life. The best years for saving are from 20 to 40, and no man should let that period pass without taking out an insurance policy. For that part of his career an endowment policy, which is likely to mature while he is still living and can secure the proceeds of it himself, is to be preferred.

There will probably always be poor old men, their ranks will be recruited from the successful men of an earlier date, and fortunate is he who has made certain provision by means of endowment insurance in the Sun Life Assurance Company of Canada.

UMPIRE DALY TO UMPIRE GAMES HERE NEXT WEEK

Petes Lost Hard Game to the Senators, With Jacobson Umpiring.

Peterborough fans will be overflowed with joy to learn that following a protest against the further umpiring by Skipper Jacobson at Riverside Park, President Fitzgerald has arranged for the presence of Jacob [illegible] and Umpire Daly [illegible] games here next week.

Those fans who had intended to leave town in the event of Jacobson returning to officiate here, will now [illegible] and take enjoyment out of the contests.

Reports from Ottawa on yesterday's game state that Jacobson's work was very [illegible] [illegible].

The local twirler delivered a fine [illegible] and worked his [illegible] [illegible] especially Thompson [illegible] enough.

The [illegible] Ottawa says: [illegible] the [illegible] by 5 to [illegible].

With the champions one run behind and two out in the seventh, Bullock [illegible] and dashed to third when [illegible] looked Braun. Rogers walked, and when Thompson dropped the throw to get Dolan at first Bullock tallied. Rogers and Dolan then executed a beautiful double steal, and "Lefty" beat out the throw to the plate. Belting outpitched Renfrew in a great duel, and should have had a win, but the errors of Brault, Hilliard and Tracey were directly responsible for the defeat of the visiting White Caps.

In the first frame Umpire Jacobson caused a storm of protest when he called Bullock safe at second, and Catcher McNeal was fired out of the grounds. Likewise Manager Davey Rowan, who disputed hotly with the umpire. McNeal capped the climax by throwing the ball and hitting Jacobson in the small of the back. A policeman escorted the offensive backstop from the field.

Peterboro' played snappy ball, and [illegible] errors that [illegible] Ottawas did some great base running. In the first Shaughnessy singled, and dashed from first to the plate, when Rogers' bounder went over Brault's head. Lake caught three or four stealing, and would have won the game had Brault not gone to sleep on several occasions. Frank Shaughnessy electrified the big crowd with a beautiful running catch in deep centre. It looked good for a three-bagger, but the Ottawa manager went over behind Rogers and successfully clutched it.

Will Retain Sunday Trading.

In spite of the wishes of the rector of Lambeth (Eng.) and the opposition of many traders' organizations, the Lambeth Borough Council has expressed an opinion favorable to the extension of Sunday trading by the costermongers in Lambeth walk. Recently, at the suggestion of the Lambeth Council, the police ordered trading to cease at 11 on the Sabbath day. It was found, however, that this regulation was abused by some costermongers who departed from the market at 11 precisely and moved along neighboring streets to sell their goods. To obviate this evasion the police suggested that the hours in the market should be extended to 12.30.

The Actor Acted.

Mr. Stephen Phillips, who is famed as a dramatic poet, was at one time on the stage. He applied to Mr. F. R. Benson for his first engagement, and when he had been accepted Mr. Benson gave him a few words of advice on the dramatic art, which were as follows: "The great thing for an actor is to act. It does not matter so much what the words are which the actor speaks as the impression he conveys to the audience by those words." Having given this advice, Mr. Benson gave Mr. Phillips the part of Balthazar in "Romeo and Juliet."

The debut of Mr. Phillips could hardly be termed a success. The part was only short, but it was of some importance, for it is the duty of Balthazar to tell Romeo of Juliet's supposed death and burial. On receiving his cue Mr. Phillips marched on the stage and in accordance with the character he was playing fell at Romeo's feet. But when he came to speak his lines he "dried up." Romeo, in the person of Mr. Benson, was compelled to come to his assistance and deliver the rest of the speech while Balthazar exhibited an agony of grief.

Immediately the curtain fell Mr. Benson sent for Mr. Phillips and sternly demanded how he dared appear on the stage without knowing his part.

With delightful naivete Mr. Phillips replied: "I was only doing what you told me."

"What do you mean?" demanded Mr. Benson.

"Why, you said the great thing on the stage was not so much the words you speak, as to act. Well, I was acting!"

Durbar In Nigeria.

Sir Frederick Lugard, Governor of Nigeria, has sent to the British Colonial Office an extraordinarily vivid description of a most picturesque gathering of emirs and chiefs at Kano on New Year's day. Kano is a famous ancient city, with written records for 800 years, in the heart of Northern Nigeria. It is enclosed by walls 20 to 50 feet high and twelve miles in circumference. Hither the emirs with their horsemen and followers gathered from all parts of the province, and the durbar was held in the great plain outside the city walls. Many horsemen were entirely in chain armor, and cloths of gold and many colors gave a brilliant and varied appearance to the scene as each tribal contingent passed before the British governor.

Most remarkable, perhaps, of all was the presence of bands of almost nude pagans who had come out of their fastnesses.

Nelson's Hand at Teneriffe.

Nelson's left-handedness was an attainment of which he could be legitimately proud, as he was. J. G. Gren tells a story of the admiral's visit to Great Yarmouth to receive his freedom of the borough. "A storm met him on his landing, but the danger failed to prevent his appearance on the quay. When the freeman's oath was tendered to him the town clerk noticed that the hero placed his left hand on the book. Shocked at the legal impropriety, he said, 'Your right hand, my lord.' 'That,' observed Nelson, 'is at Teneriffe'."

ROMANCE OF A WILL.

Woman May Never Get the Money Now In Spite of Proof.

A remarkable case of a missing will being discovered as the result of the depredations of a rat has just been discovered at Chatsworth, Derbyshire. The facts read like a page from a romance.

Some twenty years ago Mr. William Chester, head gardener to the Duke of Devonshire, engaged as housekeeper Miss Prince, a native of the village, and a young lady of charming personality. Mr. Chester, who died seven years ago, had often made the statement that he had provided for his housekeeper, for which he had a high regard.

A search among his papers revealed no document disposing of his estate, valued at about $25,000, and under the belief that he died intestate steps were taken to ascertain his next-of-kin. These were discovered to be a nephew and cousin resident in Australia, and after due legal formalities had been complied with the estate was handed over to the two, "lock, stock, and barrel."

A week or two ago, however, Mr Jennings, the present head gardener, and his clerk discovered a rat in the ceiling of the storeroom next the office. It was decided that the rat should be caught, and this recess was selected as the most desirable spot to place the trap. A short step-ladder and the object was achieved. The clerk, however, slipped in reaching upwards, and in an endeavor to recover his balance clutched the edge of the ceiling. Under the sudden strain the lath and plaster broke, and down came a large cloud of dust and—a document.

When he had carefully dusted the document, the clerk was astounded to find that he held in his hand the properly attested last will and testament of the late Mr. Chester, in which he unconditionally bequeathed the whole of his estate to Miss Prince.

A newspaper interviewer subsequently had a chat with the head gardener, who said he regarded the whole affair as a miracle. "Think," he said; "if it had not been for that rat the will might never have been discovered."

"Do you regard it as a genuine document?" the interviewer asked.

Mr. Jennings was emphatic. "Certainly," he said; "so genuine that if you could show me the estate intact I would buy Miss Prince out for several thousands of pounds, and take the risk of recovering the money with a little interest."

As to what action will be taken, it is impossible to say. The usual legal formalities will be gone through to prove the will, but whether it will be possible to recover all or even part of the estate remains to be seen.

Queer Strikes.

There have been at least a score of strikes, big and little, in England, over the question of whether girls should be permitted to wear "fringes" in mills filled with dangerous machinery. The actual immediate cause of the outbreak of the disastrous Taff Valley railway strike was that a couple of guards were compelled to change brake-vans against their will.

Because one of their number resented being told by a foreman to cut his nails, some 300 working goldsmiths came out on strike not long since. It was explained afterwards that it was customary for the operatives to keep their nails pared closely as otherwise small quantities of the filings of the precious metal in which they wrought might easily work underneath them and be lost.

The strike of the Manchester "nippers," a novelty in labor wars which at one time threatened to dislocate the trade, not only of Manchester, but of Liverpool as well, was brought about through an adult workman interfering in a game of marbles.

Queen Mary's Cure.

Ladies have all admired the pretty little curl which Queen Mary wears in the middle of her forehead, resembling somewhat the coil of hair which country maidens describe as a "kiss curl." It is not a fashion, however, but necessity that causes Queen Mary to wear her hair so. When a tiny, toddling child of tender years she once stumbled and fell, with the result that her brow was permanently, though slightly, marked. Hence she invariably wears a small curl to hide the trifling scar from public gaze.

TOOK MINK SKINS TO HIS ROOM TO SHOW FRIEND ;|| LEWIS WILMA'S STORY

His Pal John Pearce pleads Guilty to Stealing Instruments.

Lewis Wilma appeared before Magistrate Dumble this morning, on the charge of stealing $200 worth of mink skins from Barrie's Limited.

He pleaded not guilty and was remanded for one week. He claims to come from Montreal. Wilma admitted taking the skins to his room to show a friend, but he said he had no intention of keeping them, or stealing them.

Wilma is a trapper and a former employe of Barrie's Limited. He figured in a Police Court case last last April and was given 10 days on the hill as the result of a third appearance in court in three days, on the charge of being drunk.

Wilma's pal, giving his name as John A. Pearce of New York, faced the charge of stealing a set of instruments from Dr. Johnston's office. The instruments are valued at $18.

He pleaded guilty and was remanded for a week for sentence. According to police circles, he has been seen around the city for some time and has done very little work. Both prisoners present a hard appearance.

Crown Attorney Wood conducted the prosecution.

County Police Court

Earl Woodcock and Harold Paquette of North Monaghan appeared before Magistrate Edmison yesterday on the charge of disorderly conduct. The case was enlarged for one week.

The complainant is Edgar Butler of North Monaghan.

The Veedee Great Success

Enthusiastic Audience, Marvelous Results

Demonstrator Remains in Peterborough 'Till To-morrow Nigh to Receive Sufferers at Conservatory of Music Hall

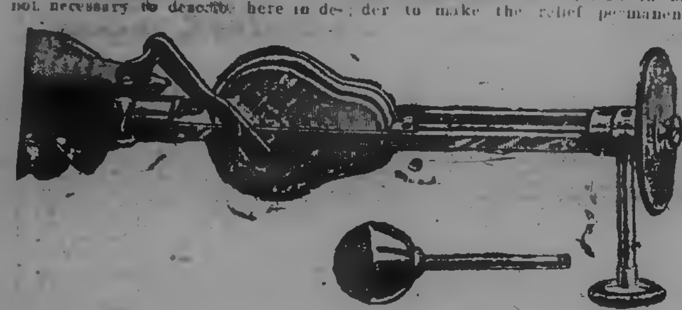
The wonderful Veedee results that were publicly effected at the Conservatory of Music Hall last night, and the many striking and sensational results won in sight of the large audience are the principal topic of the day, and have spread the fame of this marvellous health-restoring machine called the Veedee throughout the city.

The lecturer started the proceedings by a short address, explaining the Veedee and the marvellous effects of the little machine in relieving without drugs or electricity, the pain from poor, tortured sufferers from Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Lumbago, Sciatica Gout and Neuritis, and other painful complaints. He also said that a large number of cases of Stammering, St. Vitus Dance, Weak Eyes, Asthma, Bronchitis, etc., even in long standing chronic cases can in many instances be either completely cured or greatly improved by the use of the "Veedee Blood Circulator," the curative value of which has been proved by tens of thousands of people, from Royalty downwards.

The demonstration was then started, and the platform soon crowded, with people anxious to obtain relief. Sufferers from chronic long-standing cases of rheumatism, of sciatica and lumbago, of neuralgia, paralysis, deafness, etc.—perfect strangers to the Veedee operator—who came from the audience, were taken and treated; and results that looked miraculous to the audience were won. It is not necessary to describe here in detail the many cases there publicly treated, since they were fully give, with names and addresses, during the proceedings. Enough to say that as each case was taken where pain was present that pain instantly vanished at the touch of the marvellous Veedee. Sufferers from long-standing rheumatism who had to be helped or lifted on the platform, and who before treatment could only crawl or hobble by the aid of sticks or crutches—each step an agony found after one treatment with the Veedee their poor joints loose again, their twisted, pain-racked muscles and limbs softened and eased, and to their unbounded joy and astonishment able to briskly walk from one end of the platform to the other entirely without pain, and without the aid of crutches or sticks.

MANY OBTAIN QUICK RELIEF WHO THOUGHT THEMSELVES INCURABLE.

No written testimonials could be so convincing as the actual sight of the marvellous results obtained upon so many sufferers, in the presence of a large audience. The platform was crowded by patients requiring free treatment. Many of them have failed to derive any benefit from drugs, so they embraced the opportunity of testing the efficiency of the Veedee. The Demonstrator repeatedly stated that in many cases of painful complaints, which were relieved on the platform, a short course of home treatment would be required in order to make the relief permanent.



This is a genuine Veedee, the marvelous little machine that cures by self-treatment at home, without medicine, many obstinate and chronic cases that have defied all other treatments and have been turned away from the hospital as incurable.

WHY THE VEEDEE SUCCEEDS.

The Veedee is such a gigantic world wide success, because it actually does what is claimed for it. Because it actually does stop pain. Because it actually does often cure where all else has failed. Because it actually does help many long-standing cases which have been called "incurable," and above all because Veedee owners and users whom it has cured go through the world giving practical expression of their

GRATITUDE AND APPRECIATION

by telling all sufferers they meet about it, and how it cured their troubles, and it is waiting to cure yours. When you buy a Veedee you do more than help yourself, you become by its aid a blessing and health-giver to the rest of the family and to scores of other poor sufferers whom you may meet. It is always there, and always full of health and strength-giving power. Don't be afraid to use it. It lasts for years, practically a life-time, and the more you use it on yours if and others, the more good you will get out of it.

SELF HOME TREATMENT.

The book of directions that goes with each Veedee makes its proper use for all the troubles it is good for so clear and plain, that even a child who can read can so use a Veedee in the home as to get from it the full extent of all its marvellous healing power.

THE VEEDEE'S CHEAPNESS.

Many people are greatly astonished that an invention possessing such unique and superlative curative power as the Veedee—should be sold at so low a price as nine dollars considering that the instrument lasts for years without requiring any attention and is always handy at home to go on giving hundreds more treatments to all and every member of the family from the baby to the grandparents.

WORTH TEN TIMES ITS COST.

Doubtless, very many numbers of Veedees would have been sold even at the price that was originally fixed for it, viz., $25. Indeed many Veedee owners write and continually tell their friends, and if they could not get another they would not sell the one they have for $100. The Veedee proprietor swere wise however in their final decision not to try and get the highest price possible for the wonderful invention, but by selling at only nine dollars it is within the reach of all. That is why well on to 160,000 Veedees are already sold throughout the world and why the million will surely be reached eventually.

WHAT IS VEEDEE?

1. It is purely mechanical (as is a sewing machine or a bicycle), and so keeps in order and is always ready for use.

2. Being NOT ELECTRIC, it needs no "recharging," and so far from giving shocks, the feel of the Veedee in use is one of thrilling delight—one feels it putting new life-force into the part it touches.

3. Little or no skill is required for using it. Simply follow the printed directions supplied with it.

CONSULTATIONS ARE FREE.

The Veedee Demonstrator makes no charge to callers for information, and he never publishes the names of callers and clients, and he would refuse to sell a "Veedee" if he did not feel certain that its use would be beneficial to you.

REMAINING AT THE CONSERVATORY OF MUSIC HALL 'TILL TO-MORROW NIGHT

In order to interview sufferers desirous to try or purchase a Veedee instrument, the Demonstrator will remain at the Academy of Music Hall, corner of Hunter and Rubidge streets until to-morrow evening, and he will be in attendance there to-day and to-morrow from 10.30 a.m. until 12 noon, from 2.30 p.m. until 6, and evening from 8 to 9.

Fire Started in Kitchen and Farmer's Home in Douro Was Burned to the ground.

The home of Mr. T. Mahon, a farmer, residing about three and a half miles from the city, in Douro, was completely gutted by fire yesterday morning about half-past one. The origin of the fire is unknown, except that the fire started in the kitchen and the building, which was a frame one, was quickly consumed by the flames. Everything was burned and the family had to leave with only their night clothes. The loss is estimated about $1,200 without insurance. A subscription is already being raised for the unfortunate family.

"TURKEY TROT" UNDER THE BAN AT JUNIPER ISLAND

It is stated that the committee in charge of the weekly Saturday night dance at Juniper Island, Stoney Lake, threaten to discontinue the dances unless the objectionable dances, such as the "tango," "turkey trot" and the "fish walk" cease at once.

The majority of the dancers are quite satisfied to glide over the floor of the pavilion as called for in what might be termed the standard dances but the trouble appears to be that a few of the more daring attempt the very latest movements.

CRISIS FOR ENGLISH GIRLS.

Neither Money Nor Careers Open For Many of Them.

Every year the question of marriage is becoming more and more difficult for men as well as for women, says Lady Aberconway in The New York Times. Men naturally hesitate to take penniless girls from luxurious homes. Women demand from men a purer life, a more ideal pose. Thus, fearing to marry, men drift into bachelor life, where the affections are cold-stored; women find themselves in increased numbers stranded on narrow incomes, with no training, no occupation, and no means of bettering their lot. Even in the most favorable case where a girl is loved and won by a husband who is not only wealthy, but beloved, the penniless wife enters his house as a dependent and not as a partner.

How different is the case in France, where almost every woman has her dot; where the first thought of parents at the birth of a girl is to save enough for her so as to make her independent of marriage, if need be, and if she desires to marry, give her financial help in founding a new family, in the affairs of which she is an honored partner, and not a mere dependent.

If the daughter's dower deprives sons of an extra share of their paternal inheritance, each man who marries finds his wife possessed of a comfortable sum to help the household, and thus the property of the pair is not markedly less than we find on the average in England. But an immense difference lies in this: that instead of the family fortune being the exclusive property of the husband, the wife is a partner, and has, by the law of "Communite des Biens," an equal share in all the family possessions. This arrangement brings incalculable happiness to women in conferring dignity and independence.

Any father who cannot give his daughter a dowry ought to see that she is taught a profession or business, preferably his own business or profession. Every shopkeeper ought to train his daughter in commercial knowledge; every architect, artist, decorator, doctor, lawyer, and chemist ought to do all in his power to teach his daughters what he knows, so that they may become useful and independent members of society. As they set their sons up in business by advances of capital, fathers should not forget that a similar help might be a precious boon to unmarried daughters. Instead of going as a housekeeper or companion, a girl with a little capital might set up a laundry or a school of a dressmaking establishment, or, indeed, launch out into any paying business in which she had knowledge or [illegible]nt.

When we come to the gentry, who may dislike to see their daughters engage in trade, there is still an enormous field in estate management, for which women might be specially qualified. There ought not to be a landowner in the country who does not instruct his daughter in farm management and agricultural affairs. Every woman ought to be capable of managing her own land if she has any, and even if she has no landed property of her own, a very moderate capital would enable her to rent a small holding and to grow farm produce for the market, or to keep a dairy or a poultry farm. There is also a great opening for fruit and vegetable culture in this country. One of the prettiest and smartest women of fashion in London makes no less than $2,000 a year net profit by the culture of carnations.

IMPEACHED GOVERNOR REFUSES TO GIVE UP THE PRIVY SEAL

He has Changed the Locks on the Doors Leading to the Governor's Private Office and has Stationed an Officer at Each—Secretary of State Transfers His Allegiance to Lieut.-Governor.

ALBANY, N.Y., Aug 15.—(Can. Press.)—Preparations as if for a long siege were made at the executive chamber upon the arrival of Lieutenant-Governor Glynn at the capitol. The locks on every door leading to the chamber and the governor's private office were changed and an attendant was stationed at each entrance.

Secretary of State Mitchell returned from Saratoga this morning and called at the office of Lieutenant-Governor Glynn before the latter's arrival at the capitol. "I merely called to pay my respects," said Secretary Mitchell, "and to assure Mr. Glynn personally that I have decided to recognize him as acting governor of state. As I read the law I can see no other way to act consistently."

Formal demand for the surrender of the executive chamber and offices, the privy seal and all books, papers, records and documents relating to the executive department was made upon Governor William Sulzer this afternoon by Lieutenant-Governor Martin H. Glynn.

Governor Sulzer refused to comply with the demand.

Included in Governor Sulzer's refusal, according to D. Cady Herrick, chief of his counsel, is a proposal that Glynn and Sulzer prepare an agreed statement of the facts in the controversy and submit them to the courts to determine who is governor of New York.

Control of the National Guard, access to the great seal, recognition by New York's secretary of state and by the governor of the neighboring state of New Jersey were prerogatives stripped from Governor Sulzer, impeached, by Lieutenant-Governor Glynn, who claims to be the acting chief executive. Possession of the privy seal, whose imprint validates all documents coming before the governor on affairs wholly within the state and occupancy of the executive chambers remained with Governor Sulzer.

Lieut.-Gov. Glynn checkmated tonight the efforts of Wm. Sulzer to invoke the arbitrament of the courts on the question as to who is the present lawful chief executive of the State of New York.

Replying to a formal proposal by the impeached executive to submit the issue to adjudication on an agreed state of facts, Mr. Glynn tonight declared that it was beyond his power to "barter away any of the functions attaching to the office in which I am placed by your impeachment. Any attempt on my part to do so," he said, "or to stipulate a method by which it might be done, would properly place me in the position you now occupy—that of being impeached for malfeasance in office."

Mr. Glynn declared further that he proposed to perform every function of the office of governor, "except in so far as I am restrained by your illegal action or by physical force."

The announcement of the lieutenant-governor's policy came late tonight and followed negotiations between the respective counsel of the two men in the late afternoon, which it was then supposed had resulted in a virtual agreement to take the case to the court of appeals.

Mr. Glynn's letter was addressed to "The Hon. William Sulzer" and signed "acting governor." It says in part:

"I know of no way by which I could make and no condition that would justify me in making any such stipulation. The constitution was designed to, and I am advised and believe does, specifically and completely cover the juncture now existing, and is supplemented by statutes passed by the legislature and now in force.

"The entire matter is now in the highest court of the state—the court of impeachment—the most august body known to our system. No order that any lower court could make, no judgment that it could render, would have the slightest binding force upon this high court."

"No member of the court of appeals, certainly no member of the lower body, the supreme court, can in any degree, nor under any circumstances, interfere with the jurisdiction or the decision of such court of impeachment, save, and save only, as the members of the court of appeals shall cast their individual votes as such members of the court.

"The decision of the court of impeachment, once made, is binding on every court and every person in the state and must be so respected and treated. Any attempt to interfere with the jurisdiction or the proceedings of such court of impeachment, by any member of any lower court—and every court in the state is a lower one—would be as futile as would any attempt of a justice of the peace to enjoin the chief judge of the court of appeals from exercising his functions as such chief justice.

"The constitution has fixed this as the only way for the settlement of the matters now pending. I know of no other, and I must, therefore, decline to enter into any stipulation whatever with you on the subject."

CORNERING MARKET.

James A. Patten Has Sellers of Corn in Tight Place.

CHICAGO, Aug. 15.—James A. Patten, whose deals in grain and cotton in the last decade have attracted world-wide attention, is once more the central figure in a speculation that is causing the corn pit on the board of trade to boil with excitement.

Mr. Patten started to buy corn three weeks ago. His paper profits at the present time are said to be at least $500,000. According to reports, he is now in possession of contracts calling for the delivery of more than 5,000,000 bushels in September. As there are less than 1,000,000 bushels of contract corn available for delivery in Chicago public elevators, and the farmers are refusing to ship their old corn to market pending the outcome of the new crop, it begins to look as if those who have sold for next month's delivery are in a tight place.

September corn jumped to 75 cents on the board of trade today, the highest price of the year. The market recalled some of Patten's former deals, no instance was the excitement accom-

NO PRAYER DAY.

Governor of Kansas Doubts Its Power to Secure Rain.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Aug. 15.—(Can. Press.) Prayers for rain were asked for in Kansas and Missouri today by citizens and clergymen, who believe that sporadic prayers are not sufficient to end the drought that has beset the southwest for more than three weeks. In Kansas hundreds of persons wrote to Governor Hodges, asking him to issue a proclamation calling for a day of public prayer. The governor declined. "I believe in the efficacy of prayer," said the governor, "but not in the case of flood or droughts."

Bishop J. J. Hennessy, of the Roman Catholic diocese of Wichita, Kansas, issued an order that on next Sunday an hour should be given in each church in the diocese for special devotions and "fervent prayer to our blessed Lord to terminate the present unusually protracted dry spell."

At Springfield, Mo., the Rev. J. F. McDonald, pastor of the St. Paul Methodist Episcopal Church, announced public services would be held tomorrow to offer prayers for rain. The region around Springfield is experiencing one of the most serious droughts ever known.

The letters to Gov. Hodges were from all parts of the state. Some urged the governor to ask that every resident attend church Sunday morning and that everyone make a prayer of his own. Others urged that the proclamation simply ask each citizen to offer a prayer at his home or a church.

The letters told of the suffering of the sick because of the dry weather and extreme heat, and of the suffering of live stock because of water shortage and of the loss of crops and forage and the drying up of pastures and wells.

All the letters to the governor declared the writers and their families and friends and the preachers generally had prayed and are praying for rain but the prayers have not been answered. The writers declared their belief that if the entire citizenship of the state would join in a general prayer God would not fail to answer it at once and send the much needed rain.

Heat continued unabated today thruout Kansas. Tonight the situation is the worst since the dry period began.

In Kansas City today two persons died of heat prostration and a dozen others were overcome.

TROOPS IN CONTROL.

Nanaimo and Ladysmith Miners Reduced to Quiet.

VANCOUVER, Aug. 15.—The Vancouver and Victoria militia are now considered to have control of the situation in all of the strike and riot districts. Nearly 1,000 militia men are encamped in the centres of trouble and any further outbreaks are expected to be sternly dealt with. Those who are in close touch with the situation claim that the long drawn-out coal mining troubles will be settled in the course of a few days.

The miners spent most of the forenoon in session and at 12 o'clock named a committee of seven to talk things over with Manager Stockett of the Western Fuel Company. This fact alone caused a distinctly better feeling and the chance of trouble here now appears to be rapidly lessening.

The agreement suggested by the Vancouver and Nanaimo Coal Company has been endorsed by the men. It is expected, therefore, that the Jingle Pot shaft will resume tomorrow.

In Ladysmith men who are known to have been employed as strike-breakers have been warned to get out within twenty-four hours.

APPEAL TO ENGLAND.

Chinese Anti-Opium League Wants Drug Kept Out.

LONDON, Aug. 15.—(Can. Press.)—Lieut.-Gen. Chang, delegate of the National Opium Prohibition Union of China, who has been in England for three months endeavoring to induce the British government to release China from her obligation to receive any more Indian opium, started today for China to report to Provisional President Yuan Shi Kai the failure of his mission. In a statement issued to the British public today Gen. Chang said:

"Our people are deadly in earnest in their efforts to rid themselves of the opium evil, and they cannot help feeling resentment against a country which is forcing upon us the very article by which we were degraded and disgraced. It is intolerable when we reflect we are sacrificing millions of revenue and hundreds of lives in struggling against enormous difficulties that a foreign country should force us to receive for two or three years longer the poison we so earnestly are striving to stamp out."

The lieutenant-general concluded by appealing to the British friends of China "to do their utmost to induce the British government to join with us in removing the root of wrong and in promoting righteousness in the world."

Negro's Death an Accident.

KINGSTON, Aug. 15.—(Special.)—After making a thoro investigation, Coroner C. F. McPherson decided no light could be shown on the death of A. J. Williamson, the colored waiter on the steamer Kingston, and therefore called the proposed inquest off. Williamson's body was picked up near the wharf on Thursday morning. There were bruises on his head, but the coroner was satisfied that these were caused by coming in contact with boats. Williamson likely fell in the water while walking along the wharf.

No Interruption in Harvesting.

ARCOLA, Sask., Aug. 15.—(Can. Press.)—Arcola and the surrounding district entirely escaped the severity of last night's storm. The thunderstorm with rain, some wind and a little hail, in some places, did little damage to crops. Harvesting is well started. Barley cutting is practically finished and wheat cutting has begun.

The amusement committee are spending considerable money in getting good clean amusement for the people and the vaudeville and trapeez work will be of the highest order.

DIXON MUST STAND TRIAL ON CHARGE OF PERJURY

PORT HOPE, Aug. 16.—Franklin Dixon, who was arrested on charge of perjury in obtaining a marriage license swearing his would-be bride Katharina Clara Saddler, of Peterboro, was twenty years of age, when she will only be sixteen next month, received his preliminary hearing here last evening before Justices of the Peace Saunders and Long, acting in the absence of the police magistrate and was committed to jail to stand his trial.

Mr. A. J. Armstrong of Cobourg appeared for the Crown, and Col. H. A. Ward, ex-M.P., acted for the defendant. Dixon claimed to have been born at Bewdley, and says he has lived at Millbrook, North Bay and Peterboro. He induced the girl to come to Port Hope from Peterboro while her father was absent at Niagara Falls, and preparations were in progress for the marriage, the minister reading the license when in walked Chief of Police Gummerson and interrupted the ceremony.

The Port Hope Times says:

Dixon told The Times that he could neither read nor write, that he had learned the house-moving business from Mr. Hoffman at Millbrook. Dixon said he was born at Bewdley, and had lived for a time at North Bay. He met the girl in the case while boarding at her father's place at Peterborough.

Dixon explained the abduction charge by stating that the girl and her sister Mina, came to him telling him to take care of them. They finally arranged to go to a farmer's near Drummondville, but nothing improper had taken place.

REPORT OF SIR IAN HAMILTON ON THE MILITIA

Deals Very Fully With Conditions in Different Units

SOME CRITICISM

OTTAWA, August 16.—The report of General Sir Ian Hamilton on the Canadian Militia, in the light of his recent inspections has been received by Col. the Hon. Sam Hughes, Minister of Militia. The Minister will not make it public just yet, or until he has had an opportunity to more fully peruse it.

The Inspector General deals very fully with the conditions obtaining in the different units of the militia, artillery, cavalry, infantry and subsidiary services, and his conclusions are understood to be distinctly favorable to the force.

The material is found to be good, and also the esprit de corps, but the need of systematic training is particularly emphasized. With that end in view, additional facilities for the turning out of properly qualified officers in a larger number than is now possible, are strongly favored as an essential condition precedent to efficiency.

The permanent corps as an institutional body and its functions, and also the militia on the peace and war basis are dealt with at considerable length. While differing in some respects the conclusions in the main are similar to those arrived at by General Sir John French on the occasion of his inspection two years ago.

The artillery arm of the service is said to be particularly complimented upon the evidence of efficiency which it displays.

The General does not spare criticism in some regards, but considering the scattered character of the Militia and the obstacles encountered in respect to its systematic training, his conclusions, generally speaking, are of a distinctly complimentary character.

Several recommendations calculated to ensure greater efficiency in training are made. The report will probably be made public before Col. Hughes sails for England at the end of next week.

OFFICIAL REPORT SAYS FIELD CROPS GIVE FINE PROMISE

WHEAT ON FREE LIST.

Ten Per Cent. Duty is Stricken Off by U. S. Senators.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 15.—(Can. Press.)—The Democratic amendment putting wheat on the free list and striking out the ten per cent. tariff rate, fixed by the house of Democrats, was adopted by the senate yesterday by a vote of 37 to 32. A subsequent motion by Senator Gronna to fix a duty of six cents per bushel on wheat and one-eighth of a cent per pound on wheat flour, was defeated 37 to 31. Senators Ransdell and Thornton of Louisiana voted with the Republicans.

The Democrats also defeated an amendment proposed by Senator Gronna to restore the three cent duty on eggs, contained in the house bill. The vote of 35 to 28 in favor of the senate committee's proposal for free eggs, the first definite effort of the Democrats to secure an agreement for an early vote on the tariff bill, failed in the senate today, when Republicans served notice that consideration of the measure would be continued indefinitely.

Leading senators of both parties, as a result of the day's developments, last night predicted a session of congress that would run until late October or November.

BATHER DROWNED.

Camper at French River Got Out Beyond His Depth.

NORTH BAY, Aug. 15.—(Special.)—Nicholas McCullough, aged 21 years of Pittsburg, Pa., was drowned in the French River this afternoon while bathing with his brother, Thomas McCullough, Byron Connell and Reamer Sewell. The unfortunate young man came for a month's outing on the French River, arriving at North Bay on August 4th. His mother is a widow and resides in Pittsburg.

The young men were having a splendid vacation tenting on the river bank, and on Thursday afternoon Nicholas stayed at the camp while his companions left for a paddle around the island. When they returned he was missing, and as he could not swim they suspected that he had gone in bathing alone and got beyond his depth. The body was recovered at 9 o'clock at night and brought to North Bay, from where it was taken to his mother's home in Pittsburg for interment.

Judge Upholds Workman.

KINGSTON, Aug. 15.—(Special.)—The court case in which Fallon Bros., contractors of Cornwall, were the defendants, has been settled. George Austin sued them for non-payment of wages, rising out of his complaint about the contractors working men ten hours instead of eight, as the contracts calls for. Austin got the amount he claimed.

The Trades and Labor Council is still pressing the minister of labor to send a representative here to investigate the conditions under which the work of the causeway for Cataraqui bridge, for which Fallon Bros. have the contract, is being carried on.

Fall Wheat Production is Estimated to Be Thirteen Per Cent. Greater Than Last Year, While Spring Wheat is Well Above the Average for the Past Five Years—Barley Yield a Bumper One.

OTTAWA, Aug. 15.—(Can. Press.)—In a bulletin issued today the census and statistics office reports that according to the returns made by crop reporting correspondents at the end of last month, the weather of July was on the whole favorable to the growth of grain crops. The conditions in the Northwest provinces were reported as generally excellent. Representing a standard or full crop by 100, the average condition thruout Canada of fall wheat is expressed as 77.75, of spring wheat as 87.82, of oats as 87.45, of barley as 87.58, of rye as 85.00, of mixed grains as 89.33 and of flaxseed as 88.85.

The percentages of the standard condition of spring wheat, barley and rye represent the promise of yields per acre for spring wheat of six, for barley of five, for rye of two and for flaxseed of one per cent. above the average yields per acre of the last five years.

The condition of the oats crop promises a yield equal to the average.

All the field crops of Canada on July 31, excepting only fall wheat (77.75), hay and clover (74.57) and alfalfa (76.85), are reported as having a condition above 80, the range being from 82 for beans and corn for husking to 89 for potatoes and mixed grains.

In the three Northwest provinces spring wheat is reported as 84.60 in Manitoba, 89 in Saskatchewan and 88 in Alberta, the other grain crops being correspondingly high, barley especially in Saskatchewan and Alberta being 90 per cent. or over. Root crops are also particularly good.

The condition of buckwheat in the maritime provinces and in Quebec is 90 and over, but in Ontario it is down to 78.48. Flaxseed is above 80 in the Northwest provinces and in Saskatchewan, where the great bulk of this crop is grown, the percentage condition is 84.17. Sugar beet, grown for beet root sugar in Ontario and Alberta is 80.44 for the former and 92.31 for the latter province.

The preliminary estimate of the yield per acre of fall wheat is 22.88 bushels, which for the harvested area in Ontario, Manitoba, Saskatchewan, Alberta and British Columbia of 825,800 acres, indicates a total yield of 18,482,000 bushels, as compared with 16,396,000 bushels from 781,000 acres in 1912. This yield is 13 per cent. above that of last year.

The average yield per acre of hay and clover is estimated at 1.23 ton, indicating a total yield of 9,390,000 tons from 7,621,000 acres, as compared with 11,189,000 tons from 7,633,000 acres, or 1.47 tons per acre in 1912. Alfalfa, with an average yield per acre of 1.38 tons, shows an estimated total production of 148,000 tons from 103,250 acres, as compared with 310,180 tons from 111,800 acres, or 2.78 tons per acre in 1912.

NEW YORK POLICE NARROW DOWN SEARCH FOR MURDERER

JAIL BREAKER CAUGHT.

Cobalt Constable Captures Man Like in a "Movey."

COBALT, Aug. 15.—(Special.)—Frank Dunn, who broke jail at North Bay eighteen months ago, was smartly captured by Constable Robert Sharp here at 7 o'clock this evening. Dunn was sentenced here to six months in North Bay jail in Jan., 1912, and as at that time he was out on ticket of leave with five months of a previous sentence unexpired, he was sent down for eleven months altogether. Two months later he broke jail and has never been heard of since till Constable Sharp spied him at Sasaginaga Lake tonight.

Sharp plunged into the bushes when three hundred yards distant and stalked Dunn till he reached a clearing thirty yards away from the unsuspecting man. Then Dunn caught sight of the constable and bolted. Sharp drew his gun and ran after him, calling on him to stop. Dunn turned back and held up his hands, and Sharp still holding the revolver in one hand snapped the bracelets on with the other and led him off to the cells.

Labor Man in Force.

HAMILTON, Aug. 15.—(Special.)—Labor took charge of the organized festivities on the fifth day of Hamilton's Centennial Week.

Fifteen hundred union men marched in procession at 1 o'clock from Victoria Park to Britannia Park, and there listened to speeches and engaged in games until dusk. Each union was distinctively garbed. The blacksmiths wore leather aprons, which had plainly never felt the heat of a forge. The white suits of the painters were spotless, and no trace of engine grease marred the striped uniforms of the locomotive engineers.

New Dundee Wants Hydro.

GALT, Aug. 15.—(Special.)—New Dundee is carrying on an active campaign with a view to securing Niagara power. The proposition is to connect with the Baden line at Petersburg and to carry power south to New Dundee six miles. Mr. Purcell, one of the engineers of the hydro commission, was in New Dundee and explained matters to the citizens. Farmers along the line are interested in the scheme of having power applied to farm machinery. A meeting last evening was addressed by a representative of the commission. Now it is only a question as to the amount of power to be subscribed. The villages of Phillipsburg and Wellesley are also seeking information with a view to carrying the power north.

Labor Demands.

REGINA, Aug. 15.—(Special.)—The provincial government free labor bureau established last week to supply harvest help to farmers, has sent out over six hundred men to different parts of the province. It is receiving more applications than can be met.

Deputy Commissioner Dougherty Says He Has Learned the Name of the Man Who Lured Wm. G. Martin Into Place Where He Was Killed—Cocaine Habit May Help Trace Perpetrators.

NEW YORK, May 15. Deputy Police Commissioner Dougherty tonight announced he had definitely learned the name of the man who on Monday night lured William Grieve Martin, the Toronto milliner, into a furnished room at No. 458 West Fifty-seventh street and helped to strangle him to death for the purpose of robbery.

The man who is described as being less than 25 years old, was a companion of the youth who rented the room, giving the name of Johnson, and arranged for living there for his supposed brother and sister-in-law.

"Until we arrest this man, which probably will be very soon, I do not intend to reveal his name," Mr. Dougherty said. "Early this morning we learned much of his past history from a Mrs. Rose, who has known him since last March. Another acquaintance told us of his haunts."

The task of the detectives to find the two men wanted for the actual killing of Martin is made easier because of their manner of living and the few places frequented by their type.

Slips of paper similar to those in which cocaine is wrapped were found in the room where Martin was killed. Portions of a conversation overheard by Mrs. Theodore Jones, the housekeeper of the place, indicated that the two men were becoming crazed because they did not have money with which to buy more of the drug. These facts have led the detectives to believe Martin was robbed so that the men could get the drug they craved.

Mrs. Jones told Dougherty that the men and their woman companion seemed to be on the verge of starvation. One of the women living in her house on one occasion offered "Mrs. Johnson" something to eat, but she declined to take the food because she feared the anger of the man with whom she lived.

"That man had a wild stare that frightened me," said George Needham, 14 years, who lives above the room the couple occupied. "When he spoke to me I'd run away. But the woman was much nicer. She'd sit on the front steps in the afternoon while the men were sleeping in the back room."

A "stool pigeon" employed by the police in resorts frequented by cocaine users told Acting Captain Kerr that two men, whose descriptions tally with those of the men wanted for the murder, had made an effort to dispose of two diamond rings last Monday night. Two diamond rings were taken from Martin.

When the men failed to find a buyer they departed, saying they were going to the home of a friend uptown. They are well known to certain patrons of the place, and no one recalls having seen them since Tuesday morning.

POETRY AND PETROL

Colonel Cody has at last paid the penalty of his temerity in daring the upper air. Man was not made with wings, and some logicians might argue that if the Creator had meant him to fly He would have provided him with the necessary feathers.

But if man was not made to fly, he was certainly created with a desire to soar away into the clouds, at least some men are of that disposition.

King David longed for the "wings of a dove" that he might fly to the wilderness and be at rest, but many of us, while we have had the same feeling as David often enough, would think twice and even thrice before stepping into a machine which would take us to the wilderness in a brief space of time.

The "wings of a dove" are different from the wings of an aeroplane, as poetry is different from prose. David was a poet and Cody was a mechanic. Poetry and petrol may make good alliteration, but the nature as well as the smell of petrol are not identical by any means.

Indeed they are opposites. When petrol came into the world poetry went out. It had to go out. The poet, when he is not mounted on his Pegasus, is a pedestrian. He muses not only on the sidewalk; he wanders into the roadway, oblivious of all machines.

Wordsworth only just escaped being run over in the Lake District by a matter of thirty or forty years.

Try and imagine Wordsworth dodging the autos carrying pilgrims to the sacred shrine of the poet. If he haunts the roads around Grasmere and Keswick to-day, and if a spirit has the sense of smell, or a dislike to being startled when contemplating Skiddaw or Derwentwater, then the spirit of the great poet of solitude and meditation cannot be said to be in Elysium.

Only the other day a poet was meandering within a few yards of his own door and was knocked down and mangled—dreams and all!

This poet was only ten years old. They seldom survive that age. Those who do are either fortunate in having been born in a back street, or they get "fairy" and go into the newspaper business.

"WILL WE EVER GROW UP?"

The Grain Growers' Guide is getting out of patience with some of the baby cities of the West, and is admonishing them very severely on their Peter Pannishness, and fretfully asks its readers: "shall we ever grow up?" It then goes on to ask further:

"When will the daily newspapers of Western Canada realize that the places in which they are published are grown-up cities and no longer infant 'prodigies?' Every time a stranger with a title or an official comes to Winnipeg the daily papers record his amazement at the wide streets and magnificent buildings of this wonderful city. And if there does not happen to be anyone of distinction in the city for a day or two, they discover some commercial traveller from New York or Chicago in one of the hotels and induce him to make a statement of his amazement at the city's marvellous progress. In the same way every visitor of note who sees Canada from an observation car is permitted at every place he stops off to express his surprise at seeing a modern metropolis instead of the collection of shacks which in his ignorance he had imagined was called a city in the West. They all tell us that Canada has a great future before it, and that it is destined to be the granary of the Empire. Having seen this sort of thing in the papers every morning for the last fifteen or twenty years, it is almost time that we could take it for granted. It may be quite proper to admire a nice fat baby and to glory in the fact that it has cut another tooth, but the same sort of adulation bestowed upon a grown man is merely humiliating."

There is a tendency, an excusable one perhaps, with Canadians to boost the particular city in which they happen to be located. We got the habit from the States where they greet every stranger, and especially an Englishman with: "Well, doctor, and how does this darned city strike you; got anything like it over in your country?"

A little broader outlook might do us all good not only in the matter of cities but in political matters, too, and in this respect the Grain Growers' Guide is still an infant.

SILVER FOXES AT PRINCE EDWARD ISLAND

With the rapid advance of the silver black fox industry, there seems to be a danger not merely that there will be a glut of blacks foxes but that the introduction of a lot of types of Western foxes will spoil the strain and depreciate the market value of the skins. But this does not apply to the industry as it is carried on in Prince Edward Island, where they have special ranches for the breeding of these valuable animals.

Those who adhere to the Prince Edward Island silver black fox must of necessity succeed. This kind is said to possess a fineness of sheen and superb excellence not attained by any fox. Mr. Jones in "Furr Farming," says:

"The high average price obtained for silver fox skins in 1910 is accounted for by the better market. More than one-half of the skins selling for £100 or more were from Prince Edward Island ranches.

"At the present time, in the fall of 1912, the average price of wild silver fox skins in London is about $200 and, for ranch foxes such as are found with the best ranchers, $1,500.

"Wild silver foxes are not always prime, and they are frequently shot, chewed, mangled and poorly dressed, while ranched foxes are usually killed when their fur is in primest condition. The highest price ever paid at the London sales for a silver fox skin is £580. It is said that was sold by a Paris firm which had bought it at a previous sale for £390, and that it was from a ranched fox from Prince Edward Island."

BROOKLYN TABERNACLE BIBLE STUDY ON CROSSING THE RED SEA.

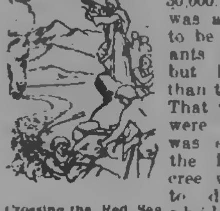
—August 17.—Exodus 14:19-31.—

"Before they call, I will answer."—Isaiah 65:24.

THE Bible story of Israel's miraculous crossing of the Red Sea has long been questioned by agnostics, who also question the large number ascribed to Israel—600,000 men, implying a total of 2,000,000 or more. However, the Bible finally is triumphing. Mistranslations and failures properly to interpret figures of speech were the basis of our misunderstandings.

Prof. Flinders Petrie calls attention to the fact that the Hebrew word alaf is used in the Scriptures sometimes to mean a thousand and at other times to signify group, families, or tents, very much as we use the word regiment to signify a group of a thousand men, yet often far less in number, especially after a battle. Thus understood, the record, "Judah 74,600," would read, Judah, seventy-four families, or tents, with six hundred men in all; "so they set forward, every one after their families, according to the house of their fathers"—Numbers 2:34.

Thus reckoned, the entire host of the Israelites who left Egypt might be estimated at about 30,000. Even this was a goodly host to be the descendants of Jacob in but little more than two centuries. That the Israelites were very prolific was evidenced by the Egyptian decree which sought to destroy their children fearful that eventually they would outnumber the Egyptians.



Crossing the Red Sea

Necessity of the Miracles.

A miracle is not necessarily a violation of a law of Nature. A wonder, an unusual occurrence, indicating an interposition of Divine Power in human affairs, would be a miracle, even though it conformed to natural laws. God rarely works miracles except where there is a necessity.

Three roads led out of Egypt in the direction of Palestine, but as a military wall extended from the Mediterranean to the Red Sea to protect against invading armies, these roads had access into Egypt only through strong iron gates.

One of these roads led through the country of the Philistines, to pass through which so large a body of people would have been prohibited. The second road led through a sandy desert, and would have been entirely unsuitable, furnishing neither provender nor water. The third road was the one which the Israelites took, leading through the wild mountain region of Sinai, where they found pasturage.

Several days elapsed before the Israelites reached the Red Sea. Meantime, Pharaoh perceived that the Israelites had wandered about as though undecided which road to take, and concluded that it would be easy to bring them back. The gates of the wall were ordered closed, and several hundred chariots and footmen sent to pursue.

Meantime, the Israelites had passed between two mountain ranges, up against the northern arm of the Red Sea—the Gulf of Suez. Apparently they had gone into a pen, from which there was no escape. Divine Providence arranged that a heavy pillar of cloud, or fog, hovered over the Egyptian camp, while there was a bright light in the Israelites' camp. Thus the Egyptians were delayed, and the Israelites moved on until they came to the Sea and beheld that they were hemmed in. Then they cried to the Lord and to Moses, discouraged, requesting to be permitted to return to Egyptian bondage.

But the word of the Lord through Moses was to be of good courage, that soon they would see Jehovah God bring deliverance from their enemies. Meantime, the wind began to blow from the north, and gradually the waters receded southward, uncovering a ledge and sand bar, upon which the Israelites crossed to the other side. The befogged Egyptians followed, possibly not realizing that they were on land usually covered by water.

The Egyptians overwhelmed.

As they progressed into the moist sand, the Egyptians experienced fresh difficulties. Chariot wheels became clogged, horses went more slowly, then balked, wheels broke, etc., until the Egyptians concluded that, in the figurative language of that time, God had looked upon them with an evil eye out of the cloudy pillar. Possibly there was some manifestation, such as a lightning flash. Meantime, the direction of the wind changed, and it was now coming from the south. Before the Egyptians could extricate themselves, the water was upon them, and they soon were overwhelmed.

There is nothing in this account to stagger faith. United States Government Reports show that the waters of Lake Erie have varied as much as fifteen feet at Toledo, by reason of change of wind, and without any special hurricane. What has staggered our faith in the past was the statement that the Sea constituted a wall on either side of the Israelites. But the word wall in its broadest sense signifies barricade. Thus we might say that the United States has the Atlantic Ocean as a protective wall on one side and the Pacific Ocean on the other.

Superstition never keeps people from accepting 13 for a dozen.

Jeremiah Mason on War.

On one occasion Mr. Mason came into Mr. Sumner's office and found him engaged in writing an address to be delivered before a peace society. After a little good natured banter on the part of Mr. Mason and an equally good natured defense of his views by Mr. Sumner, the former, rising to take his leave, said: "Well, Sumner, you may be right, but I should just as soon think of joining a society for the suppression of thunder and lightning as a society for the suppression of war."—From Memoir of Jeremiah Mason, by G. S. Hillard.

The Best Detective Story of the Last Ten Years

"Is that so?" came a meaning query from Britz. He exchanged significant glances with Mott.

"Do you happen to know anything of his financial affairs?" asked the prosecutor. The question threw Griswold into a deep study, out of which he came gradually by slow stages of mental effort.

"I know he's been hard hit," he drawled. "And I know also that he's trying to conceal his reduced circumstances from Mrs. Missioner. In fact, I believe he needs money with which to carry his stocks."

Conscious of the shaft he had thrust, and of the vague insinuation his words carried, Griswold stopped to watch the effect. Britz stared vacantly at the ceiling, as if unconscious of the hint conveyed by Griswold. Mott seemed interested.

"You don't think it possible he also is implicated in the theft?" he asked.

"I should regard such a supposition as absurd," Griswold declared. "But," he added hastily, "I've had no experience with criminals."

With a sly look at the detective Griswold arose and left the room. As the door swung behind him Britz asked:

"Mott, what do you know of Griswold?"

The prosecutor's eyes narrowed significantly on the detective.

"Nothing that could be of any service to you in hunting down the Missioner diamond thief."

"Perhaps not," the detective frowned. "But if you'll inform me of his private life it will save me the trouble of hunting it up elsewhere."

"You don't mean you're going to pry into his private affairs?" puffed the prosecutor. "Why, it's outrageous! He's no more connected with the crime than my grandfather. I tell you, you're making a horrible mess of this thing."

An angry wave swept Britz's face, but he controlled the impulse to fire a sharp retort. The momentary resentment he felt at having his ability assailed passed without an outburst, and he returned to the discussion of the case entirely unruffled.

"I am not directing my energies exclusively toward Griswold," Britz informed. "I am probing the entire mystery, trying to drag from the tangle of contradictory circumstances something that will point unerringly toward the real thief. I believe that the raveling of the case is close at hand; therefore, it is essential that I overlook nothing, no matter how remote its bearing on the theft of the jewels."

"I appreciate the care and patience with which you are working," Mott said in a more moderate tone, "and I'll not hamper you in your work."

"Was Griswold born in this city?" suddenly flashed the detective.

"No, he's from somewhere in the South," the prosecutor replied. "At least, he told me so in college."

"How long has he been in business here?"

"About ten or fifteen years I should say."

"And you have known him intimately all that time?"

"Not intimately. We met occasionally and, of course, our attitude to each other has been that of old college friends."

"He's been engaged in various enterprises since leaving college, hasn't he? Most of the ventures proved failures?"

"You seem to know something of his business affairs," Mott fired back.

"At present he's secretary of the Iroquois Trust Company," Britz continued, disregarding the prosecutor's remark. "Do you know what salary he is receiving?"

"He gets $10,000 a year," the attorney informed him.

"So I understood," said Britz.

"Well, what of it?" asked Mott. "Anything significant in that?"

"No, only his fortune would be materially improved if he married Mrs. Missioner."

"And you believe the theft of her jewels would help his suit?" the prosecutor asked sarcastically.

The detective vouchsafed no reply. With characteristic abruptness, he switched to Sands.

"If Sande has lost heavily in Wall Street we ought to look into it. He had equal opportunity with Griswold to steal the collarette," he said.

"I have no objection," Mott smiled. "By the way," he suddenly asked, "have you obtained any trace of the truth as to who manufactured the Maharanee?"

"I have found the manufacturer," Britz replied calmly.

"What!" The prosecutor bounded out of his chair as if released by a spring. "And you've withheld the information from me?"

"The manufacturer of the stone is useless as a witness. He's hopelessly insane."

"Has he thrown no light on the case at all?"

"Yes, some light," Britz admitted reluctantly. He was not prepared to disclose his hand yet. In fact, he realized an abundance of work still was necessary before the result of the intrview in the insane asylum could be shaped into tangible evidence against the man who had ordered the duplicate diamond.

"Doesn't he recall who ordered the duplicate?" the prosecutor asked.

"No," the detective replied. "He is in the last stage of dementia. But we searched his effects and found a sketch of the Maharanee drawn on the back of a visiting card."

Triumphant beams shot from Mott's eyes. He faced the detective, one hand extended in congratulation.

"I take back everything I said about your having botched the case," he offered apologetically. "Whatever the outcome, you certainly are close to the heart of the mystery. Britz, was it a man or a woman who ordered the stone?"

The detective's hand slipped into the inner pocket of his coat. It produced a long envelope from which he took the card, passing it over to the prosecutor. Mott looked at the name engraved on the pasteboard with widening eyes. His lips extended until the mouth seemed a thin, shapeless slit. Suddenly his jaw opened and snapped, as if he had come to a quick determination.

"Sands!" he exclaimed. "So he ordered the fake Maharanee! By George, I now see the importance of Griswold's information with regard to his financial affairs. Sands is hit hard in the market," he continued slowly, as if viewing the case from a new angle. "He's hard up. Needs cash to cover his margins! Has a duplicate necklace made! Of course, if he had the Maharanee counterfeited, he also had the rest of the paste gems manufactured." Mott was talking half to himself, but his words kindled a pleasant light in the detective's eyes. "Sands has the motive for the crime, and he has the opportunity to commit it." The prosecutor's hand closed about Britz's palm. "I congratulate you," he finished.

"Not yet," the detective flashed back. "I've only hit the trail. It may lead into strange lanes."

He said nothing of the kidnapping in Central Park nor of the inferences he drew from the discovery of the card with the drawing on the back. Mott, however, kept his mind fixed on the important evidence.

"Sands is hard up for money; that's certain—"

"Not altogether," interrupted the detective. "Have you seen the afternoon papers?"

"No," the prosecutor replied.

From the pocket of his coat Britz drew a newspaper and pointed to the big headlines of the first column.

"MORE THAN TWO MILLIONS FOR TUBERCULOSIS CURE"

"What has that to do with the diamond robbery?" Mott inquired.

"'The Committee for the Prevention and Care of Tuberculosis,'" the detective read, "'acknowledges receipt of the following amounts from the following donors.'" He pointed halfway down the column, and emphasizing each syllable, he said:

"'Bruxton Sands—$200,000.'"

It was the second largest individual donation and Mott grasped its significance instantly.

"He certainly didn't steal the necklace to raise money for the cure of tuberculosis," he commented. "And he certainly couldn't have afforded that big check if he needed money for stock speculation." He turned sharply to Britz. "What do you make of it?" he snapped.

"It is one of the guide-posts to the diamond theft," Britz pronounced.

The look of inquiry which the prosecutor bestowed on the detective remained unanswered. As if fearful of having committed some indiscretion in giving even this meager hint of his thoughts, Britz rose hastily and, with a parting hint as to the complexity of the case, swung through the door and hastened out of the building. Unconsciously, his footsteps took him to Headquarters, and into Manning's presence.

"Griswold was down here to see me about the case," the Chief informed him. "He tells me you induced Mott to postpone it for a month?"

"That is true," the detective responded.

"Why?" demanded Manning.

"Because I'm reaching out for the real thief," Britz returned with increasing satisfaction. "I've got him, Manning. He can't get away."

"Well, who's the thief?" the Chief inquired tersely.

Britz averted his face to conceal the unwonted agitation that had suddenly sprung up within him. A new light gleamed in his eyes, a light not called up by the excitement of the chase. The mere tracking of criminals was part of the routine of his life; he followed the course of his trails unemotionally, like a well-oiled machine. But the contemplation of saving a human soul in distress, the consciousness of exercising talents in behalf of a woman who had touched his utmost pity; the knowledge that he alone stood between her and the living death that awaited her in State prison, increased the pulsation of his heart, thrilled him with a sense of noble purpose that was a new and agreeable excitation. When he had regained his customary nonchalance, he fixed his gaze on the Chief and, in a tone of cold indifference, said:

"The thinnest of veils is drawn between the thief and his complete exposure. I am not prepared to draw the veil aside yet. But it will be torn away shortly—very shortly. And then he'll stand revealed before the world."

"As mysterious as ever," the Chief commented with a show of impatience. "Go ahead in your own way."

CHAPTER XVII.

A Pair of Thieves.

Two men, late on that February afternoon, were hastening eagerly along converging routes to the bachelor home of Bruxton Sande. One was Sands himself. The other was Lieutenant Britz, of Headquarters.

The millionaire could hardly wait to return to his luxurious suite in the St. Barnabas apartment house, for he expected to find upon his arrival a note that should decide the whole future of his heart. Returning to his office early in the day, after the time spent with Mrs. Missioner, there had come upon him, as never before in his more or less placid wooing of the widow, a realization of what his love for her meant to him. Sands was not given to excess of emotion. English by decent, very Brittish in many ways, educated in one of the great public schools of the United Kingdom, he had been trained from boyhood to believe that the surest proof of man's estate, for which he was impatient, lay in never giving way to feeling. His round head, broad shoulders, and strength of bone and sinew had carried him through school days that would have broken a boy with the smallest degree of temperament. A university course in America and three postgraduate years at Heidelberg had hardened the glaze the English scholastic training had baked upon his inner self. Superimposed on all those had followed the deindividualizing experience of every man in the stress of industrial strife, and this had finished the process. Sands, so far as externals went, was about as impressionable as a totem pole; but deep within the man, in the still reaches where his thoughts threw off the veneer of civilization, he plunged into a wilderness of fancy that was his principal relaxation, and it was there that there existed sentiments as chivalrously romantic as any that ever actuated the finest squires of dames.

Craze For Old Mantelpiece.

A curious burglary occurred recently in the West End of London, Eng. A woman well known for her entertainments is moving into a house in Brook street. The house is empty, but there were three very fine old mantelpieces, which had lately been purchased and fitted in.

One day three men drove up to the house in a builder's cart. They said they were from the builders, with orders to alter the mantelpieces. They carried through the operation in a workmanlike manner, and drove off with the mantelpieces in the cart. Since then nothing has been heard of the mantelpieces or the operators.

The craze for old mantelpieces and the enormous rise in their value makes them very attractive to the thief.

UPPER LAKES ARE POPULAR

But Otonabee's Banks Are Not By Any Means Forgotten

According to statements made by railway and navigation officials, as well as hotel clerks, it would appear that Kawartha Lakes is losing none of its popularity.

The business done this year is in advance of that of last season. New comers to the lakes have been very numreous.

But while the upper lakes appeal to the majority of Peterboro people and outsiders, the banks of the Otonabee are not forgotten. At the present time, camping spots between Peterboro and Rice Lake points are at a premium.

The Review asked one camper to give the number of camps, now located within a certain area on the Otonabee river's banks, but his reply was "Oh, I couldn't begin to count them."

There is an impression abroad that all the people go to Stoney Lake, but this is not the case by any means, as a sail down the river will show.

WOMEN NEED A SAFE TONIC

And There is Nothing Better than Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Toning up the Blood.

It is said that woman's work is never done, and it is a fact that whether in society or in the home her life is filled with more cares and more worries than falls to the lot on man. For this reason women are compelled regretfully to watch the growing pallor of their cheeks, the coming of wrinkles and the thinness that becomes more distressing every day. Every woman knows that ill-health and worry is a fatal enemy to beauty, and that good health gives the plainest face an enduring attractiveness.

What women fail to realize is the fact that if the blood supply is kept rich and pure, the day of the coming of wrinkles, and pallor, dull eyes and sharp headaches is immeasurably postponed. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are literally worth their weight in gold to growing girls and women of mature years. They fill the veins with the rich, red blood that brings brightness to the eye, the glow of health to sallow cheeks, and charms away the headaches and backache that render the lives of so many women constantly miserable.

Mrs. William Jones, Crow Lake, Ont., says: "I feel that Dr. Williams' Pink Pills saved my life. I was so badly run down that I could hardly drag myself around. I was so bloodless that I was as pale as a sheet, and you could almost see through my hands. In fact the doctor told me my blood had all turned to water. I was taking medicine constantly, but without benefit. My mother had so much faith in Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, that she bought me two boxes and urged me to take them. How thankful I am that I followed her advice. Before these were gone I began to feel better, and I continued using the Pills until I had taken five more boxes when I was again enjoying the blessing of perfect health, with a good color in my face, a good appetite and I feel sure a new lease of life. I will always, you may be sure, be a warm friend of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills."

If you are weak or ailing begin to cure yourself to-day with the rich red blood Dr. Williams' Pink Pills actually make. If you do not find the Pills at your dealer's send 50 cents for a box or $2.50 for six boxes to the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont., and they will be sent you by mail, post paid.

MONAGHAN RESIDENTS WITNESS OPENING OF NEW WHARF AT WHITFIELD'S

Congratulatory Speeches are made after which the Ladies' Served a Sumptuous Meal.

From Friday's Daily.

The townships of North and South Monaghan had a gala day yesterday when they opened the new wharf at Whitfield's, at the end of the concession dividing the two townships. There were present, the Warden of Northumberland and Durham; Col. McNaughton, the County Clerk and Reeve of Cavan; Reeve Waterman of South Monaghan; Reeve Howden of North Monaghan; Warden Garbutt, of Peterborough County; Mayor Bradburn, E. A. Peck, M.L.A., E. M. Elliott, county clerk of Peterborough and J. H. Burnham, M. P.

It seems that this wharf has been long a request from the people of North and South Monaghan and some years ago a requisition was taken around and signed, but when the money was got, it was placed on a wharf at the end of the concession just above where T. A. E. Park now is.

Reeve Howden was a very acceptable chairman. He opened the proceedings by calling upon Mr. Burnham to speak.

Mr. Burnham said that the wharf was due primarily to the demand made by the township council of North Monaghan and voiced by Reeve Howden.

"Whenever the public can be benefitted by public work, I am in favor of it," declared Mr. Burnham. "That has always been my policy and always will be. We cannot do too much to facilitate trade and the transportation of both goods and people."

"I am persuaded," continued the speaker, "that this pavilion was too much neglected in the past and the money earned by these very people here, and paid as taxes into the public treasury, has gone for public works largely for the benefit of other people. We must get our share and as long as I have anything to say about it, we will.

"The wharf here looked like a difficult undertaking but when the townships and counties agreed to build the approaches, so that all the government had to do was to do the work upon the property, the problem was solved. Luckily, the approaches through the swamps are found to be on rock and this whole project will likely be permanent, and easy to keep in repair."

Mr. Burnham further remarked that it would be necessary to place a pavilion for the benefit of the ladies coming to and from market. This feature was also to be added at Reeve Waterman's request, to the South Monaghan wharf, known as Smithson's wharf. Superintendent McClellan promised to have this work completed at once.

"Reeve Waterman is always alive to the interests of his people and also put in a good word for this wharf," said the speaker. "I do not claim any credit for the work. These things ought to be done, and what we ought to do, we should do without trying to make capital out of it."

Mr. E. A. Peck said that he appreciated the work that had been done and he was glad to see such a large turnout, especially of the ladies. He understood there was to be a pic-nic and that the baskets were already loaded on the tables. This feature appealed to every one present, but speaking on more serious things, he could say he was entirely in sympathy with work of this description.

Warden Hickson of Northumberland warmly congratulated the people on the success of their efforts. He understood the County of Peterborough as well as the townships had made a grant towards the work. It had been suggested that Northumberland do the same and possibly they would.

Reeve Waterman spoke highly of the work done by Mr. Moncrief, who had charge of the work of building the approaches and the railings. The work had been well done.

Warden Garbutt warmly congratulated the people of the success of the success of their effects and said he agreed with Mr. Burnham that the government could not do too much of that sort of thing.

Mayor Bradburn said that wharves of this description meant good business for both the city and the country. He was very glad indeed to be present and he thanked Mr. Burnham for the invitation which he had extended to him. He would always be pleased to take part in functions of this kind. The work had been well done and those in charge were to be amply congratulated.

Reeve Shaw, County Clerk Elliott Mr. Moncrief, Col. McNaughton and others spoke, after which Mr. Burnham informed the ladies that when tea was over the government boat would take them for a sail down the river.

Superintendent McClellan was called for and he made a very neat speech in which he said he was always glad to do the work but the members were the only people who could get the money. He would see to it that the pavilions asked for would be erected without delay. Where pavilions were needed, they would be erected at the members' request, in order to protect the people from the weather, but this did not mean that pavilions would be erected everywhere. The townships of North and South Monaghan had agreed to look after the pavilions and protect it from damage or injury.

He was very pleased to see so many ladies present and he was sure that nothing would give the gathering greater pleasure than to partake of their hospitality. He would see to it that the invitation extended by Mr. Burnham for a sail on the government boat was carried out to their satisfaction.

After a sumptuous repast, the tables being laid in the open air on the bank of the river, the ladies proceeded down the river for the sail. They were loud in their praise of the neatness and cleanness of the Bessie Butler. The little steamer when she first started off, had all that the law would allow to be aboard.

Mr. Sexsmith, M.P., Mr. Kendry, ex-M.P. and Mr. Bradburn, ex-M.P., were unable to be present.

THE SPORTING WORLD

DAVY ROWAN BOOSTS CATCHER LAGE OF SENATORS

OTTAWA, Aug. 16—Manager Rowan of the Peterborough Club, thinks that Art Lage is easily the best catcher in the Canadian League and he is good enough for big league company. "He's the best of the bunch," says Davie "and I can't see why the big league clubs demand size in a catcher when they can get a smaller man with the strength and arm Lage has.

A whole lot of these big catchers are in their own way by they keep on looking for the big fellows. Lage has the strength of head and the arm, and the fact that he has caught every game this year for the Senators should prove that he can last."

The Peterborough manager has had a long experience in big league ball and he should know something about a catcher when he sees one. Art looks too good to be allowed to stay in the Canadian circuit for another season.

Earl Howell has been released by Brantford on account of his poor batting.

Eddie Starke, who started in two games here during the Guelph series, was fined $25 at Hamilton by Manager Cook for indifferent work.

Happy Jack Fryer is to be presented with a silver mug by Honey Joy Evans. Fryer led the league in batting last season.

BOB STERLING TWIRLED PETES TO 2-1 VICTORY

Bob Sterling continued his clever twirling at Ottawa yesterday and the Petes took the second game by two to one. The big fellow was very steady in the pinches and he fanned Renfer who was sent in as pinch hitter in the ninth. Then he forced Kubat to fly out to Hilliard, leaving Cosby Dolan stranded on the third bag. Sterling also figured in a sharp double play.

Fox and Hilliard each had a three bagger while Brant had two stolen bases on Lage, and accepted eight out of ten chances.

The Petes will be home all next week for series with London and Berlin

A Lazy Liver

Upsets the Whole System. Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills Put Things Right Again.

His liver is to sluggish—his stomach bad.

A bitter taste in the mouth—coated tongue—dizziness on rising suddenly—bowels alternately loose and constipated—these mean that the liver is out of order.

Instead of flowing into the bowels, to regulate them and aid digestion, the bile has been going all through the system, upsetting digestion, leaving the bowels constipated, and making the sufferer perfectly miserable. This is biliousness.

The quick, safe and certain cure is Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills. They clear out the clogged-up system, stir up the lazy liver, cleanse the stomach and bowels and purify the blood. The bile returns to its normal course, the food is again digested properly and all the disagreeable symptoms vanish.

Doctors prescribe Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills and they are known throughout the world as a proven cure for all digestive troubles. They are equally effective in strengthening weak kidneys and curing rheumatism.

Made by W. H. Comstock Co., Ltd., Brockville, Ont., and sold by all dealers at 25c a box. 15

NO WREATHS FOR J. IRA AT BRANTFORD

They think a lot of J. Ira Davis, at Brantford. The following is from the Courier:

The disgrace of having J. Ira Davis umpiring in the Canadian League was continued yesterday at Agricultural Park with unabated force. Never was it more apparent. Several times this season men have blushed for the presence of the ladies, when this rude transgressor has delivered himself of remarks which wouldn't be a credit to an ordinary American saloon. Yesterday it was awful. Davis evidently was determined to make Brantford people sick of him. He did more, he nauseated everybody. It was his last appearance here this year and he boasted of what he would do. He was in that condition of soporific inebriation which refuses to be sat up, even although the fans did their best. The game lagged while Davis faced the stand talking about Gertrude, Kimonas and what not. Occasionally he would intersperse his remarks by calling some one in the stand a piece of cheese. He also had white hope ambitions as he invited one fan to remain after the contest. These sidelights should make James P. Fitzgerald President of the Canadian League blush because it is Fitzgerald's fault and Davis' folly from which Brantford suffered yesterday

Music and Drama

Fiske O'Hara's new play for the coming season has the romantic title of "In Old Dublin," and has been specially written for the popular Irish comedian by Augustus Pitou. The latter was responsible for the most successful of the Scanlan and Olcott plays and this latest play is said to be one of the most delightful of all the romances that have emenated from Mr. Pitou's facile pen. The story of "In Old Dublin" is laid in and around the historic city by the Leffey and the scenery has been painted from photographs made by a noted Dublin artist, Harry Ogden, who has made sketches for the dresses of New York's greatest producers, is the designer of the costumes. Mr. O'Hara's tour, under the direction of Augustus Pitou, Jr., will open at Sheboygan, Wis. on August 31.

The company organized by Manager Augustus Pitou Jr., to support Fiske O'Hara in "In Old Dublin," is a strong one. Among the players are Marie Quinn, Madge Tyrone, Lou Ripley, Rose Watson, Elizabeth Hersom, Gertrude Maitland, Dorothy Davidson, Marie Knill, J. P. Sullivan, Jefferson Hall, Byron Russell, Eugene Frazier, P. O Foy, Howard Crampton and Walter Lowman. All the auxiliaries and supernumeraries used in the performance are carried by the company.

DISTINCTION IS WON FOR LAKEHURST SCHOOL

Gold Watch for Miss Lottie Shearer, Who Secured Highest Marks In Entrance Examinations

Enthusiasm in the cause of education was strongly evidenced last night at the Lakehurst school house, a large gathering being present, when Miss Lottie Shearer, daughter of Mr. Andrew Shearer, of Harvey, was presented by Mr. J. H. Burnham, M.P., with a gold watch, in recognition of her success in obtaining the highest number of marks in entrance examinations. Her teacher was Miss Flynn, daughter of Mr. James Flynn.

Following the presentation Miss Shearer made a very acceptable reply, and the gathering heartily applauded.

The chairman Mr. David Weir, chairman of the School Trustees, gave a short address in which he spoke of the importance of education being fostered and the necessity of giving all the attention possible to this matter.

Miss Palmer and Miss Smith gave a very fine duet on the violin and organ.

During the course of his address, Mr. Burnham said that education is the training we give ourselves. It is education in agriculture, mechanics or the general purposes of life that makes us fit for those pursuits. What would we think of a man who would go on a farm without knowing anything about farming? If he is well trained and has brains he could make a living on pretty nearly any sort of a farm and he would be sure to make a good living on a good farm for himself and family, but a poor farmer cannot do well anywhere. So it is in all walks of life. And when a man has trained himself and accomplished so much he will turn if he is a well-intentioned, right-thinking man to the task of helping others, of helping the community in which he lives and the world in general. When we do that, we have completed all duty, and Nature requires it of us. But we must do these and do them well for it is this effort to do things in a great, a truly manly or a truly womanly way, that makes a people great and we may add happy. Prowling, cunning, greed, lack of honour, can make no one happy, but they can destroy. They are the wolfish tendency in human nature not the human feature and we should put it down. If it were not that people at large realize the necessity of doing this, humanity would all have become wolves long ago. We should face this fact promptly and cheerfully. And nowhere is it capable of being faced better than in our schools, where our future men and women are trained. We all know that early training and environment are by all odds the chief agents for good or evil in the future of our people. A good school like a good home is a priceless blessing. A good school is a place of meeting of training and of steady honorable progress. We can not do too much to give it our best attention. Nowadays, education is so essential that the best educated, that is the best trained, get all the best positions. The ill-trained are not wanted. The standard of efficiency is higher than it used to be and the young must put forth greater efforts than ever before, and the old must put forth greater efforts to help them.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

PRAY FOR RAIN.

Dear Sir,—Would the people who are usually active in religious affairs be kind enough to note that we need rain. It would be well to have prayers to-morrow for rain. If this matter has been overlooked in the past, to-morrow would be a good date for catching up, for rain is badly needed.

Yours truly,
"PLUVIUS."

The work is under the supervision of Contractor Johnston, and will be completed about the middle of next month.

Mr. H. Might, manager and proprietor of the J. C. Turnbull Co., has just returned from the fashion exhibit held in Cleveland, Ohio, under the auspices of the Association of Women's Wear Manufacturers. Some two thousand merchants from Canada and the United States were present. The exhibit was held in the big auditorium of the Chamber of Commerce, Cleveland, and the stage exhibit was held in the Metropolitan Theatre. Mr. Might has purchased a number of models and will hold an exhibit on the opening of the new store.

PARK WATERED BY THE FIREMEN

False Alarm Was Rung In From Box 14

Fire Chief Howard last night received an order from Alderman Gillespie to water Central Park, sent men to the park at 10.30 and they remained all night. While they were there a false alarm was sent in from Box 14, corner of Wescott and Aylmer streets. This is the first offence along this line in a long time.

During the fiscal year 1911-12 Canada imported $5,921,117 worth of wines and spirits.

CITY COUNCIL AND WATER COMMISSIONERS TO MEET

In Regard To By law For Extension Work To Waterworks Distribution System

An important meeting of the committee of the whole Council will be held on Monday night, and Mayor Bradburn hopes that all the aldermen will be on hand.

The Board of Water Commissioners will be present and a discussion will take place in regard to a money by-law for the raising of money to proceed with extension work to the waterworks distribution system.

ONE MONTHS NOTICE

The Commissioners held a meeting yesterday afternoon, when a by-law was passed providing that one month's notice must be given when application is made for water service on a street that is to be paved.

If this notice is not given and the pavement is laid, the property holder or person responsible will be charged for the whole cost of the work, in the event of the water connection being made.

WATER IS PURE

The M.H.O. reported that there had been no infections in the water during the month of July. Also that an inspection had been made of the hotels at Stoney Lake, where it was found that conditions had been improved. Suggestions were made and these would help to keep the water supply pure.

The secretary was instructed to write J. W. Kelly, clerk of Smith township asking permission to open the highway from the waterworks pumping station to the city limits for the purpose of laying an additional main.

The Board received a letter from City Solicitor Hall, relating to the matter of raising money for the purpose of laying the water main.

WARRANTS SWORN OUT AGAINST LABOR LEADERS

Two Are in Jail Charged With Exciting Mobs to Riot

Canadian Press Despatch.

VANCOUVER, B.C., Aug. 18 — One hundred warrants have been sworn out against riot leaders in Nanaimo and eighty-five in Ladysmith, as the result of the recent disorder in the mining towns. J. J. Taylor, vice-president of the Miners' Union, a prominent official of the British Columbia Labor Federation and John Naylor, president of the Chamberlain Union are in jail on the charge of inciting to riot.

Union leaders are commencing a public agitation for the withdrawal of troops and a call is being sent to the labor organization to expell members who took the field. Sunday was a quiet day in the strike zone, with twelve hundred armed men in charge. Twenty-five refugees, including fourteen women and children were brought in to Nanaimo from the hills after suffering terrible privations.

COUNTESS IS FOUND DEAD

Beautiful Russian Woman a Suicide or Murder Victim

ST. PETERSBURG, Aug. 17.—The Countess Tarnovska, who in 1910 was convicted in Venice of complicity in the murder of Count Kamarowsky and sentenced to eight years imprisonment, was found dead on a St. Petersburg-Kiev express train today. She had been hanged. The police are investigating in an effort to determine whether it is a case of suicide or murder. The countess was pardoned last year.

The Countess Marie Tarnovska, a beautiful Russian woman, was charged and found guilty of having persuaded a jealous youth, Nikolas Naumoff, to go to Venice from Vienna, and kill Count Kamarowsky, in order that she might obtain $100,000 life insurance, the policy for which Kamarowssky had taken out in her name. The countess, it was said, was engaged to marry Kamarowsky. It was charged at the trial that the countess had a mania for making men love her and then turning them against one another. It was testified that she had repeatedly embraced Count Kamarowsky in the presence of young Naumoff and had shown Naumoff forged love letters in order to arouse his jealousy. The court also found Naumoff guilty but mentally unbalanced and sentenced him to three years imprisonment.

ROBS PASSENGERS.

Bandit Rifles Pockets of Travellers Near Kansas City.

KANSAS CITY, Aug. 16. — (Can. Press.)— A bandit who boarded a Pullman car on the St. Louis and San Francisco passenger train, known as the Meteor at the Union Station here tonight, held up four of the passengers on the car soon after the train left for Oklahoma and Texas. The robber escaped by jumping from the train.

The bandit has purchased railroad and Pullman tickets and entered the train as a regular passenger. The train had passed scarcely beyond the limits of the city when suddenly the man stood up and, flourishing a pistol, demanded that the other passengers in the car give him their money and valuables.

The passengers in compliance with his demand held up their hands and four men readily surrendered their pocketbooks containing $106. The man evidently intended to rob all the passengers in the car and probably had planned to enter other coaches, but he became startled when he discovered that one of the passengers at the end of the car had disappeared while his attention was concentrated on pocketing the money he had received.

Evidently believing that the train crew would rush in on him in a moment, the bandit backed out of the coach and hurrying thru another car to the platform, jumped to the ground and disappeared in the darkness.

Yachtsmen Nude.

KINGSTON, Aug. 17.—(Special.)—The fact that prominent members of the Kingston Yacht Club have been taking their morning "dip" from the yacht club wharf in a nude condition has caused no end of complaints from people passing thru the harbor in boats. The matter has been discussed for weeks thru the local press many letters being written pro and con on the question, until at last the matter has come to the attention of the police, and now they have their big stick out after the offenders. They will see that the bathers are properly garbed just the same as at other places along the shore in the city.

It seemed to be the popular opinion that because the yacht club was on private property those belonging to the club could enter the water at that place as they pleased.

150 FISHERMEN ARE DROWNED

Canadian Press Despatch

HONG KONG, Aug. 18— One hundred and fifty fishermen were drowned and many junks wrecked at Macao, by a typhoon. Many casualties occurred on the shore, due to houses collapsing.

MRS. PANKHURST FREE.

Suffragette Leader Crosses to France Unhindered.

LONDON, Aug. 16.—Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst, the militant suffragette leader, left England for France last night, traveling across the channel by way of Southampton and Havre. She had been out on "license" under the "Cat and Mouse Act" for some time, and it was reported that the police authorities at the various channel ports had recently received from headquarters orders not to arrest Mrs Pankhurst if she were seen going on board a steamer for the purpose of leaving England.

Mrs. Pankhurst was sentenced to a term of three years' penal servitude on a charge of conspiracy at the London sessions on April 3, this year.

In a speech in the court she declared she would fight to the end, and since her condemnation she has compelled the authorities to release her on a number of occasions owing to fear that she would die from the effects of the "hunger and thirst strike" which she continually declares when she is confined in prison.

Miss Christabel Pankhurst, daughter of Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst, and the chief organizer of the Women's Social and Political Union, the militant suffragette organization, has been living in Paris for some months. She directs from there the campaign of militant women in England.

Mrs. Pankhurst has gone away for what her friends call a "Rest Cure," which they say may be extended to the United States.

Miss Annie Kenney, another organizer of the militant suffragette society, preceded Mrs. Pankhurst to the continent, and in suffrage circles it is stated that it would not cause much astonishment if Miss Sylvia Pankhurst followed her mother out of the country as soon as she has sufficiently recovered from her latest "hunger and thirst" strike.

The police authorities, it is hinted will not attempt to bar the egress of the leaders of the militant movement and would indeed be only too delighted to assist them to emigrate.

Arrives in France.

TROUVILLE, France, Aug. 16.—(Can. Press).—Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst, the English militant suffragette leader, arrived here today from London by way of Havre to join her daughter, Christabel, who has been staying at this seaside resort for the past fortnight. Mrs. Pankhurst's journey from London was uneventful. She announced this evening that she would return to England when the autumn suffrage campaign opens.

OLDEST MONARCH IN THE WORLD

BIG OVATION FOR THE KING'S PRIZE MARKSMAN

Royal Welcome Home by Comrades of City Militia and Crowds of People.

TORONTO, Aug. 18.—Pte. Hawkins, who won the King's Prize at Bisley, returned to Toronto Saturday night. More eloquent of the admiration which his achievement has gained for him than the illuminated address composed by the city council was the roar of cheers which welcomed him as the hero-bearing train steamed slowly into North Toronto station at ten minutes after eight.

Lining the track clear across from west of Yonge street to the station enclosure was a dense crowd of civilians and soldiery, altho the drizzling rain which fell undoubtedly had its effect in reducing the numbers of those who greeted him. The men of the 48th, wearing the white shell jackets of their drill order uniform, stood at attention as did also the companies of public school cadets, whose red coats brightened the too gloomy scene. But as with grinding brakes the train stopped ranks were broken, discipline was forgotten and kilties and cadets alike pushed with the straining civilians to get a glimpse of Hawkins when he should alight.

Then, above the cheering could be heard the notes of the salute. The band had not forgotten its duty. Twice the salute was played and then "God Save the King," and Private Hawkins appeared on the steps, escorted by Col Currie of the 48th. Until that moment he had been Private William A. Hawkins. In a trice he became "Billy Hawkins" and nothing else. His honors, the crowd, the presentation rifle from the Rose Company, which has been his delight since it was given him at Quebec, all were forgotten except the little wife at his side and the boys who called him "Billy" and extended eager arms from every side.

The mayor, in welcoming Hawkins announced that the city would donate $600 to him.

To this $600 will be added over one thousand dollars contributed by the officers and men of the Highlanders and the amount will be still further increased by private subscription. The gift of a house was decided upon as a step most likely to encourage Hawkins to remain a resident of Toronto. It is expected that the provincial government will recognize the worth of Hawkins' achievement, and a project is on foot to obtain for him a position in the Dominion customs here. The importance of Hawkins' comparative youth—he is under thirty—was emphasized in the speech of Col. Currie.

Hawkins' education fits him for engineering work, but as this will not allow him to devote much time to shooting, those interested in his future as a marksman hope by obtaining for him work in the civil service to keep him on the ranges as an example to the young men of the regiments.

FAMILY TRAGEDY

Husband Murders Wife And Children, Then Shoots Self

Canadian Press Despatch

NEW YORK, Aug. 18—The bodies of Mrs Mary Lake and her four children, Horace, seventeen; Walter, eight, Stella, eighteen, and Dorothy, fourteen, were found in their Brooklyn home to-day horribly mangled, and beside them, dying, was the husband and father, Henry Lake, a restaurant chef. Apparently he had killed them all and then fatally wounded himself.

Trainmen Must Report Dresses.

HARRISBURG, Pa., Aug. 16.—Following yesterday's public statement to the effect that many accidents to women on car steps are the direct result of high heels and hobble skirts, the Pennsylvania railroad posted today on every trainmen's bulletin board along the main line an order that the dress of women shall be specially noted and reported whenever such an accident occurs.

The order directs that trainmen at all times, as in the past, shall lend passengers assistance, and that whenever a woman falls on or near a train the trainman who sees it shall jot down the width of skirt and height of heel. The trainmen are not to be equipped with measureing tapes or dules, but they are to make a calculation.

Daughter Born to Szechenyis.

LONDON, Aug. 17.— A daughter has been born to Countess Lazlo Szechenyi, who came to England for the event, and is temporarily residing in Great Tangley Manor, Surrey.

Count Lazlo Szechenyi and Miss Gladys Vanderbilt were married in New York, Jan. 27, 1908. A daughter was born at the count's ancestral home in Ormeso, Hungary, Oct. 27, 1908, and christened Cornelia. On July 17, 1911, another daughter was born, in Remetevasygar, Hungary, and named Alice.

Berlin Population Grows.

BERLIN, Aug. 17.—(Special.)—Assessment Commissioner Huehnergard announces that the population increase this year for the east north and centre wards, is 815, which makes the total about 17,775. It is expected that the south and west wards will show a substantial increase which by taking proportionate increase for each of these wards gives a grand total of 18,348.

In another twelve months the population will reach 20,000.

MISSIONARY IS MURDERED

Shot by Unknown Man, While Reposing in Garden

CONSTANTINOPLE, Aug. 17.—(Can. Press.)—An official despatch received by the government today confirms the murder last week of the Rev. Charles H. Holbrook, a missionary, at Soushehir, Asiatic Turkey. The report said Mr. Holbrook had been shot by an unknown man while reposing in a garden.

The murderer escaped, but the authorities of Soushehir arrested several persons who are believed to have been connected with the case and have taken steps to punish the instigators of the crime.

Mr. Holbrook was a native of Lynn, Mass., and was connected with the American board of commissioners for foreign missions at Sivas.

Knowles to Take Rest.

GALT, Aug. 16.—(Special.)—The indisposition of Rev. R. E. Knowles, M. A., minister of Knox Church, and author of several popular works of fiction, is causing grave anxiety to his family and friends. It is no secret that since the railway accident in which he was injured five years ago, he has not been physically well.

Rev. Mr. Knowles has been persuaded to go with his family to Muskoka and take a complete rest.

ROOSEVELT TO COME BACK

He May Seek Regular Republican Nomination in 1916

WASHINGTON, Aug. 16. Republican leaders in congress progressives as well as regulars, have come to the conclusion that Theodore Roosevelt will enter the Republican presidential primaries in 1916 in the hope of capturing the Republican nomination.

This conviction has gradually been settling down on everybody here, but it was not until recently that the leaders began to show evidence of grave concern. They acknowledge now that the work of reorganizing the party must not be long delayed if the Roosevelt nomination is to be avoided.

Senator Cummins of Iowa said today that unless congress adjourns to September 1 the instructions of the recent session of the Republican national executive committee in Washington for the calling of the "national committee within sixty days after the adjournment of congress" would not be strictly observed, but that a movement would be started at once for calling the committee together looking to a national convention or conference.

Senator Cummins is of the opinion that the matter is of too much importance to be delayed, waiting for congress to adjourn.

In view of the fact that there is no possibility of the adjournment of congress until after Sept. 1, it appears to be a foregone conclusion that the Republican national committee will be asked to meet in October or November to discuss plans for rehabilitating the organization.

Whether or not the growing impression among Republicans in congress that Col Roosevelt wants to capture the party nomination in 1916 has hastened the plans looking to reorganizing and rebuilding the party cannot be definitely stated. Of course the Republican leaders would not admit today that the colonel's suspected plans have moved them to renewed energy. But there has been much discussion, especially in the senate, within the last week of the activity of Roosevelt's friends and its possible significance.

TWO MEN ARE SOUGHT

New York Police Send Out Circulars in Martin Case

NEW YORK, Aug. 16. — Harry Schaeffer, alias Snafer, alias Murray, and Mike Sirrocco, alias Sago, alias Santo, are the men sought by the New York police as the murderers of William G. Martin, the Toronto milliner, found dead in a furnished room house early this week. Descriptions of the men were sent out broadcast this afternoon.

Schaefer is described as a good-looking, clean-cut, fairly well dressed young man, 20 years old, 5 feet 7 1-2 inches tall and weighing about 145 pounds. He has a necktie pin initialed "H. S."

Sirrocco is described as a barber by occupation; Italian, 20 years old, 5 feet 2 inches tall; weight 140 pounds; stockily built, round face, pale, olive complexion; black curly hair, parted on the side; brown eyes; high cheekbones, straight nose.

According to the circular, whoever murdered Martin took this jewelry: Hunting case gold watch, marked "W. G. M."; gold watch chain; old gold locket, marked "W. G. M."; one-carat diamond ring; half-carat diamond ring.

The circular concludes that the alleged fugitives "spoke of going to San Francisco, to which city they may now be en route, stopping off on the way."

Through Panama in Small Boat.

BANGOR, Aug. 18.—Capt. Mathias Johnson of Perth Amboy, N.J., who sailed from Eastport Aug. 3 in a twenty-five foot motor and sail boat for San Francisco, proposes to go via the Panama Canal.

Capt. Johnson's boat is said to have been the gig of Dewey's flagship Olympia at the battle of Manila Bay. In the course of this run the little boat will cover 7000 miles and make port thirty-five times on the Atlantic.

Capt. Johnson says he has been informed he will be able to get his small craft thru the canal in October. He plans to make his expenses by selling post-cards and placing his craft on exhibition.

Want a Silencer for Drunks.

SARNIA, Aug. 17.—(Special.)—The cursing and swearing of prisoners in the police cells here has aroused the wrath of some of the prominent citizens of the town and efforts are being made to have a change made, so that the language of the drunks and other prisoners in the city cooler cannot be heard on the streets. The management of the Northern Hotel, which is only a few feet from the windows of the cells, has made a complaint about the matter. What action the town fathers will take is not known.

Ten-Mile Swim.

STOCKHOLM, Aug. 17. — (Can. Press.)—Nils Stenstroem, a Swede, today swam across the Sound from Landskrona, Sweden, to Skodsborg, Denmark, a distance in a direct line of about 10 miles. Stenstroem, however, had to contend with stormy weather, a rough sea and strong current, and was nine hours and twenty minutes in accomplishing his task.

Wholesale Executions in Canton Take Place Daily

HONGKONG, Aug. 17.—(Can. Press)—The federal general, Lung Chi Kuang, who is President Yuan Shi Kai's candidate for governor of Canton, disembarked from a government gunboat at Hongkong Saturday to take charge of the city.

Guerilla fighting, in which the rebels are being aided by pirates, is proceeding against the government troops some miles beyond Canton. The guerillas are prosecuting their warfare principally for the purpose of looting.

On one street corner in Canton the bodies of sixty-four persons who were killed in the fighting of Friday were found. All the men wore new uniforms. The Red Cross has been unable to reach the zone of fighting in Canton, where frightful conditions are reported to exist among the wounded owing to the great heat.

The governor's yamen, which was destroyed during the fighting, was the scene of wanton vandalism. The valuable furnishings, such as vases, black wood, screens and other articles were taken to the streets and smashed, while stationary objects which could not be removed were battered to pieces with the butt ends of the guns of the rebels. Near the yamen the body of a Chinese woman, dressed in silks and having large pearls in her ears, was found. She had been shot thru the head. The treasury building which was damaged by shells, was looted. The rebels in their fighting are animated by the spirit of loot, and not patriotism.

Wholesale executions in Canton are taking place daily.

Battle in Progress.

SHANGHAI, Aug. 17.—(Can. Press.)—Advices received from Nankin, under date of last Friday, say that a sharp struggle was then proceeding for the possession of Purple Mountain. Government troops from Chinkiang were pouring up to reinforce the besiegers. A steady artillery duel was proceeding between the rebels on Lion Hill and the northerners at Pukow. Foreigners in Hsiakwang, a suburb of Nankin, have taken refuge on the warships out of the line of fire.

SLAYER OF STANFORD WHITE GAINS FREEDOM

HARRY THAW BREAKS FROM ASYLUM

Only Long Litigation Can Bring Millionaire Murderer Back to Matteawan.

NEW YORK, N. Y., Aug. 18. — Harry Thaw is still at liberty with no word received of his whereabouts since he dashed beyond the asylum walls and into the shelter of the high powered touring car Sunday morning. It is regarded as certain that he is beyond the state borders, but no trace of him was found in Connecticut nor any foundation for the belief that the car sped on towards the Canadian borders. There is no confirmation of the theory that he boarded an ocean-going yacht off South Norwalk, Conn. The authorities consider as certain that Thaw will be found and may attempt extradition on the grounds that in escaping he technically assaulted his keeper and also he is said to have bribed asylum attaches.

MONTREAL, Aug. 18— In expectation that Harry Thaw may make a break for Europe from this port, the police have instituted a watch on out-going liners. The police have been semi-officially advised by the New York authorities of Thaw's escape and have requested them to keep a sharp watch for the huge black touring car in which he made his successful dash for liberty.

MATTEAWAN, N. Y., Aug. 17.—(Can. Press.)—Harry K. Thaw, the slayer of Stanford White, escaped from the Hospital for the Criminal Insane here at 7.45 o'clock this morning. A dart for liberty thru an open gate, a dash in the open door of a powerful automobile that stood quivering outside, and a flight like a rocket for the Connecticut state line, 30 miles away, accomplished his escape.

Tonight he was still at large and the hospital authorities felt certain he was outside the state. Once beyond its boundaries Thaw is free. Only months, perhaps years, of litigation can bring him back to Matteawan, and then only in one event—that he be adjudged insane in the state to which he has fled.

Five confederates manned the car in which Thaw escaped and a big black limousine which trailed it past the asylum gate. The police have their descriptions and the names under which they registered at a local hotel Friday night, and are seeking them.

The hospital authorities believe that Thaw has fled to the shore of Long Island Sound and boarded a yacht waiting with steam up, to rush him to Europe.

A reward of $500 for Thaw's apprehension has been offered by Mr. R. F. C. Keib, superintendent of the asylum. Howard H. Barnum, the attendant at the gate past whom Thaw flashed in his break for freedom, is under arrest, and other arrests are expected to follow.

The shades were drawn in the dormitories and the inmates were getting their second sleep when Thaw left his room this morning. He was fully dressed. The milkman's cart was rumbling on the road outside as he walked thru the storeroom and into the outer court or yard of the asylum grounds. Barnum, sole attendant at the rear gate, was pacing back and forth when Thaw closed the storeroom door behind him and apparently did not grasp the significance of Thaw's early rising.

Long years of residence at the asylum and repeated declarations by Thaw that he would never attempt to obtain his freedom except by legal means had established the madman's status as a "trusty." There was little out of the ordinary in his appearance, even at so early an hour, in the courtyard, and if Barnum saw him as to this no one save the hospital authorities could say tonight and they refused to talk. He raised no question.

A six-cylinder black Packard touring car of sixty horse-power, followed by a limousine, also black, loafed lazily along the road as the milkman drew near the gate. Thaw standing a few feet away, apparently unconcerned, waited till Barnum unlocked the gate and swung it wide to let the milkman enter. At the same moment the two cars drew up on the further side of the road opposite the gate, and the touring car stood still, its engine throbbing.

As Barnum stepped aside for the milkman to drive into the grounds he heard the gravel crunch beneath Thaw's feet, and looking up saw the madman flash past him with the speed of the wind straight for the waiting car. With a shout Barnum started in pursuit, but a flying leap landed Thaw safe within the car. The great wheels were slowly turning before the keeper had fairly reached the roadway. They were throwing up a cloud of dust before he had gone twenty-five feet.

Down the roadway the cars sped in a whirling cloud of dust that spread over their trail like a mantle and blotted them from sight.

For a moment Barnum shaded his eyes with his hand against the low lying sun and watched them; then, with the first great blot on his career of 20 years as keeper, he dashed madly back into the grounds and locked the gate.

"Thaw's gone—escaped!" he shouted, bursting into Dr. Keib's presence. And in a moment the hunt was on.

The great black car flashed like a thunderbolt thru Stormville, 10 miles east of Matteawan, along the road to the Connecticut line. Early risers in the little hamlet saw three men [illegible] Thaw—crouching low to escape the sweep of their rush thru the air. They were going 70 miles an hour. They were ten minutes out of Matteawan. Stormville marveled at their speed and watched them melt away in the dust of the state road. The limousine had been left behind. At the speed which the black car traveled thru Stormville he should have reached the state line within half an hour.

Barnum's breathless declaration at the asylum brought Dr. Keib to his feet like a pistol shot. Within a moment he was standing at the telephone and as Barnum poured his story into his ears, repeated it over the wire to police headquarters. Matteawan became the centre of a widening ripple of telephone and telegraph alarms as Dr. Keib planned pursuit.

Liberal Leader Begins Quebec Campaign at St. Hyacinthe

DEMANDS ELECTION

MONTREAL, Aug. 16.—(Can. Press.)—"The Conservatives may put off an appeal to the people—they may delay from day to day, from week to week, from month to month—but the appeal must come; and the longer it is put off the more bitter will be the retribution, the more glorious the triumph and victory of the Liberals."

This was the tenor of Sir Wilfrid Laurier's speech when he began his Quebec campaign at St. Hyacinthe. The town was crowded with visitors and was decorated for the occasion. It is estimated that six thousand persons heard the Liberal leader's speech.

St. Hyacinthe was overrun with the incoming visitors, who came from every point of the province on special trains. The streets were festooned with flowers and bunting, special arches of greenery being thrown across at various points. In the latter little girls dressed in gala attire sprinkled fresh cut flowers on the roadway as the Liberal chieftain passed. Addresses were read on behalf of the citizens, as well as on behalf of the various Liberal clubs represented at the demonstration.

Sir Wilfrid, who gave all evidences of having profited by his repose of the past few months, made a speech which was described by several of his followers and colleagues in the house as one of the most vigorous and eloquent in years. There was something of the old resonant voice and graceful poise which were characteristic of the Laurier of the old days.

Sir Wilfrid took up the naval question and in rounded sarcasm dealt with the position of the Nationalist "patriots," who had been, he said, traitors to all their pre-election promises. Conservative extremists, he declared, were made up of the Imperialists on the one side and the Nationalists on the other. They together constituted a body of which the Imperialists were the head and the Nationalists the tail, or, to use another figure, said Sir Wilfrid, they might be described as an equipage drawn by a bull and an ass—he added that he would not say which was the ass.

As to the naval question, said Sir Wilfrid, tho the Nationalists had begged to have only twenty of their number elected, promising, in that event, they would soon have the "damned" question settled, it was now a more burning question than ever before. Sir Wilfrid also scored the "closure" as a death blow dealt at the educational liberty of the people by the Conservatives, whom he described as a part of the privileged classes as opposed to the masses. He averred that the whole policy of the Conservatives tended towards bringing Canada back to the day of 75 years ago, when the people counted as nothing, and when everything in the matter of government was directed from the highbrows of Downing street.

Silas Duclos and F. H. Boisseau presided. Following the speech of welcome by Mayor Payan, the other speakers were Armand Boisseau, representing the Young Liberals, T. D. Bouchard, M.L.A., of St. Hyacinthe, and Senator Dessaulles.

HIDDEN TREASURES OF ONTARIO

The Review is gratified to find that its recent editorial on "The Development of Canadian Industries" has received such wide notice and has aroused the interest of so many people in the subject as it applies especially to the mineral areas of Eastern Ontario.

The article in question has been reprinted in various newspapers in Hastings and the neighboring counties, and on Saturday last the Toronto Star quoted it at some length in an editorial entitled "Better than gold:"

> "The Peterborough Review says that Eastern Ontario contains minerals far more important than gold, and that in developing these deposits the gold can also be mined.
>
> "Gold and silver are the spectacular metals and discoveries of them create an excitement out of proportion to their actual value to the community. The minerals of Eastern Ontario, as the Review points out, may be the means of establishing important industries."

Spectacular speculations have had their day in Canada, let us hope so, at any rate. It is time we got down to steady business. The Geologists who have just finished their convention in Toronto have revealed to us, if we did not know it before, the fact that this continent is built upon a foundation which was laid in the early morning of time and that the treasures of the ages lie buried beneath our feet.

Men will go west and north, and this is necessary, just as it was necessary for men to open up Ontario in the last generation. But does the exit of the lumberman mean that vast stretches of this province are to be allowed to run wild and become a wilderness again? Such will be the case, and such it need not be.

It is true that even in some of the wildest, rockiest places in east there are "farms" upon which hundreds of families are subsisting today. But no one who has tasted civilization has the least envy for these people; for in some remote instances they cannot be said to do more than exist, an existance which is little above that of the Indian who went before them, and certainly not as picturesque.

The moral aspect of these districts is a serious question which the government will soon have to face. The churches seem powerless in reaching some of them. What is needed first is, not acts of parliament nor more preaching, but industry. When industrial enterprise ceases, men either "get out" or they become animal in desire and in life;

"Stunted and stunned,
A brother to the ox."

We therefore feel that by calling attention to the possibilities of these undeveloped areas a double purpose will be served of enriching our country and staying the devolution of our rural population.

The Review would be glad to see other journals interesting themselves in this subject which is so vital to the future of the province and the people. It is not a matter of politics or party, or even of mercenary profit. What is needed in the first place is an expert and exhaustive survey of these eastern counties with a view to the development of all their metal and mineral resources. This could be done without any booming or boosting and by far-seeing and scrupulous business men.

TO FARMERS

When England was a farming country, more than two millions of acres were under cultivation. To-day less than 50 thousand acres are under similar cultivation in that country. (Why? Because it is cheaper to grow cereals, etc in West America, Argentina, the steppes of Russia, Egypt etc., than in England. The same set of conditions will, one day, apply to Canada and the United States. The latter are in dread of it to-day. Australia, Russia and Argentina are threatening the farmer of Canada. He must get down to an equal level if he is to hold his own—unless he keeps his own market for himself. He has a right to do this. In England the farmer has been sacrificed to the manufacturer. The latter is quite willing to secure cheap food for his operatives. They cannot then cry out for higher wages. Free trade is fatal to the manufacturer when China awakes and the poor coolies drive our young men and women from the market. Must we then, in this proud and happy Canada, prepare to lower ourselves to the level of China and Paraguay? Is it after all fatal, to be a superior race? Is it the race to be poorly fed, the miserably wretched after all?

Last year, Mr. Burnham, M.P., called the attention of the farmers to the necessity of opposing free trade in farm products, with Australia, Argentina, etc. We would be driven off the field. If we must have free trade, let it be with our equals. The United States is likely to have as free to enter our wheat, barley oats, hay and flax there if we do the same. We will, no doubt, if the farmers want it. It is open to them to think this matter over. Do they wish to give up the closed home-market that eats all their butter all their cheese, all their poultry, all their pork, beef, etc., for a market that has a wheat surplus of its own of 70 millions this year? Take care that a trap is not being laid for our farmers. We are supremely prosperous and fairly happy. Others see it and envy us. Let us beware of substituting theories for facts the substance for the shadow.

THE RIGHT TO USE

Printers and others who are looking out for new patents or improvements will in future have to be careful. If a farmer, for instance, who intends buying a new patent pitch-fork or a new threshing machine should be sure that his purchase is a bona fide patent and not an infringement.

The United States Court have pronounced that not only the manufacturer of an infringement is liable, but the purchaser can be prosecuted for buying and using such infringement.

This seems rather hard on the user, who has presumably purchased his "patent" in good faith, for it puts him in the position of an accomplice, or at least of the man who receives stolen goods.

The argument is, that a patentee has the exclusive right not only to "make" and "sell," but also the exclusive right to "use" his invention, and anyone who uses the invention without his authority is just as liable to him for damages as one who manufactures and sells the device.

Users have a means of protecting themselves against infringement being foisted upon them in cases of machines of any great value by entering into a contract with the manufacturer insuring them against all such questions of rights and infringement arising.

EDITORIAL NOTES

At a band concert the other evening a fox hunting march was played in which the firing of a gun was introduced to give a realistic touch to the rendering. It was presumably a Canadian and not an English fox hunt.

"The Passing of Buffalo Bill" is the heading of an editorial in the Daily Times' Standard. On a second glance it was discovered that it had nothing to do with the Senate, or a bill dealing with the Buffalo question, but was all about a wild west show of that name.

For the Children

Happy Young Bather on the Beach at Rockaway.

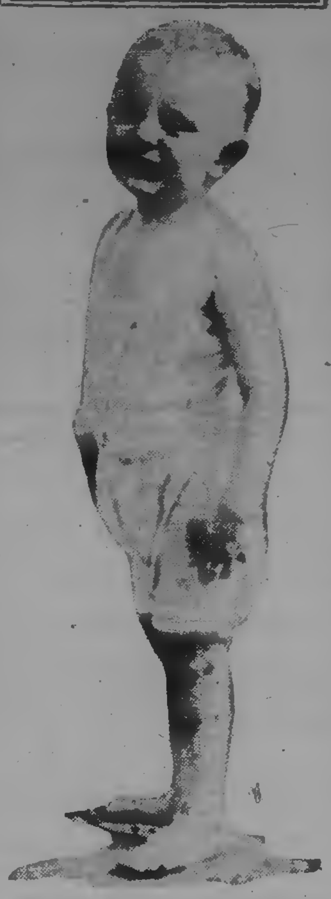

Photo by American Press Association.

With the return of the summer sun the various beaches in the vicinity of New York are thronged with young and old enjoying a dip in the surf. After Coney Island, Rockaway Beach is the most popular seaside resort. Here any day during the summer may be seen hundreds of little ones playing in the sand. Trainloads of the poor children from the east side are taken daily to Rockaway, where they are provided with lunches. Some of them are kept for a week's outing, there being several large charitable institutions at the beach that provide accommodations. The youngster in the picture is making the most of his opportunity and, if expression counts for anything, is having a good time. The photo man caught him just as he came out of the water.

The Bird Catcher.

This is good fun for children, and even those of larger growth have been known to take part in it.

You must first decide which one is to be the bird catcher. The others each choose the name of a bird, but no one must choose the owl, as it is forbidden. All of the players then sit in a circle with their hands on their knees except the bird catcher, who stands in the center and tells a tale about birds, taking care to mention the ones he knows have been chosen by the company.

As each bird's name is spoken the owner must imitate its note as well as he can, but when the owl is named all hands must be put behind the chairs in silence and remain there until the next bird's name is mentioned.

When the bird catcher cries "all the birds" the players must altogether give their imitations of the various birds they have chosen. Should any player fail to give the cry when his bird is named or forget to put his hands behind his chair when the owl is mentioned he has to change places with the bird catcher.

Lawn Bubble Party.

A tennis net is desirable for this amusement. The net may be decorated with flags or ribbons or colored paper, just to add to its gay appearance. Girls range themselves on one side of the net, boys on the other, or they may play as partners.

The hostess provides a bowl of soapy water, to which a tablespoonful of glycerin is added to contribute to the beauty of the prismatic colors, and clay pipes tied with ribbons, the color determining the sides.

The girls blow the bubbles, and the boys blow them over the net from their side to prevent the airy balls from floating into their domain. Each bubble that succeeds in floating over the net counts fifteen points for the side from which it came.

Competition may take other forms, as the largest bubble, the one retaining its form the longest or the longest chain of bubbles winning a prize. Ornamental pipes, fancy soap boxes filled with bonbons and similar trifles are suitable for prizes.

Great Shadows.

From the summit of Mount Diablo, in California, may be seen a curious phenomenon. Four times a year—once every three months—the sun rises at such an angle that a shadow over ten miles long is thrown on the plain beneath. The peak of Teneriffe projects a huge shadow, stretching upward of fifty miles across the deep and partly eclipsing the adjoining isles.

Placer Gold Is Plentiful at Shushanna, Says Geologist.

SKAGWAY, Alaska, Aug. 15.—(Can. Press.)—J. D. Hazen, minister of marine in the Canadian government, arrived from the interior yesterday and sailed south tonight. He has received the following telegram from George Black, governor of the Yukon territory at Dawson:

"Dr. Cairnes, Dominion geologist who has returned from White River and the Shushanna districts, reports that the new strike is undoubtedly rich. The known area is yet of necessity limited.

"Gold has been found on four creeks. The formation is good for the deposit of gold. The claims extend to the Canadian side. The Cairnes party staked claims. I have approved the customs proposal to expedite the movement of goods into the Shushanna where they are greatly needed. Strongly advise against men going in without supplies."

RENTING ROOMS

The total amount of rent money paid for furnished rooms in this city each week is enormous! Nobody knows how much. It goes to thrifty people, who like to lessen their own rent or living expense by sub-letting one or more spare rooms to an agreeable person. If YOU have a desirable extra room you can become a receiver of rent by ordering a "Furnished Room to Let" ad. in the Review. The cost is nominal—one cent a word for first insertion and half a cent a word for subsequent insertions, run consecutively.
